10. Take of them of the captivity, &c.] The exiles, who remained in Babylon, shewed their regard for the temple, then building, by sending their gifts and oblations to Jerusalem for carrying on the work, and adorning the temple after it was built. These offerings they sent by the persons here named, as they did afterwards by Ezra and his companions: see Ezra vii. 16; viii. 25, 26. W. Lonth.

11. Then take silver and gold, and make crowns, &c.] Rather, "Even take the silver and the gold, &c." A plate or crown of gold was an ornament placed upon the mitre of the high priest: see Exod. xxviii. 36; xxix. 6; Lev. viii. 9. Two such crowns are here ordered to be made, and to be placed upon the head of Joshua, to signify that the Messiah, "The BRANCH," spoken of in the next verse, of whom Joshua was a type, should be both a King and Priest, and so should have a right to wear the crowns belonging to those two offices. W. Lonth.

12. — Behold the man whose name is The BRANCH;] See in the person of Joshua the high priest, the type or representation of the Man, whose "name is the Christ that shall be revealed," as the Targum paraphrases the text. W. Lonth. There cannot be a doubt that the same Person is meant by "The BRANCH" here, who is so called chap. iii. 8; namely, the Messiah; of whom Joshua is made the type or representative by the crown placed on his head. The passage will not answer to any other but to Him, who was at once both King and Priest, and, by uniting both characters in Himself, was completely qualified to bring about "the counsel of peace," or reconciliation between God and man. Dr. Blayney.

—— he shall build the temple of the Lord:] The Church of Christ is expressly called "the temple of God," 1 Cor. iii. 16; 2 Cor. vi. 16; "a spiritual house," 1 Pet. ii. 5, &c. Dr. Blayney.

13. Even he shall build the temple of the Lord;] This clause is highly emphatical; implying that "even He," the self-same Person, who should build the temple of Jehovah, even He should have the honour of governing and presiding in it, as both King and Priest, in both capacities advancing the peace and prosperity of His people. Dr. Blayney.

—— and he shall bear the glory,] That is, the honour and authority, belonging to a sovereign or chief ruler. So when Moses was directed to give up his command and authority to Joshua, it is said, "And thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him," Numb. xxvii. 20. And in this sense Christ was to "receive glory;" see Ps. xxi. 5; Dan. vii. 14; Acts iii. 13; v. 31; Phil. ii. 6—11; Heb. ii. 9. He was to be exalted to the right hand of God, there to sit upon His throne as a King, governing His Church, and as a Priest, making intercession continually for it. It is impossible not to see, that this prophecy was completed in Christ, so as it never could be in any other person. Dr. Blayney.

—— and the counsel of peace shall be between them both.] The kingdom and priesthood being united in the same Person, there shall be no clashing of jurisdiction between the two offices. W. Lonth.

14. And the crowns shall be to Helem, &c.] And those crowns shall be kept and hanged up in the temple of the Lord, as a memorial and monument of the liberal offering, made by Helem, and Tobijah, &c; (Bp. Hall;) and of the use, for which they had been made. W. Lonth, Dr. Wells. If the crowns, after having been placed on the head of Joshua, were deposited in a conspicuous part of the temple, they would naturally remind the persons present of the prediction, which they would of course communicate to others. Dr. Blayney.

"Helem" was probably the same person as Heldai, and "Hen" as Josiah: such variety of names belonging to the same person may be often observed in the books of Kings and Chronicles. W. Lonth.

15. And they that are far off shall come &c.] This is a plain prediction of the coming in of the Gentiles, whom St. Paul expressly calls those "who were far off," Eph. ii. 13, to "build," or constitute a part of the Christian Church. Dr. Blayney.

—— And this shall come to pass, &c.] And ye of the Jewish nation shall be the first sharers in the benefits arising from Christ's kingdom and priesthood, and then those that are "far off," if you diligently listen to the voice of God, speaking to you both by His Prophets, and by His Son. W. Lowth.

Chap. VII. In this chapter is contained a third and distinct revelation made to Zechariah about two years after the former; of which the occasion and matter are as follows. A considerable progress having by this time been made in the rebuilding of the temple, and affairs going on pretty smoothly, the hopes of the Jewish nation began to revive, and a deputation was sent to inquire of the priests and the Prophets, whether it was God's will that they should still continue to observe the fast, which had been instituted on account of the city and the temple having been burnt by the Chaldeans. To this the Prophet is directed to reply, That this and another fast of the like kind, being of their own appointment, regarded themselves only, and not God; that what He required of them was the practice of moral righteousness, like as He had enjoined it to their fathers, who, disregarding His injunctions, had brought upon themselves and upon their country all the evil which they had recently experienced.

Having thus accounted for God's past severity, the Prophet in the following chapter goes on to inform them, that the anger of Jehovah was now appeased, and He was again disposed to be gracious unto His people, and to restore Jerusalem. He exhorts them therefore to proceed vigorously with the building of the temple, and assures them that they would from that instant experience a happy revolution in their affairs. He renews his exhortation to the practice of moral goodness, and promises them on that condition their fasts should be turned into joyful feasts; and they should be so distinguished by the Divine favour, that many nations would be eager to embrace their religion, and sue for their alliance. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — Chisleu;] This month corresponded with the latter part of November, and the beginning of December. Dr. Blayney.

5. — When ye fasted &c.] When ye fasted and mourned, both in the fifth month for the temple, and in the seventh for the murder of Gedaliah, 2 Kings xxv. 25, did ye do this, even all these seventy years, out of any charge of Mine? or did ye it out of any true remorse for those sins of yours, which drew down these judgments upon you; and not rather out of a sense of your own misery and sorrow? And, on the contrary, when, on your other solemn festivals, ye did eat and drink and make merry, was it out of any spiritual joy which ye had in Me and My service, and not rather for your own pleasure and jollity? Bp. Hall. The sense of these two verses is much the same with that of St. Paul, 1 Cor. viii. 8; namely, that eating or abstaining from meat is in its own nature indifferent; nor is it acceptable to God any further than it is subservient to the true ends of religion.

The Prophet first reproves the hypocrisy of their fasts, before he gives them a direct answer to the question proposed. This he does chap. viii. 19. W. Lowth.

7. Should ye not hear the words &c.] Or, "Are not these the words" as in the margin. He puts them in mind of the exhortations given to them by the Prophets before the captivity. W. Lowth. This may refer to the fifth and sixth verses: Did not the former Prophets make the like declarations, concerning the inefficacy of your external observances? see Isa. lviii. 6, &c. It may also refer to the ninth verse: And did not the former Prophets insist on the superiour excellence of moral duties? see Amos v. 24; Micah vi. 8, &c. Abp. Newcome.

—— the south and the plain?] See the note on Jer. xvii. 26.

9. — Execute true judgment, &c.] I have often admonished your fathers, that judgment and mercy were more acceptable to Me than fasting or any external performances, and I repeat the same admonition to you of the present age. W. Lowth.

12. — as an adamant stone,] Bochart shews, that this means a hard stone used to polish gems. Abp. Newcome.

3 Thus saith the LORD; I am returned unto Zion, and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and Jerusalem shall be called a city of truth; and the mountain of the LORD of hosts the holy mountain.

Before CHRIST 518.

9 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Let your hands be strong, ye that hear in these days these words by the mouth of the prophets, which were in the day that the foundation of the house of the LORD of hosts was laid, that the temple might be built.

10 For before these days ‖ there was no [b] hire for man, nor any hire for beast; neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in because of the affliction: for I set all men every one against his neighbour.

‖ Or, the hire of man-kind, &c. [b] Hag. 1. 6.

11 But now I will not be unto the residue of this people as in the former days, saith the LORD of hosts.

12 For the seed shall be †prosperous; the vine shall give her fruit, and the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things.

13 And it shall come to pass, that as ye were a curse among the heathen, O house of Judah, and house of Israel; so will I save you, and ye shall be a blessing: fear not, but let your hands be strong.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts; As I thought to punish you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith the LORD of hosts, and I repented not:

15 So again have I thought in these days to do well unto Jerusalem and to the house of Judah: fear ye not.

16 ¶ These are the things that ye shall

Chap. VIII. ver. 3. — a city of truth;] Jerusalem shall be again the seat of truth and justice, her magistrates being restored to execute their authority there. W. Lowth. Rather, "the city of the truth;" the truth, by way of eminence, or the true religion: so that Jerusalem was to be celebrated in future as the city in which the true religion particularly was professed, as "the mountain of the Lord of hosts," meaning the mountain of the temple was to be for the residence of the Most Holy One. Dr. Blayney.

4. — with his staff in his hand for very age.] A mode of expressing his being very old. Dr. Blayney.

6. — If it be marvellous &c.] And do not startle at it, saith the Lord of hosts; for though this may seem a strange and wonderful thing in the apprehension of this poor remnant of the people, that are now returned out of the land of their captivity; yet nothing should seem impossible to Me, saith the Lord of hosts. Dr. Sloker.

7. — Behold, I will save my people &c.] This denotes the general restoration of the Jewish nation from their several dispersions; compare verses 13, 20, 23; an event foretold by most of the Prophets of the Old Testament: see the note on Isa. xi. 11. "The west country" appears to have a particular relation to their present dispersion, great numbers of them being in these latter ages settled in the western parts of the world. See the notes on Isa. xxiv. 14, and Hos. xi. 10. W. Lowth. At the time of the delivery of this prophecy, there were very few or no Jews dispersed west of the Holy Land. Dr. Wells.

8. — in truth and in righteousness.] These words apply equally to God and His people; and imply, that they shall on both sides truly and faithfully perform the conditions of the covenant, once more renewed between them. Dr. Blayney.

9. — ye that hear in these days &c.] "These days" stand opposed to "the day that the foundation of the house of the Lord of hosts was laid," which was two years before. And the people are exhorted to proceed vigorously with the building, inasmuch as they now heard repeated by the mouth of the Prophets the same things which had prevailed on them at first to engage in it. Dr. Blayney.

10. — there was no hire for man,] Rather, "there was no reward for man, &c." The fruits of the earth would not pay the labour of those who manured it. See Hag. i. 9—11; ii. 16, 17. W. Lowth.

—— neither was there any peace &c.] The adversaries of the Jews ceased not to molest them from without, Ezra iv. 1, &c; and civil dissensions, it seems, prevailed within. Dr. Blayney.

13. — O house of Judah, and house of Israel;] The mention both of Judah and of Israel, which had been so long separated, shews that both the curse and the blessing, here spoken of, in the ultimate sense of the prophecy, belong to the whole body of the Jews. W. Lowth.

16. These are the things that ye shall do; &c.] The promises here made to the Jews are conditional, and the performance of them is made to depend upon their observing the rules of justice and righteousness, which God commanded their fathers by the Prophets, as "the weightier matters of the law," and now again enjoined upon them. See chap. vii. 9, 10. W. Lowth.

19. — The fast of the fourth month, &c.] Besides the two fasts mentioned, chap. vii. 5, the Jews observed two others; that of the fourth month, when Jerusalem was taken, Jer. lii. 6, 7; and that of the tenth month, when the Babylonians began the siege, Jer. lii. 4. In answer to the question proposed, chap. vii. 3, the Prophet here tells them, that they may now disuse these fasts, and lay aside the mournful circumstances, with which they were solemnized; since the judgments which occasioned them were removed. W. Lowth.

—— therefore love the truth and peace.] God values an upright conversation more than the exactest care of outward performances: see ver. 16; and the note on chap. vii. 9. These instructions prepared men's minds for receiving the Gospel, the laws of which chiefly recommend purity of heart and life: see Jer. xxxi. 33. W. Lowth.

21. And the inhabitants of one city shall go &c.] These expressions allude to the Jews going up in companies to Jerusalem at their solemn feasts. Compare Isa. ii. 2, 3; Micah iv. 1, 2. W. Lowth.

23. — ten men] A certain number for an uncertain. See the last note on Mic. v. 5. W. Lowth.

—— shall take hold of the skirt] Mr. Harmer, having observed that it was customary in the East to kiss the hem of the garment of a person of rank, and especially when a favour was asked or granted, adds, that "ten men taking hold of the skirt of a Jew" is to be understood as an application of the most submissive kind, to be taken under his protection, or received among his dependents. That it was a mode of humble solicitation is evident from 1 Sam. xv. 27: and like that of embracing the knees, and laying hold on the feet, it was the natural gesture of an importunate suitor, who would seem to say thereby, "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me." Dr. Blayney.

This and the three foregoing verses refer in some measure to the great accession of converts, which the Jewish church received between the captivity and the coming of Christ; but principally to the number of Christian disciples, which the Jewish preachers made; and perhaps to the future conversions, of which the restoration of the Jews will be an eminent cause. Abp. Newcome.

Chap. IX. This chapter begins with announcing the fate of the Syrians, Sidonians, and Philistines, contrasted with the better prospects of the Jewish nation. It foretells the coming of the Messiah to Jerusalem, and the peace of His kingdom. The restoration of Israel and Judah is afterwards predicted, together with a series of glorious victories and great prosperity, which are set forth at large in this and the next chapter. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. The burden of the word of the Lord in the land of Hadrach,] "The burden of the word of the Lord" is a burdensome prophecy, threatening ruin and destruction: see Jer. xxiii. 33; Nahum i. 1. Hadrach is not elsewhere mentioned as the name of a country: the context shews it to be some part of Syria. W. Lowth.

—— and Damascus shall be the rest thereof:] God's anger rests on those whom He punishes, Ezek. v. 13; xvi. 42; xxiv. 13. And His rod or His arm rests upon His enemies, Ps. cxxv. 3; Is. xxx. 32. Abp. Newcome. The land of Hadrach and Damascus is here said to be the place, on which "the burden" or calamity was to "rest" or settle; that is, the land would still continue to be visited by the like calamities as it had before undergone, first under Tiglath-pileser, as prophesied by Isaiah, chap. xvii, and Amos, chap. i. 3—5; and again under Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. xlix. 23. Dr. Blayney.

—— when the eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the Lord.] This plainly implies, that a time would come, when men, and the tribes of Israel in particular, should turn their eyes towards Jehovah, and look up to Him, either in hopes of deriving some blessing from Him, or in gratitude for mercies received. But the scope of the prophecy goes to shew, that even at that time those devoted nations had no prospect of emerging; "the burden" would still "rest" or settle upon them. Dr. Blayney.

2, 3. And Hamath also shall border thereby; &c.] Neither shall Hamath be freed therefrom: nor Tyrus, and Zidon, though they be crafty and subtle enough, to use all human power and wit for their own safety and evasion; and though Tyrus have built strong holds for her defence, and have heaped up great treasures of wealth. Bp. Hall.

3. — and heaped up silver as the dust, &c.] Tyre was the most celebrated place in the world for trade and riches, "the mart of nations," conveying the commodities of the East to the West, and of the West to the East. Bp. Newton.

4. Behold, the Lord will cast her out, &c.] Ezekiel had likewise foretold that the city should be consumed by fire, chap. xxviii. 18. And accordingly Alexander besieged, and took, and set the city on fire. The ruins of old Tyre contributed much to the taking of the new city: for with the stones and timber and rubbish of the old city Alexander built a bank or causey from the continent to the island, thereby literally fulfilling the words of Ezekiel, "they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust in the midst of the water," chap. xxvi. 12. Bp. Newton.

5. Ashkelon shall see it, &c.] The cities of the Philistines, Ashkelon, Gaza, and Ekron, shall be very much terrified at the news of Tyre's destruction, whence they hoped for succours against the enemy. W. Lowth.

—— the king shall perish from Gaza,] By the title of "king" any chief ruler may be designed; so that the plain purport of the passage is, that Gaza should cease to enjoy the benefit of civil government. Accordingly Gaza, having suffered severely on being taken by Alexander the Great, was at length totally ruined and destroyed by Alexander Jannæus, one of the Asmonæan kings of Judea: so that we find it spoken of in Acts viii. 26, by the name of "Gaza, which is desert." Dr. Blayney.

—— Ashkelon shall not be inhabited.] Ashkelon and the other cities of the Philistines having been subjugated by Nebuchadnezzar, as foretold by Jeremiah, chap. xlvii, never recovered their former independency; but, falling under the dominion of the great empires in succession, were almost continually involved in their wars, and suffered considerably, till by degrees they dwindled away, and at last sunk to nothing. Zephaniah's prophecy, chap. ii. 4—7, extends to this. Dr. Blayney.

6. And a bastard shall dwell in Ashdod, &c.] The word, rendered "bastard," does not here imply an illegitimate offspring, but simply one of foreign extraction. So that it is meant, that the city should be peopled with strangers, not descended from its present possessors. Ashdod, or Azotus, was burned and destroyed by Jonathan, brother of Judas Maccabeus, and eight thousand of its men burned or slain, 1 Mac. x. 84, 85. These were probably what was meant by "the pride of the Philistines," the prime or excellency of the ancient inhabitants, in whose room the strangers were introduced. Dr. Blayney.

7. And I will take away his blood out of his mouth, &c.] The idolatrous and abominable practices of the Philistines shall cease. The metaphor is taken from beasts of prey, who gorge themselves with blood. Abp. Newcome.

At what time or whence the new colony was brought to dwell in Ashdod, we are not informed. But some years after, in the reign of Alexander Jannæus, Azotus is enumerated by Josephus among the cities of the Phenicians, which the Jews had been some time possessed of: and it is well known, that that people exacted of all that were under their dominion a conformity, to a certain degree at least, to their religious rites and usages. This will serve to explain what is here meant by "taking his blood out of his mouth, and his abominations from between his teeth." The stranger was required to abstain from eating blood, and from such things as were held in abomination by the Jewish law. Dr. Blayney.

—— but he that remaineth, even he, shall be for our God, &c.] Those that remain of them shall be conscientiously devoted to God; and shall become friends and patrons of My people within My Church; yea, even those of Ekron shall so have a part in My Church, as the Jebusite hath in the material and outward Jerusalem. Bp. Hall.

To be "as a governour in Judah" means to be regarded and honoured. The Jebusites were inhabitants of Jerusalem, Judges i. 21. Josephus informs us, that many of the Philistines became proselytes to Judaism, and particularly the cities of Gaza and Ashdod. Abp. Newcome.

8. And I will encamp about mine house &c.] Amid the foregoing revolutions and alterations of affairs in the world, God here promises to preserve His temple, while so many castles and strong holds about Jerusalem were overturned, so many cities swept of their inhabitants by the besom of destruction. Bp. Horne.

—— for now have I seen with mine eyes.] Mine eye has pervaded future events, and I have thus determined. Abp. Newcome. Or, I have looked on the condition of My people with an eye of pity and compassion. W. Lowth.

9. Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; &c.] From the promise contained in the foregoing verse, of God's protecting His Church and temple, the Prophet in a sudden transport takes occasion to break forth into a joyful representation of the coming of the Messiah. W. Lowth. With reference to this event the passage is cited in two places of the New Testament, Matt. xxi. 5; John xii. 15: so that we can have no doubt of the application. Dr. Blayney.

Beautiful and striking is the manner, in which this prophecy is introduced. The Prophet does not coldly inform Jerusalem, that her King should come to her, and that, when He did come, she ought to rejoice. Rapt into future times, he seems to have been present at the glorious scene. Standing upon mount Olivet, he hears the hosannas of the disciples, and beholds the procession approach towards the gates of Jerusalem: he turns himself to the city, and breaks forth in transport, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem." Bp. Horne.

—— behold, thy King cometh unto thee:] These words assign the reason, why Jerusalem was called on to rejoice; namely, the approach of her King: "behold, thy King cometh unto thee." A Person was to visit Jerusalem, who should deserve to be emphatically styled her "King." The nations had their kings and conquerors, their Nebuchadnezzars and Cyrus's, their Alexanders and Cesars: these appeared in their turns upon the stage, contending for the empire of the world. Each performed the part assigned him by an all-directing Providence, and then vanished away. Zion beheld all these changes, and still survived the commotions occasioned by them. The Prophets had promised her a King, who should overcome her enemies, and triumph gloriously; who should erect, in the time of the fourth great monarchy, an universal and everlasting kingdom, and give laws to the world; nay, who should govern all things in heaven and earth. Bp. Horne.

He, that is so often described in the Prophets as King of Israel, (see Ps. ii. 6; Jer. xxiii. 5,) was known by that name among the Jews in our Saviour's time, (see John i. 49.) and called elsewhere by the name of "David their King." Jer. xxx. 9; Hos. iii. 5. W. Lowth.

—— he is just, and having salvation; lowly, &c.] Righteousness, salvation, and humility, were to distinguish the person and reign of the Messiah. Righteousness leads the way: "He is just" or righteous. St. Stephen affirms the Prophets to have foreshewn the coming of Jesus under the title of "the Just One," Acts vii. 52. See Ps. xlv. 4; Jer. xxiii. 6: and compare Matt. xxvii. 4, 19; Luke xxiii. 4, 47. Salvation is the next sign or token of the King of Zion. "He is just, and having salvation." He was to execute that part of the regal office, which consisted in rescuing a people from their oppressors. The history of Israel contains an account of many "saviours," raised up at sundry times for this purpose. Such were Moses, Barak, Gideon, Sampson, and many more in the ages after them. But the deliverances, effected by any of these, were not to be mentioned, unless as shadows and faint resemblances of that grand and complete salvation, which the promised Saviour should accomplish. See Luke ii. 11; Matt. i. 21. The Messiah was to be distinguished from all other kings and conquerors by His appearance likewise and demeanour. He was to visit His people in great humility, "lowly, and riding upon an ass." Though God, He was to become man: see Is. vii. 14; Matt. i. 23. He was to be "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief:" see Is. liii. 14, and the whole of the fifty-third chapter, especially ver. 3. He was to keep the law, and to die for sin; see Ps. xl. 7; Heb. x. 7. From all which passages it is plain, that Messiah was to be an humble and a suffering character. The types and the prophecies are as plain for His humiliation, as they are for His exaltation: nor could any one person accomplish them all, without being equally remarkable for lowliness and meekness, glory and honour. Bp. Horne.

—— riding upon an ass, and upon a colt &c.] Or, "even upon a colt &c." See John xii. 14; Luke xix. 30. A proof of lowliness, and that He did not affect the pomp of the world, but came with the same primitive simplicity as the patriarchs and judges used of old. See Gen. xxii. 3; Judges v. 10; x. 4. W. Lowth, Bp. Chandler.

The character given of the Messiah, that He should ride on an ass, was in opposition to the pride of the warlike kings of Israel, who, by their great strength in chariots and horses, had ruined themselves and their people. And herein He was to resemble those, who had indeed been deliverers of their country; kings, who feared God, and therefore feared no enemy; who, though mounted on asses, and colts the foals of asses, were able to put to flight the thousands of ten thousands of chariots and horses that came against them. Bp. Sherlock.

The ancient Jews explained this prophecy of the Messiah; and it is plain from the Gospels, that the Jews in Christ's time understood it so, Matt. xxi. 8, 9; Luke xix. 37, 38; Mark xi. 10. Bp. Chandler, W. Lowth.

10. And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, &c.] Ephraim and Judah shall not engage in war to spread the Messiah's kingdom, but their spiritual King shall peaceably convert Gentiles, and shall extend His dominion every where. Abp. Newcome.

In the state of meekness and lowliness, before described, Christ was to gain a complete victory over the enemies of man's salvation. The warfare was new, and it is no wonder that the weapons employed in it should be uncommon. Other warriours prepare their horses and their chariots, their bows, their spears, and their shields. But Messiah disarms His followers, in order that they may overcome. No plainer declaration could have been made, that the conquests of Messiah were not to be of a secular nature; that His kingdom was not of this world. See John xviii. 36. Bp. Horne.

—— and he shall speak peace unto the heathen;] As well as to His own people the Jews. Accordingly, when the Prince of Peace came to make His abode amongst us, the angelick choir descended to sing "Peace on earth;" peace with God, by the pardon of sin; peace with ourselves, by the answer of a clear conscience; peace with one another, by mutual charity. And who would not wish to see, who would not labour to promote, the full accomplishment of the last clause of the prophecy, in the extension of this kingdom and dominion of Christ "from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth;" that so all the nations of the world might remember themselves, and turn to the Lord Jesus, as many did at the first preaching of His Gospel! Bp. Horne.

This prophecy, together with those of Hosea, chap. ii. 18, Micah v. 5, 10, Haggai ii. 22, as they foretell the outward peaceableness of Christ's Church or kingdom, relate to the flourishing state of it in the latter times of the world. The words which denote the extent of that kingdom, "His dominion shall be from sea &c," are taken from Ps. lxxii. 8, where David describes the extent of Solomon's kingdom, from the Red sea to the Mediterranean, and from the river Euphrates to the border of Egypt: compare Exod. xxiii. 31; 1 Kings iv. 21; Deut. xi. 24. This, as appears from several expressions in that Psalm, was a figurative description of Christ's kingdom, which should be enlarged towards the four quarters of the world. W. Lowth.

11. — by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit &c.] As for thee, O Zion, whose covenant with Me is made and confirmed by the precious blood of the Messiah, in that new and everlasting testament, I do herein give thee a type of thy future deliverance from all thy spiritual miseries. Bp. Hall. Anciently in great houses, and particularly in the East, deep dry pits, called dungeons, were appropriated for the confinement of prisoners. Into one of these Jeremiah was cast, Jer. xxxviii. 6. Dr. Blayney.

12. Turn you to the strong hold,] Repent, and apply yourselves unto God, your only help and refuge, you that are such prisoners, as are not without a good hope and modest assurance of Divine succour and relief. Dr. Stokes. "The strong hold," namely Christ, who is the salvation and high tower of His Church. Poole.

—— that I will render double unto thee;] That I will make you abundant amends for all the evils ye have suffered: compare Isa. lxi. 7. The words appear to allude to Job xlii. 10. W. Lowth.

13. When I have bent Judah for me, filled the bow with Ephraim,] When I have made Judah My bow, and Ephraim My arrow: in the Hebrew phrase the bow is said to be "filled" with the arrow, when the arrow is fitted to it. W. Lowth.

—— and raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece,] The passage may be understood with a spiritual application thus: To make way for the establishment of Messiah's kingdom by the publick preaching of the Gospel, and for subduing the nations to My spiritual dominion, I will pick out My first champions from among you of Judah: so that Judah shall be like My bow that I bend, and make ready against My enemies; and Ephraim like

14. And the Lord shall be seen over them, &c.] He shall give good proof of His gracious protection of them, and shall manifestly shew that He fighteth for them from heaven. Bp. Hall.

—— with whirlwinds of the south.] With violent tempests, according to the nature of the south wind in the East. See Job xxxvii. 9; Isa. xxi. 1. The images in this verse are very sublime. Abp. Newcome.

15. — they shall drink, &c.] Their courage shall be increased, as when men's spirits are raised by wine; see Ps. lxxviii. 65; and they shall be filled with the blood of their enemies, as the bowls and corners of the altar are with the blood of sacrifices. W. Lowth. The blood of the sacrificed beasts was part of it received in bowls for the purpose of sprinkling, and the rest poured out at the foot of the altar, Lev. iv. 5—7. Dr. Blayney. This may be a figurative expression of a conquest, to be here understood of a spiritual warfare. Dr. Stokes.

16. — they shall be as the stones of a crown, &c.] They shall be advanced to honour, as the precious stones of a royal crown, or as an ensign, which is lifted up with honour over the heads of the people. Bp. Hall.

17. For how great is his goodness, and how great is his beauty!] How great is the blessing, how great is the beauty, wherewith God shall, upon those victories, grace and adorn His people! Bp. Hall.

—— corn shall make the young men chearful, &c.] The sense is, that by the Divine blessing the young men, who reap the corn, and the maidens, who gather in the vintage, shall both thrive in their respective occupations. Dr. Blayney. Victory is promised in the preceding verse, and fruitful seasons in this. Abp. Newcome. Or probably the expressions are figurative, and imply, that the soldiers in these spiritual combats foretold shall have such joy as the young men use to express at a plentiful harvest, and the young maidens at the end of a happy vintage. Dr. Stokes.

Chap. X. This chapter is a continuation of the prophecy begun in the preceding one, and goes on with a representation of the future prosperities of Judah and Israel, in consequence of the recovery of God's favour. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. Ask ye of the Lord rain &c.] The promise of future plenty suggests the mention of the means by which it might then be procured; namely, supplication to Jehovah, and not to idols. Abp. Newcome.

—— make bright clouds,] Or "lightnings," as in the margin, and in Job xxviii. 26. Great rains usually accompany thunder and lightning: see Jer. x. 13. W. Lowth.

2. For the idols have spoken vanity, &c.] That is, by the answers which the priests gave in their name: for elsewhere they are called "dumb idols," Hab. ii. 18, "which have mouths, but speak not," Ps. cxv. 5. W. Lowth.

—— therefore they went their way as a flock,] Therefore both they and you were driven into captivity, as sheep are driven away and scattered, without a shepherd to guide or protect them. Compare Jer. l. 17; Ezek. xxxiv. 5. Bp. Hall, W. Lowth.

3. — the goats:] "The shepherds" are the wicked kings and princes: "the goats," the wicked common Jews. Dr. Hall. "Goats," rather than sheep, which led My people out of their way. Bp. Hall.

—— for the Lord of hosts hath visited &c.] Rather, "but the Lord of hosts &c." But now hath God given His people manifest tokens of His favour and protection. W. Lowth. But Jehovah of hosts is about to visit His flock, &c. Dr. Blayney.

—— as his goodly horse in the battle.] See Job's fine description of the war-horse, chap. xxxix. 19—25, whose courage and strength are there displayed, as setting forth the glorious perfections of his Maker. Such, it is said, God would make the house of Judah to be, furnished with every requisite for obtaining military success. Dr. Blayney.

4. Out of him came forth] Or, "shall come forth." W. Lowth. "Him," that is, Judah. Abp. Newcome.

—— the corner,] Or chief. A community is often represented as an edifice, or building: and the corresponding parts expressed by the same name. Hence as the largest stones or timbers are used in the angles to bind together and strengthen the sides of the building, which meet therein, as in a common centre; so the angle or corner metaphorically denotes the chief personage in a community, on whom its strength and security principally depends. Dr. Blayney.

—— the nail.] As a nail is used to fasten the timbers or parts of a building together, it may serve to denote the officers next in command under the chief, by whose means the common soldiers are united and kept steady and in regular order. "The battle bow" means the archers in an army. Dr. Blayney.

—— every oppressor] Rather, "every ruler:" the original word is used in a good sense, Isa. lx. 17. The meaning is, Judah shall furnish both civil and military governours. Abp. Newcome.

9. — I will hiss for them,] I will summon them from distant countries by a certain signal, as a shepherd calls his flock together with his whistle: compare Isa. v. 26; vii. 18. W. Lowth.

— as they have increased.] In the most flourishing times, such as the reigns of David and Solomon. W. Lowth.

10. I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt, &c.] The Prophets, when they foretell the general restoration of their nation, often express it by their returning from Egypt and Assyria. See Isa. xi. 16, 16; xix. 23—25; xxvii. 13; Hos. xi. 11. W. Lowth. Compare Isa. xi. 11. It is probable the same restoration is intended in both places. And it is the opinion of both the Lowths, that Isaiah's prophecy is one that remains yet to be accomplished. Dr. Blayney.

— and place shall not be found for them.] They shall multiply so fast, that there shall not be room enough in Judea to receive them and their families. Compare Isa. xlix. 20. W. Lowth.

11. And he shall pass through the sea with affliction,] The allusion, both in this prophecy and in that referred to in Isaiah, is to the passage of the Israelites through the Red sea, and over Jordan, when they came out of Egypt: by which is implied at least, that God would interpose with a no less miraculous exertion of power for the future restoration of His people. Dr. Blayney.

— and the pride of Assyria shall be brought down, &c.] By Assyria and Egypt are meant in general the enemies of God and of His truth, who shall all be subdued and broken in pieces by the kingdom of Christ. W. Lowth.

12. — they shall walk up and down in his name,] Or, "walk in His name;" that is, their lives and actions shall be under the direction of His laws, and He shall give them success, answerable to their upright intentions. W. Lowth.

Chap. XI. This chapter contains a prophecy of a very different cast from the foregoing. The people would not always behave as they ought, and therefore would not always be prosperous. Before their final glorious restoration, an event of a most calamitous nature was doomed to take place; the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem, which is plainly here foretold, and ascribed to its proper cause, punishment for notorious wickedness.

The flock, meaning God's people, were under the guidance of corrupt and unprincipled pastors, who sacrificed them to their lucrative and ambitious views. The Prophet by God's command assumes for a while the direction of them, therein becoming a type of Christ, the good Shepherd; but is soon obliged to resign His charge, with mutual dissatisfaction on both sides. He receives thirty pieces of silver, as the reward for his services, and casts them by Divine direction to the potter. After this the Prophet is held forth as the type of a worthless shepherd, or a succession of evil governours, who, heedless of the flock, or seeking only to oppress it, at once ruin the flock, and bring destruction on themselves. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. Open thy doors, O Lebanon,] By Lebanon most interpreters understand the temple, whose stately buildings resembled the tall cedars of the forest. The words may likewise denote the destruction of Jerusalem, elsewhere called by the name of a forest. Compare Jer. xxi. 14; xx. 7, 23; Ezek. xx. 46. W. Lowth.

2. — the mighty] That is, trees. The original word is applied to cedars and vines, Ezek. xvii. 8, 23. Under these images the fall of mighty men and the subversion of the Jewish polity are represented. Abp. Newcome.

— the forest of the vintage] Probably Carmel, (see the note on 2 Kings xix. 23,) which being in the north west of Judea, and here joined with Bashan, in the south east, may denote that the calamity should be general. Bashan was famous for its stately oaks; see Is. ii. 13. Or, instead of "the forest of the vintage," we may read, as in the margin, "the defenced forest," which gives a good representation of Jerusalem with its fortifications. W. Lowth.

3. — shepherds; — glory] By "shepherds" are to be understood the rulers of the people; and "their glory" denotes their stately habitations. Dr. Blayney.

— the pride of Jordan] By "the pride of Jordan" those woods and thickets are primarily intended, which rise proudly above the banks of that river, and greatly decorate the scene. But here, in a secondary and metaphorical sense, they are put for the residences of those princes and grandees, who too often like lions devour and oppress the people under them. Dr. Blayney.

4. — Feed the flock of the slaughter;] The actions of the Prophets are sometimes typical; that is, they represent in themselves

Before CHRIST about 587.

5 Whose possessors slay them, and hold themselves not guilty: and they that sell them say, Blessed be the LORD; for I am rich: and their own shepherds pity them not.

the persons and circumstances of others. See note on chap. iii. 8. So here Zechariah was commanded by God to act the part of Christ, and to "feed the flock of the slaughter," that flock which their shepherds destroyed instead of feeding them. Bp. Chandler, W. Louth.

5. — they that sell them say, Blessed be the Lord; &c.] Those, who in effect sell them to their conquerors, regard nothing but their own immediate advantage. Abp. Newcome.

6. For I will no more pity &c.] This verse assigns the reason for calling the people "the flock of the slaughter." Nor can words more aptly describe the calamities which befell the Jews, in the war, which ended in the taking of Jerusalem by the Romans; when the people, having first by their intestine broils destroyed one another, as is set forth at large by Josephus, at length fell into the hands of him, whose predecessor they had owned for their sovereign, "We have no king but Cesar," John xix. 15, at the same time that they disclaimed their Messiah; and who completely desolated the land for their rebellion against him. Dr. Blayney, W. Louth.

7. And I will feed the flock of slaughter, &c.] Zechariah, representing the Person of Christ, the true Shepherd, says, He entered upon His office, and undertook the care of the flock, chiefly out of regard to the meek and humble among them. W. Lorth.

—— I took unto me two staves;] A staff or crook is the proper ensign of a shepherd: the shepherds of old time had two rods or staves; one turned round at top, that it might not hurt the sheep; this was for counting them, and separating the sound from the diseased; see Lev. xxvii. 32: the other had an iron hook at the end of it, to pull in the stray sheep, and hold them fast. The Psalmist mentions both these, Ps. xxiii. 4. W. Lorth. These "staves" or crooks the Prophet assumed as a badge of his office; and gave them significant names, which are explained ver. 10, 14. Dr. Blayney.

—— Beauty, — Bands;] The one, which I called "Beauty," was the staff of mercy, and gracious and pleasurable protection; the other, which I called "Bands," was the staff of unity for the conjoining of My Church, or of correction and just censure of the offenders. Bp. Hall.

8. Three shepherds also I cut off in one month;] Their kings, their priests, and their prophets. Dr. Stokes. We may probably explain these "three shepherds," of the chief priests, scribes, and elders of the Jews. Christ exposed these as blind guides, and thereby lessened their authority among the people. "One month" seems a proverbial expression for a short time; see Hos. v. 7. W. Lorth.

9. Then said I, I will not feed you: &c.] When Christ found a great part of His sheep proving untractable, He resolved to be their shepherd no longer, but to leave them to be consumed by the common calamities of death, famine, &c; or to be cut off by their enemies, the Romans; or to destroy one another by their civil discords. See ver. 6. W. Lorth.

11. — and so the poor of the flock that waited upon me knew &c.] The few believing Jews, the meek and humble, who conscientiously waited on me, were convinced, that this was agreeable to the will and pleasure of God. Bp. Hall, W. Lorth.

12. — If ye think good, give me my price; &c.] This being left to their discretion, was rated by them at thirty pieces of silver, supposed shekels, of the value of two shillings and fourpence each. This was the price of a slave, Exod. xxi. 32; and was meant to shew how little they cared for him or his service. Abp. Newcome, Dr. Blayney, W. Lorth.

13. And the Lord said unto me,] The Lord, who said this, could be no other but the Lord Christ. There are many such places, where Christ spoke as plainly by the Prophets in the Old Testament, as ever He did with His own mouth in the New. And it was He, whom this and all the Prophets mean, when they say, "Thus saith the Lord." Bp. Beveridge.

—— Cast it unto the potter:] As a reward only suitable to his labour, and a price only fit for such wares as he sold, which were of the meanest value: see Lam. iv. 2. W. Lorth.

—— a goodly price] He means ironically that it was a pitiful price, that he and his care were valued at. Dr. Wells.

—— And I took the thirty pieces of silver, &c.] I cast them back into the treasury in the temple, where afterwards they were laid out for the purchase of the potter's field.

This whole transaction, performed by Zechariah in a vision, was designed to be an exact representation of the several circumstances, that attended the betraying of the Messiah by Judas; the price put upon Him by the chief priests, to whom, as the governours of the temple, the money was returned; and the use to which the money was applied: see Matt. xxvii. 6, 10. The Jews themselves have expounded this prophecy of the Messiah. W. Lorth.

14. Then I cut asunder mine other staff, even Bands,] As they refused to be united under me their head, so in breaking my other staff I foreshewed the destruction of Jerusalem, the bond and cement of all their tribes, being the seat and centre both of their civil power, and of the Divine worship: see Ps. cxxii. 3—5. The consequence was, the entire dissolution of the nation, and the dispersion and confusion of all their tribes, whose families could no longer be distinguished after the loss of their genealogies. W. Lorth.

1 Jerusalem a cup of trembling to herself, 3 and a burdensome stone to her adversaries. 6 The victorious restoring of Judah. 9 The repentance of Jerusalem.

3 And in that day will I make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all people: all that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces, though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it.

4 In that day, saith the LORD, I will smite every horse with astonishment, and his rider with madness: and I will open mine eyes upon the house of Judah, and will smite every horse of the people with blindness.

5 And the governors of Judah shall say in their heart, ‖ The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the LORD of hosts their God.

‖ Or, There is strength to me and to the inhabitants, &c.

6 In that day will I make the governors of Judah like an hearth of fire among the wood, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf; and they shall devour all the people round about, on the right hand and on the left: and Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem.

7 The LORD also shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not magnify themselves against Judah.

15. — Take unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish shepherd.] The Prophet, having hitherto represented the good shepherd, is now directed to assume the dress and equipage of one of a contrary character. In Scripture language "foolish" and wicked are synonymous; for wickedness is folly in the extreme. The instruments of such a shepherd must be suitable to his character: such as a crook made to push and hurt the flock, not to protect or defend them. Dr. Blayney, W. Lowth.

16. — a shepherd] A shepherd in the singular number denotes a succession of such governours, as are described in the following words. W. Lowth.

—— tear their claws in pieces.] The foolish shepherd, instead of being tender and gentle with his flock, is supposed to drag them about with his iron crook, or to overdrive them in rough and stony ground, so as to break their hoofs. Dr. Blayney.

17. Woe to the idol shepherd] Who takes no care of the flock. Such a shepherd is no better than an "idol that is profitable for nothing," Isa. xliv. 10. W. Lowth.

—— the sword shall be upon his arm, &c.] The purport of the passage is, that since, through the misapplication of his power and his understanding, signified by his "arm" and his "right eye," the flock are subjected to desolation or the sword; therefore, as of strict justice, he shall be punished with a deprivation at least of those faculties, which he so fatally misused. Dr. Blayney, W. Lowth.

Chap. XII. This and the two following chapters contain prophecies, which relate entirely to the circumstances of the Christian dispensation. They begin with the assurance of some final victories to be obtained over the enemies of Jerusalem, ver. 1—9, compared with Ezek. xxxviii, xxxix; and Rev. xx. 9: they describe the restoration of the Jews, their conversion and bitter compunction for having pierced the Messiah, ver. 10; their admission by baptism to the privileges of the Gospel covenant, chap. xiii. 1; and their deliverance from the delusions of false prophets. The Prophet then reverts to foreshew the dispersion of Christ's disciples, chap. xiii. 7, compared with Matt. xxvi. 31, and Mark xiv. 27; and the preservation of a small remainder of His converts, whose faith should be tried in affliction. In the last chapter he represents the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans under Vespasian, chap. xiv. 1, 2; the subsequent discomfiture of its enemies, ver. 3; and the final and triumphant establishment of Christ's righteous kingdom, who should be King over the whole earth. Dr. Gray.

Ver. 2. — a cup of trembling] The nations, that besiege Jerusalem, shall be in the same condition as those that are overcome by intoxicating liquors, and thereby bereaved of their strength and understanding. Compare Is. li. 17, 22. W. Lowth.

3. — a burdensome stone] Jerusalem is here compared to a stone of great weight, which, being too heavy for those who attempt to lift it up or remove it, falls back upon them, and crushes them to pieces. St. Jerome, by way of explication, describes an exercise common, he says, "throughout Palestine and all Judea in his days, where the young men, who were ambitious to give proof of their strength, used to lift up stones of enormous weight, some as high as their knees, others to their navel, their shoulders, and their heads; and some placed them on the top of their head, with their hands erect and joined together." Mr. Lowth, by whom this passage of St. Jerome is cited, remarks, that to the same sense Christ saith, "on whomsoever this stone shall fall, it will grind him to powder," Matt. xxi. 44. Dr. Blayney.

4. — I will open mine eyes upon the house of Judah.] I will look down graciously upon My people. Bp. Hall.

6. — like an hearth of fire among the wood,] As coals on the hearth, while their enemies are as a fagot laid upon it. Bp. Hall.

7. The Lord also shall save the tents of Judah first.] Or, "as" He ever did "from the beginning:" that is, by Himself and His own power and wisdom, that the honour may be His own, and man may have no part in it. Dr. Stokes.

—— against Judah.] Or for the protection of the people of Judah, as if it were to be ascribed to them. Dr. Stokes.

1 The fountain of purgation for Jerusalem, 2 from idolatry, and false prophecy. 7 The death of Christ, and the trial of a third part.

10. And I will pour upon the house of David, &c.] And I will pour out upon My Church, beginning at Jerusalem and Zion, a great and apparent measure of My Spirit; and, besides those common gifts, I will endue them with the sanctifying graces of My Spirit, and with the spirit of prayer and supplication: and they shall by a lively faith look up to Me their Saviour and Redeemer, whom they have pierced upon the cross: and they shall mourn for that violence, which was offered to the Lord of life, dying for them, even as one mourneth for his only son, &c. Bp. Hall.

The Jews themselves have applied this text to the Messiah. David before described His sufferings under the figure of "piercing His hands and His feet," Ps. xxii. 16; and Isaiah foretold He should be "wounded for our transgressions," chap. liii. 5. W. Lowth.

—— they shall look upon me whom they have pierced.] St. John plainly quotes these words, chap. xix. 37, and applies them to our blessed Saviour, of whom alone they can be understood, for none could speak them but One who was both God and Man. That He was God, is plain from the former part of the verse, "I will pour upon the house of David, — the spirit of grace and of supplications:" for the spirit of grace is not at the disposal of any creature, and it is only in the power of God to bestow it. That He was Man, appears from the following words, "Me whom they have pierced:" for if He had not been Man, He would not have been capable of being pierced by them. These words therefore were spoken by Christ, the only Person in the world that ever was or pretended to be both God and Man. Bp. Beveridge.

By the wonderful preservation of this one and only people, distinct from all others for so many ages, Providence hath left room for the season here foretold, when, by "looking on Him whom they have pierced, and mourning," they shall rise again, and be as "life from the dead," Rom. xi. 15. Abp. Secker.

—— they shall mourn for him,] The Jews sinned in killing the Messiah, for which reason God removed them out of their land. He will not resettle them in it, till they shall have repented of their sin. They have been in their present dispersion above 1700 years. Their sins have not been greater in this dispersion, than before, and under, the Babylonian. They are less by the sin of idolatry. Yet then, on a repentance superficial enough, after seventy years God restored them to their land. Now thongh they fast and mourn, and shew all the external tokens of universal repentance, God will not be propitiated. Doth not God's inexorable severity shew clearly some sin is still unrepented of? What can it be, so big with evils, so extensive in its consequences? They cannot say; but Zechariah saith it for them. It is the piercing to death of Him whom God favoured: and this sin, and this punishment, will not be removed, without an antecedent, general, and deep repentance. Bp. Chandler.

11. — the mourning of Hadadrimmon] Most probably the general mourning for the death of the good king Josiah, who was slain in the valley of Megiddo, 2 Kings xxiii. 29; 2 Chron. xxxv. 22—24. Hadadrimmon is said by St. Jerome to have been a place near Jezreel. The mourning for Josiah became a proverb for a publick and solemn lamentation. Such a national humiliation, it is here said, shall the Jews observe for having crucified the Messiah. Dr. Blayney, W. Lowth.

12. And the land shall mourn, every family apart; &c.] The whole land shall mourn in the most solemn manner; the inhabitants secluding themselves from all social and domestick intercourse, as in a time of general humiliation. See 1 Cor. vii. 5. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney.

13. — the family of Shimei apart,] Or "of Simeon," according to the reading in the Greek translation of the Seventy. As David, Nathan, Simeon, and Levi, are all reckoned among the progenitors of Christ, Luke iii. 29—31, their families may be mentioned by name, as more particularly concerned in the guilt to be lamented. "For neither did His brethren believe in Him," John vii. 5. Dr. Blayney. Or these different families may be intended to denote the different orders of men among the Jews: "the house of David," or the royal line; "the house of Nathan" the Prophet, and other descendants of the other Prophets; "the house of Levi," both high priest, priests, and other Levites; "the house of Shimei," or the scribes and Pharisees, and their descendants, agreeably to an opinion that this family was noted for breeding up persons eminent in the knowledge of the law. The Prophet, having mentioned the tribes and families of chief note in his time, comprises the rest under the general expression in the fourteenth verse. Dr. Wells, W. Lowth.

The Jews perform to this day the office, to which they were at first appointed, of bearing witness to true religion: being preserved a distinct people, though dispersed through the world, for so long a time, as no one besides from the creation ever was under like circumstances; and demonstrating all the while the uncorruptness of those books, in which both they and we believe, and from which, in a great measure, we prove the truth of our religion against them, as well as against other unbelievers in Christ. Nor is this the whole service of the same kind, to which they are destined. For in God's good time they shall give a new and illustrious, (and who knows how seasonable?) attestation to Christianity, by their conversion; and the "receiving of them" again into the Church shall be as "life from the dead." For so their own Prophets have foretold, that God "will pour upon them the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall look upon Him whom they have pierced, and shall mourn; and in that day shall be a fountain opened to them for sin and for uncleanness: they shall call on His name, and He will hear them; He will say, It is My people; and they shall say, The Lord is my God." Abp. Secker.

Chap. XIII. ver. 1. — a fountain opened — for sin and for uncleanness.] The blood of Christ, which cleanseth from all sin, 1 John i. 7, is manifestly here intended, the Jews being upon their conversion and repentance to be admitted to all the privileges of the Christian covenant. Dr. Blayney.

2. — I will cut off the names of the idols out of the land,] That gross idolatry, with which the world was infected, shall now cease, and the very names and mention of those Pagan idols shall be forgotten, &c. Bp. Hall. The Prophets in general, in their descriptions of the final reformation to be produced in the Church, foretell the utter destruction of idolatry. See Isa. ii. 18; xxx. 22; xxxi. 7; Hos. ii. 17; Mic. v. 13. Dr. Gray.

—— the prophets and the unclean spirit] Perhaps those that prophesy by means of an unclean spirit. See Acts xvi. 16; Rev. xvi. 13. And what is said in the next verse of "any one that shall prophesy," must be understood of those who undertake to prophesy by means of an unclean spirit, or other false pretences. Dr. Blayney.

4. — of his vision,] That is, of the extraordinary communication which he pretended to have received when he uttered a prophecy which he knew to be false. Dr. Blayney. He shall be put to open shame and death, on account of his pretended vision; (Dr. Wells;) or, shall be convinced of his errour, and no more attempt to deceive. Bp. Hall.

—— a rough garment] Or, "a garment of hair;" as in the margin. See 2 Kings i. 8; Matt. iii. 4. They shall not affect the dress of the old Prophets, in order to pass off their impostures. Dr. Blayney. This seems to have been the practice of false prophets, in imitation of some eminent ones amongst the true. Abp. Newcome.

5. But he shall say, I am no prophet, &c.] But he that shall be apprehended on suspicion of pretending to be a Prophet, shall readily acknowledge himself to be no Prophet, &c. Dr. Wells. Disclaiming all pretensions to the character of a Prophet, he shall profess himself to be no other than a plain ordinary labouring man, employed in husbandry business from his youth. This passage may be justly paralleled with Amos vii. 14. Dr. Blayney.

6. — What are these wounds &c.] It was an ancient custom for masters to set a mark on their slaves or goods: and there was sometimes a particular character imprinted upon the worshippers of certain idols; such impressions were often made upon the hands: see Rev. xiii. 16. The accused person is represented as justifying himself by alleging, that the marks upon his hands are not the character of any idol, but only a token of the family, to which he belongs. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

7. Awake, O sword, &c.] O thou, My sword of affliction, awake, arise, and smite Him, that is nearest and dearest unto Me; even Him, that is My equal and coeternal Son, the image of Me, the invisible God, saith the Lord of hosts: smite thou this Great Shepherd of My Church; and His sheep, His disciples and followers, shall be scattered, and shall both forsake Him and be severed from each other; for even against those disciples also, as well as against their Master, will I stir up enmity and opposition in the world. Bp. Hall. Here begins a new prophecy, importing that the Messiah, the great Shepherd, as He is described in this prophecy, chap. xi. 4; and in Is. xl. 11; Ezek. xxxiv. 23; though with respect to His divine nature He be "equal with God" the Father, Phil. ii. 6, yet shall be delivered up to death, by God's determinate counsel and appointment: see Acts ii. 23; iv. 28. W. Lowth.

—— my fellow,] Or, as the word means, My "equal." The original word, exclusively of this passage, is found only in the book of Leviticus. There it is often used, and always so as to signify a fellow-citizen, or one upon the same level in society. It appears therefore with the greatest propriety to be rendered in our Bible by the term "fellow" in this place, where the Lord of hosts, foretelling the sufferings of the Redeemer, speaks of Him as equal to Himself. Dr. Eveleigh.

—— smite the shepherd, &c.] Our Lord applies this to His disciples being "scattered every man to his own," upon His apprehension and death, Matt. xxvi. 31; John xvi. 32. W. Lowth. The verse relates to the Messiah and His "little flock," Luke xii. 32. The Prophet goes back to this great subject of prophecy, after having told some events posterior to Christ's appearance; and then proceeds to other events subsequent to this grand epocha in the history of the Jews and of mankind; some near it, and some remote. Abp. Newcome.

8. — two parts therein shall be cut off and die;] The severe judgments, foretold by our Saviour, Matt. xxiv, shall consume two parts in three of the nation; but a third part shall escape the general destruction, and be left to be dispersed over the world, to preserve a posterity to future generations. W. Lowth. "Two parts and a third," that is, a greater proportion and a less. Dr. Stokes.

9. And I will bring the third part through the fire,] I will cause them to undergo great afflictions, till at last they shall repent of their unbelief of Christ and of His Gospel, and truly turn unto Me by faith in Christ, and so may be then compared to gold or silver refined by the fire. Dr. Wells.

BEHOLD, the day of the LORD cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee.

2 For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city.

3 Then shall the LORD go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle.

4 ¶ And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south.

— they shall call on my name, and I will hear them:] When I shall have "poured upon them the spirit of grace and of supplications," chap. xii. 10, they shall humbly implore pardon for their sins, and I will graciously hear and answer their prayers: compare chap. x. 6; Is. lxv. 24; Hos. ii. 21; Joel ii. 32. W. Lowth.

— I will say, It is my people: &c.] For their disobedience "I broke My covenant with them," chap. xi. 10, and they were no more My people: but upon their repentance and conversion, "they shall be as though I had not cast them off," chap. x. 6; and I will renew My covenant relation with them. Compare chap. viii. 8; Lev. xxvi. 12; Jer. xxx. 22; Ezek. xi. 20; xxxvi. 28; xxxvii. 27. W. Lowth.

Chap. XIV. ver. 1. — the day of the Lord cometh,] The day in which the Lord will take vengeance on the Jews for the death of Christ. Dr. Wells.

2. — I will gather all nations &c.] The Romans, being lords of the then known world, had the strength of all nations united in their forces. Compare Jer. xxxiv. 1. W. Lowth.

— half of the city shall go forth into captivity.] The Hebrew word, here translated "half," may be rendered "a portion:" see Judges ix. 43; Dan. xi. 4. Here the city is spoken of; but chap. xiii. 8, refers to the whole land. Abp. Newcome.

— and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city.] God shall preserve the other half of the citizens from being cut off by the enemy. Josephus says, there were forty thousand of the inhabitants suffered to go whither they would. W. Lowth.

Or, the passage may be rendered, "and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, even a residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city:" that is, they shall not be killed in the siege or taking of the city, but shall go forth into captivity. Dr. Wells.

The Romans spared the young and useful part of the Jews. However, these were either condemned to the mines in Egypt, or exposed to the sword and to wild beasts in provincial theatres, or sold for slaves. Abp. Newcome.

3. Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, &c.] If, as I am disposed to think, the Romans are meant in the foregoing verse, we may here understand the descendants of the many people, who warred under the Roman standard. Abp. Newcome.

It is no unusual thing for the holy writers to speak of two events together, though they happen at a great distance from each other. See I Cor. xv. 23. W. Lowth.

— as when he fought in the day of battle.] As He appeared in behalf of Israel, when He overthrew the Egyptians in the Red sea, or when the ark of God's presence led their armies in the land of Canaan, Josh. vi. 6. W. Lowth. There is great difficulty in this and the following verses, and commentators are much divided in the interpretation and application of them.

5. — Azal:] Probably a place near Jerusalem. Abp. Newcome.

— all the saints with thee.] Or, "with Him;" as the Chaldee and Greek versions read. W. Lowth.

7. — not day, nor night:] These two verses may be expounded with respect to the Jews, that their condition shall be for some time not altogether prosperous, not yet quite desperate. The great crisis of their affairs shall be in a day, which God alone knows; unlike to our days: dark at the beginning, and clear in the end when the light is not expected. W. Lowth. The expressions are most probably figurative. "At evening time it shall be light:" the final prevalence of Christianity after a period of spiritual twilight appears to be intended.

8. — living waters:] By "living waters," there is good reason to believe, are meant the gifts and graces of the Gospel dispensation. See Is. xii. 3; xliv. 3; lv. 1; Jer. ii. 13; Ezek. xlvii. 1, &c; Joel iii. 18; John iv. 10; vii. 38, 39. That these benefits will be diffused more extensively by the restoration of the Jews, is intimated not obscurely, Rom. xi. 15. Dr. Blayney.

— the former sea, — the hinder sea:] The expression imports, that the whole land shall have a plentiful share of those blessings, which are here described under the metaphor of "living waters." W. Lowth.

— in summer] In those countries most springs failed during the summer season. Abp. Newcome.

being utterly abolished, chap. xiii. 2; and God shall be glorified "with one mind and one mouth" throughout the world: compare Mic. v. 12—14; Zeph. iii. 9; Rev. xi. 15. The stone, which represents Christ's kingdom, shall then "become a great mountain, and fill the whole earth," Dan. ii. 35. W. Lowth. Jehovah shall be one and the same God alike to all the earth, and not confined as heretofore to one people. See Rom. iii. 29, 30; x. 12; Eph. iv. 5, 6. By "the name of Jehovah," I conceive to be meant the profession of His true religion, which, it is here foretold, should pervade the whole earth. Dr. Blayney.

10. All the land shall be turned as a plain &c.] The expression may signify, that all impediments shall be removed that oppose the advancement of Christ's kingdom. Compare chap. iv. 7; Is. xl. 4. W. Lowth. Or, shall be "compassed," as in the margin. Jehovah shall encompass the whole land for the purpose of protection, as a plain is encompassed by mountains. Geba is in Benjamin, north of Jerusalem; Josh. xxi. 17: Rimmon in Judah, to the south, chap. xv. 32. Abp. Newcome.

——from Benjamin's gate &c.] See the plan of Jerusalem.

12. — while they stand upon their feet.] As opposed to one, whose flesh wastes as he lies upon the bed of sickness, which is in the ordinary course of things; whereas in this case the person loses his flesh and his strength with it, while he is on his feet, going about in the way of his ordinary business. Dr. Blayney.

13. — and they shall lay hold every one &c.] That is, they shall seek help from one another; but, instead of helping, they shall turn their arms against one another. See Judg. vii. 22; 1 Sam. xiv. 20; 2 Chron. xx. 23. Dr. Blayney.

15. And so shall be the plague of the horse, &c.] This is to be joined to the twelfth verse, the thirteenth and fourteenth being in a parenthesis. Both man and beast in that army shall be consumed in one common destruction. W. Lowth. It is very much in the style of this writer to digress, and after a while to return again to his subject, as if nothing had intervened. Dr. Blayney.

16. — to keep the feast of tabernacles.] See Is. lxvi. 23; and the note there.

17. — of all the families of the earth] According to the opinion of many learned commentators, by going up to Jerusalem to worship, and to keep the feast of tabernacles, is only meant a conformity to the established worship of the one true God, or, which is the same thing, to the Christian religion. It is repeatedly foretold, that a time will come, when "all the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before Him," Ps. xxii. 27. Compare Ps. lxxii. 11; lxxxvi. 9; Rev. xi. 15. Dr. Blayney.

18. And if the family of Egypt go not up, &c.] Though the fruitfulness of Egypt, especially the upper part of it, depends not upon rain, (see Deut. xi. 10, 11,) yet if the Jews that dwell there, or the rest of the inhabitants, do not join in the solemn acts of Christian worship, they shall suffer the same plague and famine, with which others are threatened; that is, the Nile shall not overflow, as the Targum explains it, whence a famine will ensue. W. Lowth.

——that have no rain;] This must be understood in a qualified sense. Maillet, Pitts, and Bp. Pococke affirm, that they have been witnesses to rain in Egypt; but it does not rain there frequently as in other countries. Harmer.

20. — upon the bells of the horses,] Horses are spoken of in Scripture as almost exclusively used for war. And that bells made part of their trapping, there is reason to believe from a passage cited by Mr. Harmer from Major Rooke's Travels to the coast of Arabia Felix; where that traveller, describing a field-day of the cavalry, says, The horses were sumptuously caparisoned, being adorned with gold and silver trappings, bells hung round their necks, and rich housings. Dr. Blayney. War horses not being wanted, their ornaments shall be converted to sacred uses. Abp. Secker.

——and the pots in the Lord's house shall be like the bowls] The meanest utensil in the house of God (see Nehem. x. 39) shall be as the vessels of silver and gold used in solemn sacrifices. Abp. Newcome.

21. Yea, every pot in Jerusalem &c.] Every thing shall be

There shall be no more profane persons, unbelievers, enemies to the true religion, to interrupt the worship of the true God. Poole

CHAP. IX. - - - - Easter-Even, - - - Morning.

MALACHI.

INTRODUCTION.

MALACHI was the last of those Prophets who flourished before the Gospel dispensation.

Malachi is represented by some traditionary accounts to have been of the tribe of Zebulun, and a native of Sapha; to have died young, and to have been buried with his ancestors at Sapha: after having assisted as a member of the great synagogue in the reestablishment of order and prosperity in his country. Abp. Usher conceives him to have flourished about the year of the world 3588, which is about twenty years later than the period assigned to him by Blair: but as it appears from the consent of all Jewish and Christian antiquity, that the light of prophecy expired in Malachi, we may suppose that the termination of his ministry coincided with the accomplishment of the first seven weeks of Daniel's prophecy, which was the period allotted for "sealing up the vision and prophecy." This, according to Prideaux's account, must be assigned to the year of the world 3595, but according to the calculations of Bp. Lloyd, to the year of the world 3607, twelve years later: whichever reckoning we may prefer, Malachi must be admitted to have completed the canon of the Old Testament, about 400 years before the birth of Christ; when the great designs of Providence were completed in the termination of the prophetick ministry; and when a scheme of prophecy was unfolded which in its entire contexture was to be accommodated to, and to characterize, the Messiah.

Malachi certainly prophesied some time after Haggai and Zechariah, for in his time the temple was rebuilt and the worship reestablished, chap. i. 7, 10, 12; iii. 10; his ministry coincided with or succeeded that of Nehemiah.

This Prophet sealed up the volume of prophecy in the description of that Personage at whose appearance the Evangelists begin the Gospel history, Mark i. 1, 2; and he, who terminated the illustrious succession of the Prophets, and predicted the coming of the Baptist, was in an especial degree entitled to a share of our Saviour's testimony: who declared in terms, which defined the period and extent of prophecy, that "all the Prophets prophesied until John," Matt. xi. 13; Luke xvi. 16. Malachi is likewise elsewhere frequently cited as a Prophet by the writers of the New Testament, Matt. xi. 10; xvii. 10—12; Mark i. 2; ix. 11, 13; Luke i. 17; vii. 27; Rom. ix. 13. Dr. Gray.

Chap. I. ver. 1. The burden of the word of the Lord to Israel] The word "burden" may be taken here in its larger sense, as the "message" or import of the word of the Lord. The name "Israel," which was at first common to the twelve tribes, and afterwards became peculiar to the ten, as distinguished from the kingdom of Judah, is here given to the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and to all of the others, who joined themselves to Judah on their return from Babylon. These having lately had experience of God's great favour in turning their captivity and restoring them to their own land, should have been very careful in reforming their ways, and sincere in their obedience. But it was otherwise. Many enormities, contrary to God's law, were found amongst them; for which God sends His Prophet to reprove them, and exhort them to repentance: and at the same time, for the comfort of the godly among them, to assure them of the coming of the promised Messiah in His due time. Dr. Pocock.

2. I have loved you, saith the Lord. &c.] I have all along shewn a particular kindness for Jacob and his family, above that of Esau, though they were both the sons of Isaac: and I have lately given a signal proof of it, in having restored you to your own country again after your captivity, whereas I have scattered the Edomites, and dispossessed them of mount Seir, their ancient inheritance, Deut. ii. 5, by the Nabatheans, to which they shall never be restored again. Compare Jer. xlix. 18; Ezek. xxxv. 7, 9. W. Lowth.

"I loved Jacob," in giving him great external privileges: "and I hated Esau," or I shewed him less love, Gen. xxix. 30, 31; compare Luke xiv. 26. I comparatively hated him, by giving him an inferiour lot; and now I have not only laid waste the dwellings of the Edomites, by the incursions of their enemies; but (ver. 4) they shall remain the perpetual monument of My vengeance. Abp. Newcome. What is here said relates to the preference shown to the posterity of Jacob over that of Esau. Dr. Pocock.

3. — the dragons of the wilderness.] Such great serpents as are commonly found in deserts and desolate places. W. Lowth. See the notes on Ps. xliv. 19; Jer. ix. 11.

4. — They shall build, but I will throw down; &c.] Their endeavours to recover themselves shall be all in vain: God will so notoriously frustrate their attempts, that all people, seeing how ill things succeed with them, and how heavily God's judgments oppress them, shall call them, "The border of wickedness," a land of

Before CHRIST about 397. against whom the LORD hath indignation for ever.

5 And your eyes shall see, and ye shall ‖ Or, upon. † Heb. from upon. say, The LORD will be magnified ‖ † from the border of Israel.

12 ¶ But ye have profaned it, in that ye sinful people, cursed for the sins of its inhabitants, &c. Dr. Pocock.

They were subdued by Judas Maccabeus, 1 Mac. v. 65, and finally by John Hyrcanus, as Josephus relates; and the name of Edomite was utterly extinguished. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

5. And your eyes shall see, &c.] And behold, your very eyes shall be witnesses, both of these My favours to you, and of this My severity to the sons of Esau; and ye shall be forced to say, The Lord hath well deserved to be praised and magnified from all the coasts of Israel. Bp. Hall.

6. A son honoureth his father, &c.] God had all along shewn such fatherly affection and care to Israel, above all other nations, that they could not but acknowledge Him their Father by a peculiar right: and He had, by His especial protection and government of them, so shewn Himself their Lord and Master, that they could not deny His peculiar claim to that appellation. Upon this their outward profession He founds His appeal, reprehending them for withholding from Him that honour and reverence, which not their duty only, but ordinary custom, required them to pay. Dr. Pocock.

—— if I be a master, where is my fear?] One branch of a servant's reverence is fear to offend his master. This fear is a disposition well becoming a servant; and therefore God, as our Master, and by that name of Master, challengeth it of us. Fear and reverence are often joined together, and so jointly required of the Lord's servants, Ps. ii. 11; Heb. xii. 28. Bp. Sanderson.

—— And ye say,] Or, "Yet ye say." W. Lowth. From this verse to chap. ii. ver. 9, the Prophet reproves the priests and the people for sacrificing the refuse of beasts, which according to the law ought to have been rejected; and denounces punishment against the priests for not teaching the people their duty in this respect. Abp. Newcome.

7. — mine altar; — The table of the Lord] These names may be indifferently used for signifying either the altar or the table of shewbread: and by "polluted bread" may be understood either bread, properly so called, or else the flesh of the sacrifices: so that whether we understand by this variety of words the same or different things; namely, the shewbread by some, and the sacrifices by others, the scope will be the same; that is, to declare the contempt they had of God's service, and that not in one particular kind only, but in all. Dr. Pocock.

—— In that ye say, The table of the Lord is contemptible.] They said in effect, that the altar of Jehovah was vile and contemptible, by offering on it torn, blind, lame, and sick victims. Abp. Newcome.

8. — offer it now unto thy governor;] It is the custom of the East for poor people, especially those that live in the country, to make presents to their lords of lambs and sheep. Presents to them, like offerings to God, expiate offences. Sir J. Chardin.

—— will he be pleased with thee,] Certainly not: he would look on it as a great disrespect of his person, and disregard of his honour. How much more shall the Lord, the great Governour of the world? Such conduct was directly contrary to God's command, Lev. xxii. 22; Deut. xv. 21. Dr. Pocock.

Though things of very little value are sometimes offered as presents in the East, those, to whom presents are made, do not think themselves always obliged graciously to accept every thing that is brought. It appears from Bp. Pococke, Norden, and other travellers, that if a present is not somewhat proportionate to the quality of the person applied to, the circumstances of him that offers it, and the value of the favour asked, it is rejected. Harmer.

9. And now, I pray you, beseech God &c.] Therefore now I pray you to repent, and thereon to beseech God that He will be gracious unto us in not punishing the former sins, as they require. This you, the priests, are especially concerned to do, because the wickedness before mentioned has been by your means chiefly occasioned. Will He, that is, God, regard your persons, though you be His priests, unless ye repent, saith the Lord of hosts? Dr. Wells.

10. Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for nought? &c.] Or, "that doth shut &c." Dr. Pocock. I have not dealt thus with you, but have abundantly recompensed your services. Which of you is there, among all the Levites of the temple, that hath shut the doors of My temple unrewarded? which of you is there, that hath so much as kindled a fire on Mine altar for nought? yet ye have had no regard to Me again. I will be affected to you accordingly: behold, I have no pleasure in you. Bp. Hall. Having shown the great fault of the priests in their neglect of His service, here He seems to aggravate it in that they receive abundant wages for what they ought to do, even for their least services. Did He require their services for nought, as justly He might, then they might have some pretence for their negligence; but being plentifully rewarded, they ought, if not in love, yet in justice, to be careful. Dr. Pocock.

11. For from the rising of the sun &c.] A prophecy of what should be done at and after Christ's coming, when by the preaching of the Gospel the knowledge of God should be communicated to all nations. The "incense" of the converted Gentiles, and their "pure offering," are devout prayers, Rev. v. 8; holy praises, thanksgivings, and almsdeeds, and works of charity, Heb. xiii. 15, 16; their whole selves, Rom. xii. 1. Dr. Pocock. The conversion of the Gentiles is here prophesied, as usual, under Jewish images; see Zech. xiv. 16. Abp. Newcome.

13 Ye said also, Behold, what a weariness is it! ‖ and ye have snuffed at it, saith the LORD of hosts; and ye brought that which was torn, and the lame, and the sick; thus ye brought an offering: should I accept this of your hand? saith the LORD.

‖ Or, to whose flock he.

14 But cursed be the deceiver, ‖ which hath in his flock a male, and voweth, and sacrificeth unto the LORD a corrupt thing: for I am a great King, saith the LORD of hosts, and my name is dreadful among the heathen.

Before CHRIST about 397.

3 Behold, I will ‖ corrupt your seed, and † spread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your solemn feasts; and ‖ one shall take you away with it.

5 My covenant was with him of life and peace; and I gave them to him for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name.

6 The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips: he walked with me in peace and equity, and did turn many away from iniquity.

7 For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth: for he is the messenger of the LORD of hosts.

8 But ye are departed out of the way; ye have caused many to ‖ stumble at the faned and abused My name: in that ye have entertained base conceits of My sacrifices, and have held the oblations offered unto Me, as meat vile and contemptible, and unworthy of any other respects than scorn. Bp. Hall.

The word "fruit" is applied to sacrifice; see Is. lvii. 19, where "the fruit of the lips" is explained of "the sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving," Heb. xiii. 15. W. Lowth. Or it means that portion of the offering, which was allotted to the priests for their provision, and which they esteemed of little value. Dr. Pocock.

13. — ye have snuffed at it,] See Hag. i. 9. Ye say, that attendance on the altar and partaking of its sacrifices are a burdensome task, and ye turn from them with disgust. Abp. Newcome.

14. But cursed be the deceiver, &c.] The former reproofs related only to the priests; here the Prophet reproves the people, that would offer to deceive Almighty God by putting Him off with the worst they had. Dr. Pocock thinks the words are to be understood of such offerings, as of their own accord they vowed to God, which were to be males, Lev. xxii. 19. And if they would not perform their vows in such a manner as God directed, it were better for them not to vow at all: see Deut. xxiii. 21. W. Lowth.

—— my name is dreadful among the heathen.] How much more then ought it to be so among you, whom I have loved and chosen for My peculiar people? This assertion of God, that "His name is dreadful among the heathen," though spoken as of the time then present, and though it was then and is always true, (for His name is often made conspicuous to them by His judgments,) yet because they had not then generally a clear knowledge of Him and His name, it is by some not improperly considered as a prophecy of what should come to pass, by the making of His name more clearly known to all nations by the preaching of the Gospel. Dr. Pocock.

Chap. II. ver. 2. — I will curse your blessings;] I will turn your blessings into curses; compare Deut. xxiii. 5: or rather, remove your blessings, and send curses and calamities in their stead. Or it may mean the benedictions, wherewith the priests blessed, or prayed for, themselves or the people. W. Lowth, Dr. Pocock.

As God can evidently dispose of every thing, so as may best answer His wise purposes of mercy or correction, it is likewise evidently worthy of Him to do it: for the highest of His titles is that of the moral Governour of the universe: and therefore we may firmly believe the Scripture assuring us, that He doth it in fact; that He "makes all things work together for good to them that love Him," Rom. viii. 28, and "curses" the very "blessings" of those who love Him not. Abp. Secker.

3. — I will corrupt your seed,] I will destroy the fruits of the earth, so as to produce dearth and scarcity; or I will cut off your posterity. Dr. Pocock.

—— and spread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your solemn feasts;] Your holiest sacrifices shall be as loathsome in My sight as dung; and I will reject you with as much contempt, as if I threw the very dung of your sacrifices in your faces. Dr. Pocock.

—— and one shall take you away with it.] You shall be esteemed as a nuisance, only fit to be removed out of sight as dung is. W. Lowth. You shall be destroyed, and cast on a dunghil. Abp. Newcome.

4. And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you, &c.] That is, the message or instruction now delivered to them by the Prophet, to reprove them for the breach of God's law, and to call on them to reform their misbehaviour in His service, to a due and better observance of which they were bound by virtue of His covenant made with Levi. Dr. Pocock.

5. My covenant was with him of life and peace;] The Prophet speaks of the succession of the ancient priests, such as Aaron, Eleazar, Phineas, and their successors, as of one single person, under the name of Levi, (compare Zech. xi. 10,) and says, I gave him My covenant of happiness and security, or I promised him a secure enjoyment of his office of the priesthood. The words allude to Numb. xxv. 12, 13. W. Lowth.

7. For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, &c.] Preserve it, store it up; so as to distribute it. Abp. Newcome. As it is the priest's duty to understand the meaning of the law, so the people ought to resort to them for instruction in any difficulty, that arises concerning the sense of it: see Lev. x. 11; Deut. xvii. 9, 10. For God has appointed the priests His ordinary messengers, to declare His will unto the people, as the Prophets are His extraordinary messengers. The word "messenger," in its usual sense, is equivalent to prophet: see Is. xlii. 19; xliv. 26; Hag. i. 13. It signifies the same as "an interpreter" of the Divine will. Job xxxiii. 23. W. Lowth.

law; ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the LORD of hosts.

10 [b] Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, by profaning the covenant of our fathers?

11 ¶ Judah hath dealt treacherously, and an abomination is committed in Israel and in Jerusalem; for Judah hath profaned the holiness of the LORD which he ‖ loved, and hath married the daughter of a strange god.

‖ Or, ought to love.

‖ Or, him that waketh, and him that answereth.

12 The LORD will cut off the man that doeth this, ‖ the master and the scholar, out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and him that offereth an offering unto the LORD of hosts.

Before CHRIST about 397.

13 And this have ye done again, covering the altar of the LORD with tears, with weeping, and with crying out, insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good will at your hand.

14 ¶ Yet ye say, Wherefore? Because the LORD hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, against whom thou hast dealt treacherously: yet is she thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant.

15 And did not he make one? Yet had he the ‖ residue of the spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seek † a godly seed. Therefore take heed to your spirit, and let none deal ‖ treacherously against the wife of his youth.

‖ Or, residue of my spirit. † Heb. a seed of God. ‖ Or, unfaithfully.

9. — have been partial in the law.] Not delivering the truth, but wresting the law, either in declaring its meaning, or in determining any thing according to it, from respect to the persons, in whose cases they were to pronounce judgment: see Lev. xix. 15; Deut. i. 17; xvi. 19. This is to be "partial in the law:" the margin says, it is literally, according to the Hebrew, "ye have accepted faces:" it is usually elsewhere rendered "to respect persons." These three expressions all mean the same thing. Dr. Pocock.

10. Have we not all one father? &c.] From this to the 16th verse inclusive the Prophet censures intermarriages of Israelites with women of another country, which Moses had forbidden, Deut. vii. 3; and also divorces, which seem to have been multiplied for the purpose of contracting these prohibited marriages. Abp. Newcome. This grew much into practice in the time of Ezra and Nehemiah, who express great detestation of it, Ezra ix. 1; Neh. xiii. 23. W. Lowth.

11. — for Judah hath profaned the holiness of the Lord which he loved.] His holy institution of matrimony among them, not so much in general, as it was a holy institution first made in paradise, but as so limited and restrained among this peculiar people of God, as to preserve them a holy nation unto Him. Dr. Pocock.

—— the daughter of a strange god.] That is, the worshipper of a different god from Jehovah: see Deut. xxxii. 19. Abp. Newcome. As those that acknowledge, worship, and serve the true God, are called His sons and daughters, so they, that worshipped any strange god, are by like reason here called the daughters of that god. Hence the Jews say, He that marrieth a heathen woman is as if he made himself son in law to an idol. Dr. Pocock.

12. — the master and the scholar,] Him that persuades or instructs others, that such marriages are lawful; and him that follows such advice. The expression seems to comprehend both the priest and the people. The Hebrew reads, as in the margin, "him that waketh, and him that answereth;" it seems to be a proverbial speech denoting a master and scholar, as our translators render it: an instructor is described as one that "wakeneth the ear" of his disciple, Is. l. 4. W. Lowth. That some of the priests married strange wives, see Nehem. xiii. 28—30. Abp. Newcome.

—— and him that offereth an offering &c.] Though he should think to pacify God with offerings, yet God will not accept them, or spare him. Bp. Hall.

13. And this have ye done again, &c.] And this have ye added unto your other sins; ye have dealt so cruelly and unjustly with your wives, that ye have caused them to wash the altars of God with the tears of their weeping and complaints: so that God, who hateth all iniquity, regards not your offering, &c. Bp. Hall.

14. — Because the Lord hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, &c.] "Because the Lord hath been witness" of the contract or matrimonial promises, made according to His law, and with solemn invocation of His name, "between thee and the wife of thy youth;" that is, her whom thou tookest in thy youth, but with whom thou now dealest treacherously, though she were "thy companion," made so according to the institution of God, Gen. ii. 24; Matt. xix. 5; "and the wife of thy covenant," by mutual covenant espoused to thee. The conditions of this covenant, God, being witness to it, regards as necessarily binding on both parties, and requires the due performance of it from both. Dr. Pocock.

If conjugal infidelity on the men's part hath not all the same aggravations which it hath on the women's, it hath very great ones in their stead. They are almost constantly the tempters; they often carry on their wicked designs for a long time together; they too commonly use the vilest means to accomplish them. And as they claim the strictest fidelity, it is ungenerous, as well as unjust, to fail of paying it. All men must feel how bitter it would be to them to be injured in this respect; let them think then what it is to be injurious in it: and since the crime is the same when committed by them, as when committed against them, let them own that it deserves the same condemnation from the Judge of the world. "The Lord hath been witness," saith the Prophet, "between thee and the wife of thy youth, &c." Abp. Secker.

15. And did not he make one? &c.] Among various interpretations of the words, this seems most probable: That the Prophet puts the Jews in mind of the first institution of marriage in paradise, as Christ did afterwards upon a like occasion, (Matt. xix. 5,) and tells them, that God made but one man at first, and made the woman out of him, when He could have created more women, if He had pleased, since "He had the residue of the spirit," or was the Father of spirits, and so could at His will have created more spirits or souls: but He acted as He did, in order to instruct men, that this was the true pattern of marriage, ordained for true love and undivided affection; and best serving the chief end of matrimony, namely, the religious education of children; whereas in polygamy the children are brought up with more or less care, in proportion to the affection men bear to their several wives. This seems an easy and very probable interpretation, and is confirmed by our Saviour's way of arguing against divorce, and consequently polygamy, Matt. xix. 4, 5, 6. W. Lowth, Dr. Pocock.

—— Therefore take heed to your spirit.] Do not give way to an irregular and inordinate passion. W. Lowth.

[a] Matt. 11. 10. Mark 1. 2. Luke 1. 76. & 7. 27.

16. For the Lord, — saith that he hateth putting away: &c.] However ye may unjustly pretend God's allowance of this common dismission of your wives upon every slight occasion, He professeth to hate these your causeless repudiations of them: and whosoever doth this, what colour soever he sets upon it, yet doth but cloak a violence and wrong, which God will revenge. Bp. Hall.

God hateth such an one, as He doth him that endeavoureth to conceal under his garment what he hath taken by violence. The second marriage is an act of injustice and violence to the former wife. Alop. Newcome.

17. Ye have wearied the Lord &c.] You have tired His patience by your blasphemous speeches, charging His providence with injustice: compare Is. xliii. 24; Amos ii. 13. The words begin a new discourse, and more properly belong to the next chapter, where an answer is given to the objection proposed. W. Lowth.

God having declared that He would "make His name great among the Gentiles," for that He was "wearied" with the impiety of Israel, now proceeds to proclaim in an awful manner by the mouth of His Prophet, that the Lord whom they sought should suddenly come to His temple, preceded by that messenger, who like an harbinger should prepare His way; that the Lord, when He should appear, should purify the sons of Levi from their unrighteousness, and refine them as metal from the dross, chap. iii. 1—3; that then "the offering of Judah," the spiritual sacrifice of the heart, should be "pleasant unto the Lord," as was that of the patriarchs or their uncorrupted ancestors, chap. iii. 4; and that the Lord would quickly exterminate the corruptions and adulteries that prevailed. He proceeds with an exhortation to repentance; promising high rewards and remembrance to the righteous in that last day, when the Lord should select unto Himself a peculiar treasure, and finally discern between the righteous and the wicked, chap. iii. 16—18. He concludes with another assurance of approaching salvation to those who feared God's name, from that "Sun of righteousness which should arise with healing in His wings," and render them triumphant; enjoining till that day an observance of the law of Moses; till the advent of Elijah, the Prophet, who before the coming of "that great and dreadful day of the Lord should turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers," or produce a thorough amendment in the minds of the people, chap. iv. 1—6. Dr. Gray. With this solemn promise of the Saviour, the last inspired teacher of the Jewish Church closes the word of prophecy, till a greater Prophet should arise again to open it. Bp. Horsley.

Every one that doeth evil &c.] A repetition of the old objection against Providence, taken from the prosperity of the wicked, which implied, as the objector thought, either that their works were pleasing to God, or else that He disregarded human affairs, and would never call men to account for their actions. W. Lowth.

Chap. III. ver. 1. Behold, I will send my messenger, &c.] Behold, I will stop the mouths of all such blasphemous cavillers: I will, in My appointed time, send My messenger, John the Baptist, and he shall prepare the way before My personal and visible coming; lo, the Messiah, even the Lord whom ye wait for, shall ere long come into His temple, &c. Bp. Hall.

This is an answer to the blasphemous question of the perverse scoffers of that time, who from the prosperity of the wicked took occasion to question God's justice: God assures them that a time should come, when He would, by executing His just judgment on the wicked, shew that He took due notice of all their deeds. The words, as a Jewish expositor observes, are a most illustrious prophecy of Christ, in which this last of Prophets before Christ's coming reassures the Jews of His coming, and warns them to expect it. Dr. Pocock.

—— my messenger,] The messenger, whose office it is to "prepare the way before the Lord," who is said here to be "coming suddenly" after this His forerunner, is described by Isaiah as "preparing the way of the Lord," who is spoken of as coming, and "His glory" as just ready "to be revealed," chap. xl. 3, 5. A comparison of the passages proves, that this prophecy is justly applied by all the Evangelists to John the Baptist, who is described under the person of Elijah in the following chapter, (ver. 5,) whom all the Jews, both ancient and modern, expected as a forerunner of the Messiah: see the note there. The messenger or prophet, (see the note on chap. ii. 7,) here foretold to be the Lord's harbinger, was to be as much inferiour to the Lord Himself, as servants are to a great person, of whose arrival they give notice. This John the Baptist often confessed, Matt. iii. 11; John i. 26; iii. 28; and the same appears from the following words. W. Lowth, Bp. Chandler.

—— he shall prepare the way] Like pioneers on the march of an Eastern monarch: see Bp. Lowth's note on Is. xl. 2. Alop. Newcome. He was to usher in the Lord, that was to follow him, and supply the place of harbinger, who was wont to be sent before a great prince, to give notice at the place of the prince's coming, and to dispose matters for his reception, according to his dignity. Bp. Chandler. John the Baptist fully made good this promise by preaching repentance, Matt. iii. 2; by baptising unto repentance, ver. 11; by bearing witness to Christ, and pointing Him out to the people, that they might believe on Him, John. i. 29, &c. Dr. Pocock.

—— and the Lord, — shall — come to his temple,] There is hardly a Jew, ancient or modern, that does not expound "the Lord," in this text, of the Messiah. Bp. Chandler. And who by this "Lord" is meant, is agreed on all hands by Christian interpreters; namely, that it is Christ, whom "God hath made both Lord and Christ," Acts ii. 36, and who is "Lord of all," chap. x. 36; by whom "all things were made," John i. 3; by whom all things are sustained and governed; who is, as the root of the word imports, the basis and foundation, not of any private family, tribe, or kingdom, but of all; "by whom are all things, and we by Him," 1 Cor. viii. 6; and whose we are also by right of redemption: and so "He is Lord of lords, and King of kings," Rev. xvii. 14, and xix. 16; and deservedly entitled "the Lord." Dr. Pocock.

Of the characters, under which the Person, whose coming is foretold, is described, the first is, that He is "the Lord." "The Lord shall come to His temple." The temple, in the writings of a Jewish Prophet, cannot be understood otherwise, according to the literal meaning, than of the temple at Jerusalem. Of this temple, therefore, the Person to come is here expressly called the Lord. The lord of any temple, in the language of all writers, and in the natural meaning of the phrase, is the divinity to whose worship it is consecrated. To no other divinity the temple of Jerusalem was consecrated, than the true and everlasting God, the Before CHRIST about 397. suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the LORD of hosts.

2 But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' sope:

3 And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the LORD an offering in righteousness. Before CHRIST about 397.

4 Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the LORD, as in the days of old, and as in ‖ former years. ‖ Or, ancient.

5 And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that ‖ oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and ‖ defraud.

Lord Jehovah, the Maker of heaven and earth. Here then we have the express testimony of Malachi, that the Christ, the Deliverer, whose coming he announces, was no other than the JEHOVAH of the Old Testament. Jehovah by His angels had delivered the Israelites from the Egyptian bondage; and the same Jehovah was to come in person to His temple, to effect the greater and more general deliverance, of which the former was but an imperfect type. Bp. Horsley.

— shall suddenly come to his temple,] The time of His coming is said to be "suddenly;" namely, after the messenger, that was to prepare His way; and is implied to be under that temple, which they despised and profaned, but of which He should be the glory. Bp. Chandler.

Agreeably to this, the temple was the theatre of our Lord's publick ministry at Jerusalem: there He daily taught the people; there He held frequent disputations with the unbelieving Scribes and Pharisees. But there are three particular passages of His life in which this prophecy appears to have been more remarkably fulfilled: the first is related in John ii. 13—16; the second in John vii. 37—40; the third in Matt. xxi. 1—13. In one, or in all, but chiefly in the last of these three remarkable passages of His life, did Jesus of Nazareth display in His own Person, and in His conduct claims, the first and greatest character of the Messiah, foretold and described by all the preceding Jewish Prophets, as well as by Malachi here, "the Lord coming to His temple." Bp. Horsley.

— even the messenger of the covenant,] As Jesus of Nazareth was "the Lord" of the Jewish temple, so also was He "the Messenger of the covenant," which had been foretold by Jeremiah and Ezekiel. That covenant was to be different from the Mosaick: general, for all nations; everlasting, for all ages; a law written in the hearts of the faithful. The covenant, which Jesus as God's Messenger propounded, is altogether different from the Mosaick: it is propounded generally, to all nations; and in the terms of it, is fitted to be everlasting, for all ages; it is a law written in the heart. Assuredly, then, Jesus of Nazareth was the Messenger of the covenant foretold by the Prophets Jeremiah and Ezekiel. Bp. Horsley.

— whom ye seek, — whom ye delight in:] This is commonly understood as alluding to the general expectation of the Messiah, and the delight and consolation which the devout part of the Jewish nation derived from the hope and prospect of His coming. Bp. Horsley.

2. — for he is like a refiner's fire, &c.] In this, and in the 3d and 5th verses, we see the Messiah's business described in various branches, which are reducible however to these: the final judgment, when the wicked shall be destroyed; a previous trial or experiment of the different tempers and dispositions of men, in order to that judgment; and something to be done for their amendment and improvement. The trial is signified under the image of an essayist's separation of the nobler metals from the dross with which they are blended in the ore: the means used for the amendment and improvement of mankind, by the Messiah's atonement for our sins, by the preaching of the Gospel, and by the internal influences of the Holy Spirit, all these means, employed under the Messiah's covenant for the reformation of men, are expressed under the image of "fullers' sope," which restores a soiled garment to its original purity. One particular effect of this purification is to be, that "the sons of Levi" will be purified. The worship of God shall be purged of all hypocrisy and superstition, and reduced to a few simple rites, the natural expression of true devotion. And "then shall this offering of Judah and Jerusalem," that is, of the true members of God's true Church, "be pleasant unto the Lord." These then are the particulars of the business, on which the Messiah, according to this prophecy, was to come. Bp. Horsley.

3. And he shall sit as a refiner &c.] The third character, that of the Judge, who shall execute God's final vengeance on the wicked, is a character, which Jesus of Nazareth hath not yet assumed, otherwise than by declaring that hereafter He will assume it. His first coming was not to judge the world, but that the world through Him might be saved. Nevertheless "the Father hath committed all judgment unto the Son;" who "in the last day shall come again in His glorious majesty, to judge both the quick and dead." In the mean time the particulars of the business, upon which Messiah was to come, appear no less evidently in the performances of Jesus than the personal characters in His Person. The Messiah was to try the tempers and dispositions of mankind. This Jesus does, by the duties, to which He calls us, and the doctrine, which He has left with us; duties, in which faith alone can engage us to persist; a doctrine, which the pure in heart ever will reverence, and the children of this world ever will misinterpret or despise. Thus "many shall be purified, and made white, and tried, but the wicked shall do wickedly." Messiah was to "purify the sons of Levi." The doctrine of Jesus has in many nations reformed the publick worship of God; and we trust that the reformation will gradually become general. Us of the Gentiles He has reclaimed from the abominations of idolatry; and hath taught us to loathe and execrate the rites, whereby our forefathers sought the favour of their devils, for they were not gods; the impure rites of human sacrifice and publick prostitution; things, which it was unfit to mention or remember, but that we may the better understand from what a depth of corruption the mercy of God hath raised us. Blindness, it must be confessed, is at present upon Israel; but the time shall come, when they shall turn to the Lord, and when we shall unite with them in the pure worship of God, and in the just praises of the Lamb. "Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord:" then shall the Lord Jesus come again, to execute what remains of the Messiah's office; to absolve and to condemn. God grant that we may be enabled to "abide the day of His coming, and to stand when He appeareth." Bp. Horsley.

It is not possible to find any other Person, to whom the words of this prophecy will apply. From Malachi, to the destruction of the temple, no one can be named, except the Lord Jesus, who is able to make any pretension to the express characters in this prediction. St. Mark therefore had good reason to introduce his Gospel with this unexceptionable text of Malachi, in order to show the connexion between the Old and New Testament, and that one began where the other ended. There was no Jew at that time who did not agree to the application of this prophecy to the Messiah, according to the letter. No Christian since hath been so wild, as to fancy any other sense of it. Even the learned Grotius so willing and so capable, as he appears to be at other times, to invent double meanings, yields up this prophecy to Christ, concerning Him only, and no other person. Bp. Chandler.

6. — therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.] Because I am the same yesterday, to day, and for ever, as My name Jehovah imports, and am true to My former promises, (see Exod. vi. 3, 4, 6,) therefore you still continue a people, and are not consumed, as your iniquities deserve. And I will still preserve a remnant of you, to make good to them the promises I made to your fathers: see Rom. ix. 29. W. Lowth.

7. Even from the days of your fathers &c.] From this verse to the end of the 12th, the people are reprehended for withholding the legal tithes and oblations; and are assured that they are under a curse for this breach of the law, and that the opposite conduct will derive on them a blessing. Abp. Newcome.

11. — the devourer] Locusts, and such like devouring insects, (compare Amos iv. 9,) blighting winds, &c. W. Lowth.

13. Your words have been stout against me, &c.] From this verse to the end of the 3d verse of the next chapter the Prophet expostulates with the wicked for their hard speeches; and declares that God will make a fearful distinction between them and the righteous. Abp. Newcome.

16. Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another:] Or, "spake one to another;" the word often is not in the Hebrew. By their pious discourses, they confirmed each other in goodness; and armed themselves against the impressions, which the foregoing wicked suggestions might make upon their minds. W. Lowth.

—— and a book of remembrance was written before him &c.] God took especial notice of what these pious persons did and said: it was as safely laid up in His memory, as if it had been entered into a register, in order to be produced at the day of judgment, to their praise and honour. Compare Ps. lvi. 8; Is. lxv. 6; Dan. vii. 10; Rev. xx. 12. W. Lowth. The "book of remembrance" is a beautiful allusion to the records kept by kings. See Esth. vi. 1. Abp. Newcome.

17. — in that day when I make up my jewels;] Or, "special treasure," as in the margin. The meaning is, that although God suffer His "jewels" and "peculiar treasure" to lie for a while mingled with the rubbish and dross, without distinction, yet a day shall come when He will sever what is precious from what is vile; "the vessels of mercy" from "the vessels of wrath," Rom. ix. 22, 23; the "vessels of honour," from the "vessels of dishonour," 2 Tim. ii. 20: and then shall appear who are His, and who are otherwise. Dr. Pocock.

18. Then shall ye return, and discern &c.] Then shall you change your minds, and discern that God did always observe the actions of men. Dr. Pocock. Or, "then shall ye again discern;" that is, God shall give you a new proof, that He puts a difference between the good and the bad, and shall thereby fully answer your objections to His providence. W. Lowth.

Chap. IV. ver. 1. For, behold, the day cometh, &c.] The connexion of these words with the preceding is so apparent, that there seems no reason why they should have been separated, and made the beginning of a new chapter. The words themselves are an image or description of the final judgment on the Jews in their destruction, and an image or representation of the last general judgment on all mankind. The former was certainly then to come on the Jews, if not prevented by their repentance, as it was not: the latter is yet to come, but shall in God's appointed time as certainly come, as if it were already present. Of both therefore it might then be said, "Behold, the day cometh;" that is, it shall certainly come: and the description is so full of terrour, that it may be well applied both to one and to the other. The primary intention however of the Prophet seems to have been, to describe the judgment denounced upon the Jews, to whom he was peculiarly sent to reprove them for their sins, and to admonish them of the consequences of impenitence. Dr. Pocock.

—— that shall burn as an oven;] That is, it shall try every man's work, searching it as thoroughly as fire does things that are put into it. Abp. Secker.

—— and all the proud, &c.] Compare chap. iii. 15.

2. — the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings;] The Messiah is called here "the Sun of righteousness with healing in His wings," to signify that His light clears up men's understandings, and chases away the darkness of their minds, and that His rays and kindly warmth will heal all the diseases of their souls. W. Lowth. Compare Isa. lx. 1—3; Rev. xii. 1.

What the sun is to the world, that Christ is to His Church. As the sun gives not only light to the world, but heat, motion, and activity to all things in it; and invigorates the earth, and makes it fruitful; so does Christ, "the Sun of righteousness," cause righteousness to spring up in His Church, and, being long since risen, He shines continually upon it, with healing in His wings or rays, even the wholesome benign influences of His Holy Spirit, whereby He heals us of our unfruitfulness, and all our spiritual distempers. Bp. Beveridge.

—— and ye shall go forth, and grow up &c.] This promise of deliverance was manifestly made good to the Christians, who were warned of God to go forth of Jerusalem, before it was invested by the Roman army: by which means they were rescued from the common destruction, that came upon the unbelievers, and continued thriving and vigorous, (compare Ps. xcii. 14,) whilst the rest of the nation were consumed with divers kinds of death. Dr. Pocock, W. Lowth.

3. And ye shall tread down the wicked; &c.] The righteous shall triumph in the destruction of the ungodly, as conquerors trample on the carcases of those that are slain in battle. Compare 2 Sam. xxii. 43; Mic. vii. 10; Zech. x. 5. W. Lowth.

4. Remember ye the law of Moses &c.] Ye are not to expect any Prophets for the time to come, till the forerunner of the Messiah appears: so your chief care must be to attend to the instructions which Moses has given in his law, the most solemn part of which was delivered to him in an audible manner upon mount Horeb, Exod. xix. 9; Deut. iv. 10. This your lawgiver plainly speaks of the Messiah, and instructs you to expect His coming, and to obey His commands, Deut. xviii. 15. W. Lowth.

5. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet] The same person who is called the "messenger" or forerunner of the Messiah, chap. iii. 1. It was the unanimous sense of the Jews, that "Elias should first come and restore all things," Mark ix. 12; John i. This they understood of the coming of Elias in person; see Ecclus. xlviii. 10. Our Saviour has interpreted this Elias to be John the Baptist, Matt. xi. 14; xvii. 12, 13. W. Lowth.

6. And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, &c.] The passage may be translated, "He shall turn the heart of the fathers with the children, &c;" that is, he shall do his part to cause a national reformation, to convert fathers and children together, from their evil practices, and restore a true sense of religion, which was then dwindled into form, and so remove "the curse," the utter excision, denounced upon this land; namely Judea. In Scripture he is said to do a thing, who does every thing proper and likely to effect it, though the effect be not produced. The real Elijah in Ahab's days did no more; nor was his endeavours followed with success. Bp. Chandler.

The Messiah is now come, and the Jews would not know Him but rejected Him, and despitefully used Him: for which they obstinacy, that "great and dreadful day of the Lord" is also come upon them, and He "hath smitten the earth," that is, them their land, with such a curse, so terrible a destruction, as no good all that is here spoken, and shews that not one word of prophecy is fallen to the ground. They now remain an ensign to all others, who shall despise or neglect, as they did, the offers of grace. All the admonitions addressed to them, and God's methods for preparing them for the day of His coming here mentioned, equally concern us in respect of that other day His coming typified by the former; and it will be necessary for us to apply them to our own concerns, and to make use of them for our benefit, without expecting another Elias, to forewarn and convert us. We have no promise of any such, and it would be to no purpose if we had. We have Moses and the Prophets, have the admonitions of John the Baptist, and of Christ Himself and we have the example of the Jews, who were punished for their hearkening to them: and if we will not hear and be warned by them, neither will we be persuaded though Elias or John the Baptist should rise from the dead, or Christ should come again in the flesh to convert us. Sufficient to induce us to prepare ourselves, or to leave us without excuse if we do not, are those admonitions of His, extending to all generations, "Watch therefore for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come;" and again "Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh," Matt. xxiv. 42, 44. Dr. Pocock.

APOCRYPHAL BOOKS.

THE books which are admitted into our Bibles under the description of Apocryphal books, are so denominated from a Greek word which is expressive of the uncertainty and concealed nature of their original, and which seems to have been at first applied only to books of doubtful authority, but afterwards to have been employed to characterize spurious and pernicious books. These books have no title to be considered as inspired writings; and though in respect to their antiquity and valuable contents they are annexed to the canonical books, it is in a separate division, and by no means upon an idea that they are of equal authority, in point of doctrine, with them; or that they are to be received as oracles of faith, to sanctify opinions, or to determine religious controversies. It is universally allowed, that these books were not in the canon of the Jews, to whom alone "were committed the oracles of God," Rom. iii. 2; and, indeed, that they were composed after the closing of the sacred catalogue: though some writers, without a shadow of authority, have pretended that some of them, as Tobit, Judith, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, and perhaps others, were received by the Jews into a second canon, said to be made by a council assembled at Jerusalem in the time of Eleazar the high priest, upon the occasion of sending the seventy-two interpreters to Ptolemy king of Egypt; and that the rest were canonized by a third council, assembled in the time of Sammai and Hillel. But of these councils, the Jews, tenacious as they are of traditions, have no account or memorial; and the books in question were composed after the cessation of the prophetick spirit, by persons who displayed no characters of inspiration; and some of whom seem to have disclaimed pretensions to it, (1 Macc. ix. 27; 2 Macc. ii. 30, 31; xv. 38;) and therefore they were regarded by the Jews as among the writings which they termed sacred, in an inferiour sense of that word. The books of Tobit and Judith were, indeed, supposed by the rabbinical conceits to have been derived from lower inspiration. But this was an absurd fancy, and none of the books are cited either as prophetick or doctrinal by our Saviour or His Apostles; and though some writers have pretended to discover a coincidence between certain passages contained in them, and others in the New Testament, it will be found that the evangelical writers on these occasions only accidentally concur in sentiment or expression with the authors of the Apocryphal books; or that the resemblance results from an imitation of passages in the sacred writings of the Old Testament, which the Evangelical and Apocryphal writers might equally have had in view. But indeed if any occasional allusion, or borrowed expressions could be proved, they would by no means establish the authority of the Apocryphal books; which might be referred to, as were other books, by the sacred writers, without any design to confer on them a character of Divine authority, 2 Tim. iii. 8; Heb. xii. 21; Jude ver. 14.

These Apocryphal books constituted no part of the Septuagint version of the Scriptures, as set forth by the translators under Ptolemy. It is supposed that many of them at least were received by the Jewish synagogue established at Jerusalem, which possibly might have derived its origin from the period of that translation. From the Hellenistick Jews they were probably accepted by the Christian Church: but by whomsoever, and at whatever time they were communicated, it is certain that they were not received as canonical, or enrolled among the productions of the inspired writers; since they are not in any of the earlier catalogues, and are excluded from the sacred list by the fathers of the Greek and Latin church, who flourished during the four first centuries; though they are often cited by them as valuable and instructive works, and sometimes even as divine, and as Scripture in a loose and popular sense. In the language of the primitive Church they were styled ecclesiastical, as distinguished from those infallible works which were canonized as unquestionably inspired, and also from those erroneous and pernicious writings which were stigmatized and proscribed as Apocryphal. Abundant testimonies have been produced to prove that they were not received as canonical during the four first centuries, and they have never been generally admitted into the canon of the Greek church. In the fifth century St. Austin and the council of Carthage appear to have admitted (rather in deference to popular opinion, and in compliance with that reverence which had arisen from use) most of the Apocryphal books as canonical; meaning, however, canonical in a secondary sense; as useful to be read; and still with distinction from those sacred and inspired books, which were established on the sanction of the Jewish canon, and on the testimony of our Saviour and His Apostles. After this time, other fathers and councils seem occasionally to have considered these books as canonical, and inferiour only to the sacred writings; but always with distinction, and with express declaration of their inferiority when that question was strictly agitated; till at length the council of Trent, notwithstanding the testimony of all Jewish antiquity, and contrary to the sense of the primitive Church, thought fit to pronounce them all, (except the Prayer of Manasses, and the two books of Esdras,) together with the unwritten traditions relative to faith and manners, as strictly and in every sense canonical, and of the same authority as those undoubted books which had been copied from the Jewish into the Christian canon; and received the attestation of Christ and His Apostles: of which the inspiration was manifested by the character of their composers, and proved by the accomplishment of those prophecies which they contain. This canon was confirmed by severe anathemas against all who should reject it. And from this time the Roman Catholicks have endeavoured to maintain the canonical authority of these books, though their most strenuous advocates are obliged to allow that they were not received into the canon of Ezra. They are compelled to allow a superiority, as to external sanctions, to those uncontroverted books which are exclusively canonized in the earliest and most authentick catalogues of the Christian Church; and they labour to defend the decision of the council of Trent as to the Apocryphal writings, by appealing to the authority of preceding councils, of which the canons were never generally received, and which admitted the contested books as canonical only in a subordinate and secondary sense. It is therefore upon the most just and tenable grounds that our Church has framed her sixth article; where, in agreement with all Protestant churches, she adheres in her catalogue to those writings of which there never was any doubt; and, agreeably to the doctrine of the four Patriarchal churches of Jerusalem, Alexandria, Antioch, and Constantinople, rejects those books which are styled Apocryphal in our Bibles, though she read them, as St. Jerome observes did the Western church, "for example of life and instruction of manners." And it must be confessed in general, that notwithstanding some passages of exceptionable tendency, and some relations of improbable circumstances, they are books entitled to great respect: as written by persons who being intimately conversant with the sacred writings, had, as it were, imbibed their spirit, and caught their pious enthusiasm. Whoever reads them with attention, must occasionally be struck by the splendid sentiments, and sublime descriptions which they contain. They sometimes likewise present us with passages borrowed from the sacred writings, and with the finest imitations of inspired eloquence; they include perhaps some scattered fragments of Divine wisdom, and some traditional precepts derived from men enlightened by a prophetick spirit. They occasionally illustrate the accomplishment of prophecy; and throw light on the Scriptures by explaining the manners, sentiments, and history of the Jews. They bear then an indirect and impartial testimony to the truth of our religion; they are venerable for their antiquity, recommended by long established approbation, and in some measure consecrated to our regard by the commendations of the church, and by being annexed to the inspired writings. Where they are defective, they may have been perhaps injured or corrupted by subsequent additions, as not being watched over with such religious care as the sacred books. Those who are disposed to profit by their perusal, will find it not difficult, by the light of the inspired books, to discriminate and select what is excellent and consistent with truth, and to reject such objectionable particulars as prove them to be the production of unassisted and sometimes mistaken men. Dr. Gray.

It is worthy of remark, that the Roman Catholicks find in the Apocryphal books a colour for some few points in their religion, for which they can find no support in the real Word of God: and this seems to be a principal reason why they have maintained the authority of these books as equal to that of the writings of the Old and New Testament. Humphreys.

In conformity to the general practice of the early Christian Churches, the Church of England still continues the use of the Apocryphal books in her publick service; though not with any design to lessen the authority of canonical Scripture, which she expressly affirms to be the only rule of faith; declaring that "the Church doth read the other books for an example of life and instruction of manners, but yet doth not apply them to establish any doctrine." Nor is there any one Sunday in the year, that has any of its lessons taken from the Apocrypha: for, as the greatest assemblies of Christians are on those days, it is wisely ordered that they should then be instructed out of the undisputed word of God. Wheatley.

I. ESDRAS.

INTRODUCTION.

THE first book of Esdras, or Ezra, (for the name is the same,) was certainly not written by Ezra, whose authentick work it contradicts in many particulars: and it has no pretensions to be revered as the production of an inspired person, although great part of it be extracted from the sacred writings.

It is generally supposed to have been the work of some Hellenistick Jew; that is, of a Jew resident in some country where the Greek language was spoken. It is uncertain at what time it was composed; but, since the particulars contained in it are related by Josephus, it was probably written before the time of that historian, who died about the year 93 of the Christian era. The book, though in its style it has much of the Hebrew idiom, was probably never extant in that language; at least, it was certainly not admitted into the Hebrew canon. It was annexed however to some copies of the Septuagint, or authorized Greek version; and placed in some manuscripts before the book of Ezra, that of Nehemiah being inserted between the two. Standing in that order, it was called the first book of Ezra; and the authentick work of Ezra, together with that of Nehemiah, which seems to have been joined with it, was called the second book of Ezra. This arrangement was probably adopted with reference to the chronological order of the events described. In some Greek editions, however, this book is placed, with more propriety as to its character, between the Song of the Three Children, and the Wisdom of Solomon.

This book was publickly read in the Greek Church; and was considered by many of the ancient fathers as a respectable work, but never as of equal authority with the canonical books.

The name of Ezra, it should be observed, was at all times particularly reverenced by the Jews, who were accustomed, in honour of his memory, to remark, that he was worthy that the law should have been given by his hands to Israel, if Moses had not been before him. In consequence of this reputation, numberless suspicious works were published at different times under his name, which were received as authentick by the credulous and unlearned.

The first book of Esdras begins by a description of the magnificent passover celebrated by king Josias; it afterwards relates the death of that prince, and the history of his successors till the capture of Jerusalem, all taken from the two last chapters of 2 Chronicles. In the third and fourth chapters is related a contest for a prize held before king Darius between three of his guards. Zerubbabel is declared the conqueror; and, being in consequence permitted to ask whatever he pleased, humbly implored Darius to fulfil the promise he had made of rebuilding Jerusalem and the temple; Darius immediately complied, and afforded the Jews every assistance in the accomplishment of the work.

The rest of the work, which is chiefly compiled from the histories of Ezra and Nehemiah, contains some circumstances of an improbable and contradictory character. There is nothing in it exceptionable with respect to doctrine or precept; but much doubtful matter is mixed with its accounts, and many particulars are introduced which cannot be reconciled with chronological order, and the relations of authentick Scripture. Dr. Gray, Calmet.

In the sixth Article of our Church, the first and second apocryphal books of Esdras are called the third and fourth books of Esdras; the canonical books of Ezra and Nehemiah being there called the first and second books of Esdras.

CHAP. I.

Before CHRIST about 625. 1 Josias his charge to the priests and Levites. 7 A great passover is kept. 22 His death is much lamented. 34 His successors. 53 The temple, city, and people are destroyed. 56 The rest are carried unto Babylon.

[a] 2 Kings 22. 21. 2 Chron. 35. 1. AND Josias held the [a] feast of the passover in Jerusalem unto his Lord, and offered the passover the fourteenth day of the first month;

2 Having set the priests according to their daily courses, being arrayed in long garments, in the temple of the Lord.

3 And he spake unto the Levites, the holy ministers of Israel, that they should hallow themselves unto the Lord, to set the holy ark of the Lord in the house that king Solomon the son of David had built:

4 And said, Ye shall no more bear the ark upon your shoulders: now therefore serve the Lord your God, and minister unto his people Israel, and prepare you after your families and kindreds,

5 According as David the king of Israel prescribed, and according to the magnificence of Solomon his son: and standing in the temple according to the several dignity of the families of you the Levites, who minister in the presence of your brethren the children of Israel,

6 Offer the passover in order, and make ready the sacrifices for your brethren, and keep the passover according to the commandment of the Lord, which was given unto Moses.

7 And unto the people that was found there Josias gave thirty thousand lambs and kids, and three thousand calves: these things were given of the king's allowance, according as he promised, to the people, to the priests, and to the Levites.

‖ Or, Jehiel. 8 And Helkias, Zacharias, and ‖ Syelus, the governors of the temple, gave to the priests for the passover two thousand and six hundred sheep, and three hundred calves.

9 And Jeconias, and Samaias, and Nathanael his brother, and Assabias, and Ochiel, and Joram, captains over thousands, gave to the Levites for the passover five thousand sheep, and ‖ seven hundred calves.

‖ Or, Six hundred calves, 2 Chron. 35. 9. 10 And when these things were done, the priests and Levites, having the unleavened bread, stood in very comely order according to the kindreds, 11 And according to the several dignities of the fathers, before the people, to offer to the Lord, as it is written in the book of Moses: [b] and thus did they in the morning.

Before CHRIST about 624.

12 And they roasted the passover with fire, as appertaineth: as for the sacrifices, they sod them in brass pots and pans ‖ with a good savour,

[b] 2 Chron. 35. 12. and as of the bullocks.

‖ Or, with good speed, or, willingly. 2 Chron. 35. 13.

13 And set them before all the people: and afterward they prepared for themselves, and for the priests their brethren, the sons of Aaron.

14 For the priests offered the fat until night: and the Levites prepared for themselves, and the priests their brethren, the sons of Aaron.

15 The holy singers also, the sons of Asaph, were in their order, according to the appointment [c] of David, to wit, Asaph, Zacharias, and Jeduthun, who was [d] of the king's retinue.

[c] 2 Chron. 35. 15. of David and Asaph. [d] 2 Chron. 35. 15. the king's seer.

16 Moreover the porters were at every gate; it was not lawful for any to go from his ordinary service: for their brethren the Levites prepared for them.

17 Thus were the things that belonged to the sacrifices of the Lord accomplished in that day, that they might hold the passover,

18 And offer sacrifices upon the altar of the Lord, according to the commandment of king Josias.

19 So the children of Israel which were present held the passover at that time, and the feast of sweet bread seven days.

20 And such a passover was not kept in Israel since the time of the prophet Samuel.

21 Yea, all the kings of Israel held not such a passover as Josias, and the priests, and the Levites, and the Jews, held with all Israel that were found dwelling at Jerusalem.

22 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josias was this passover kept.

23 And the works of Josias were upright before his Lord with an heart full of godliness.

24 As for the things that came to pass in his time, they were written in former times, concerning those that sinned, and ‖ did wickedly against the Lord above all people and kingdoms, and how they grieved him ‖ exceedingly, so that the words of the Lord rose up against Israel.

‖ Or, were ungodly. ‖ Or, acutely.

25 [e] Now after all these acts of Josias it came to pass, that Pharaoh the king of Egypt came to raise war at Carchamis upon Euphrates: and Josias went out against him.

[e] 2 Chron. 35. 20. about 610.

Chap. I. ver. 1. As the circumstances related in this book are for the most part repeated from the canonical books of Scripture, the reader is referred, for the notes which occur relating to them, to the passages pointed out in the margin.

Before CHRIST about 610. 26 But the king of Egypt sent to him, saying, What have I to do with thee, O king of Judea?

27 I am not sent out from the Lord God against thee; for my war is upon Euphrates: and now the Lord is with me, yea, the Lord is with me hasting me forward: depart from me, and be not against the Lord.

28 Howbeit Josias did not turn back his chariot from him, but undertook to fight with him, not regarding the words of the prophet Jeremy spoken by the mouth of the Lord:

29 But joined battle with him in the plain of Magiddo, and the princes came against king Josias.

30 Then said the king unto his servants, Carry me away out of the battle; for I am very weak. And immediately his servants took him away out of the battle.

31 Then gat he up upon his second chariot; and being brought back to Jerusalem died, and was buried in his father's sepulchre.

32 And in all Jewry they mourned for Josias, yea, Jeremy the prophet lamented for Josias, and the chief men with the women made lamentation for him unto this day: and this was given out for an ordinance to be done continually in all the nation of Israel.

33 These things are written in the book of the stories of the kings of Judah, and every one of the acts that Josias did, and his glory, and his understanding in the law of the Lord, and the things that he had done before, and the things now recited, are reported in the book of the kings of Israel and Judea.

about 610. [a]2 Kings 23. 30. 2 Chron. 36. 1. 34 [a]And the people took Joachaz the son of Josias, and made him king instead of Josias his father, when he was twenty and three years old.

35 And he reigned in Judea and in Jerusalem three months: and then the king of Egypt deposed him from reigning in Jerusalem.

36 And he set a tax upon the land of an hundred talents of silver and one talent of gold.

37 The king of Egypt also made king Joacim his brother king of Judea and Jerusalem.

38 And he bound Joacim and the nobles: but Zaraces his brother he apprehended, and brought him out of Egypt.

about 610. [a]2 Chron. 36. 4. [b]Joiakim, or Eliakim.

39 Five and twenty years old was [b]Joacim when he was made king in the land of Judea and Jerusalem; and he did evil before the Lord. Before CHRIST about 606.

40 Wherefore against him Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon came up, and bound him with a chain of brass, and carried him into Babylon.

41 Nabuchodonosor also took of the holy vessels of the Lord, and carried them away, and set them in his own temple at Babylon.

42 But those things that are recorded of him, and of his uncleanness and impiety, are written in the chronicles of the kings.

about 599. 43 And Joacim his son reigned in his stead: he was made king being eighteen years old;

44 And reigned but three months and ten days in Jerusalem; and did evil before the Lord.

45 So after a year Nabuchodonosor sent and caused him to be brought into Babylon with the holy vessels of the Lord;

599. 46 And made Zedechias king of Judea and Jerusalem, when he was one and twenty years old; and he reigned eleven years:

47 And he did evil also in the sight of the Lord, and cared not for the words that were spoken unto him by the prophet Jeremy from the mouth of the Lord.

598. 48 And after that king Nabuchodonosor had made him to swear by the name of the Lord, he forswore himself, and rebelled; and hardening his neck, and his heart, he transgressed the laws of the Lord God of Israel.

49 The governors also of the people and of the priests did many things against the laws, and passed all the pollutions of all nations, and defiled the temple of the Lord, which was sanctified in Jerusalem.

50 Nevertheless the God of their fathers sent by his messenger to call them back, because he spared them and his tabernacle also.

51 But they had his messengers in derision; and, look, when the Lord spake unto them, they made a sport of his prophets:

52 So far forth, that he, being wroth with his people for their great ungodliness, commanded the kings of the Chaldees to come up against them;

53 Who slew their young men with the sword, yea, even within the compass of their holy temple, and spared neither young man nor maid, old man nor child, among them; for he delivered all into their hands.

54 And they took all the holy vessels of

Before CHRIST 593. the Lord, both great and small, with the vessels of the ark of God, and the king's treasures, and carried them away into Babylon.

about 588. 55 As for the house of the Lord, they burnt it, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem, and set fire upon her towers:

56 And as for her glorious things, they never ceased till they had consumed and brought them all to nought: and the people that were not slain with the sword he carried unto Babylon:

57 Who became servants to him and his children, till the Persians reigned, to fulfil

[b] Jer. 25. 11. & 29. 10. the [b] word of the Lord spoken by the mouth of Jeremy:

58 Until the land had enjoyed her sabbaths, the whole time of her desolation

‖ Or, keep sabbath. shall she ‖ rest, until the full term of seventy years.

CHAP. II.

1 Cyrus is moved by God to build the temple, 5 and giveth leave to the Jews to return, and contribute to it. 11 He delivereth again the vessels which had been taken thence. 25 Artaxerxes forbiddeth the Jews to build any more.

about 536. [a] 2 Chron. 36. 22. Ezra 1. 1, &c. IN the [a] first year of Cyrus king of the Persians, that the word of the Lord might be accomplished, that he had promised by the mouth of Jeremy;

2 The Lord raised up the spirit of Cyrus the king of the Persians, and he made proclamation through all his kingdom, and also by writing,

3 Saying, Thus saith Cyrus king of the Persians; The Lord of Israel, the most high Lord, hath made me king of the whole world,

4 And commanded me to build him an house at Jerusalem in Jewry.

5 If therefore there be any of you that are of his people, let the Lord, even his Lord, be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem that is in Judea, and build the

‖ Or, this. house of the Lord of Israel: for ‖ he is the Lord that dwelleth in Jerusalem.

6 Whosoever then dwell in the places about, let them help him, those, I say, that are his neighbours, with gold, and with silver,

7 With gifts, with horses, and with cattle, and other things, which have been set forth by vow, for the temple of the Lord at Jerusalem.

Before CHRIST about 536.

8 ¶ Then the chief of the families of Judea and of the tribe of Benjamin stood up; the priests also, and the Levites, and all they whose mind the Lord had moved to go up, and to build an house for the Lord at Jerusalem,

9 And they that dwelt round about them, and helped them in all things with silver and gold, with † horses and cattle, and with very many free gifts of a great number whose minds were stirred up thereto.

† Heb. substance, Ezra 1. 6.

10 King Cyrus also brought forth the holy vessels, which Nabuchodonosor had carried away from Jerusalem, and had set up in his temple of idols.

11 Now when Cyrus king of the Persians had brought them forth, he delivered them to Mithridates his treasurer:

12 And by him they were delivered to † Sanabassar the governor of Judea.

13 And this was the number of them; A thousand golden cups, and a thousand of silver, † censers of silver twenty nine, vials of gold thirty, and of silver [b] two thousand four hundred and ten, and a thousand other vessels.

Ezra 1. 8.
[b] Ezra 1. 9, 10, but four hundred and ten.

14 So all the vessels of gold and of silver, which were carried away, were [c] five thousand four hundred threescore and nine.

about 522.
[c] Ezra 1. 11, but five thousand four hundred.

15 These were brought back by Sanabassar, together with them of the captivity, from Babylon to Jerusalem.

16 [d] But in the time of Artaxerxes king of the Persians Belemus, and Mithridates, and Tabellius, and † Rathumus, Beelteth-mus, and † Semellius the secretary, with others that were in commission with them, dwelling in Samaria and other places, wrote unto him against them that dwelt in Judea and Jerusalem these letters following;

17 To king Artaxerxes our lord, Thy servants, Rathumus the storywriter, and Semellius the scribe, and the rest of their council, and the judges that are in Celosyria and Phenice.

marketplaces, and repair the walls of it, and do lay the foundation of the temple.

19 Now if this city and the walls thereof be made up again, they will not only refuse to give tribute, but also rebel against kings.

20 And forasmuch as the things pertaining to the temple are now in hand, we think it meet not to neglect such a matter,

21 But to speak unto our lord the king, to the intent that, if it be thy pleasure, it may be sought out in the books of thy fathers:

22 And thou shalt find in the chronicles what is written concerning these things, and shalt understand that that city was rebellious, troubling both kings and cities:

23 And that the Jews were rebellious, and raised always wars therein; for the which cause even this city was made desolate.

24 Wherefore now we do declare unto thee, O lord the king, that if this city be built again, and the walls thereof set up anew, thou shalt from henceforth have no passage into Celosyria and Phenice.

25 Then the king wrote back again to Rathumus the storywriter, to Beeltethmus, to Semellius the scribe, and to the rest that were in commission, and dwellers in Samaria and Syria and Phenice, after this manner;

26 I have read the epistle which ye have sent unto me: therefore I commanded to make diligent search, and it hath been found that that city was from the beginning practising against kings;

27 And the men therein were given to rebellion and war: and that mighty kings and fierce were in Jerusalem, who reigned and exacted tributes in Celosyria and Phenice.

28 Now therefore I have commanded to hinder those men from building the city, and heed to be taken that there be no more done in it;

29 And that those wicked workers proceed no further to the annoyance of kings.

30 Then king Artaxerxes his letters being read, Rathumus, and Semellius the scribe, and the rest that were in commission with them, removing in haste toward Jerusalem with a troop of horsemen and ‖ a multitude of people in battle array, began to hinder the builders; and the building of the temple in Jerusalem ceased until the second year of the reign of Darius king of the Persians.

CHAP. III.

4 Three strive to excel each other in wise speeches. 9 They refer themselves to the judgment of the king. 18 The first declareth the strength of wine.

NOW when Darius reigned, he made a great feast unto all his subjects, and unto all his houshold, and unto all the princes of Media and Persia,

2 And to all the governors and captains and lieutenants that were under him, from India unto Ethiopia, of an hundred twenty and seven provinces.

3 And when they had eaten and drunken, and being satisfied were gone home, then Darius the king went into his bedchamber, and slept, and soon after awaked.

4 Then three young men, that were of the guard that kept the king's body, spake one to another;

5 Let every one of us speak a sentence: he that shall overcome, and whose sentence shall seem wiser than the others, unto him shall the king Darius give great gifts, and great things in token of victory:

6 As, to be clothed in purple, to drink in gold, and to sleep upon gold, and a chariot with bridles of gold, and an headtire of fine linen, and a chain about his neck:

7 And he shall sit next to Darius because of his wisdom, and shall be called Darius his cousin.

8 And then every one wrote his sentence, sealed it, and laid it under king Darius his pillow;

9 And said that, when the king is risen, some will give him the writings; and of whose side the king and the three princes of Persia shall judge that his sentence is the wisest, to him shall the victory be given, as was appointed.

10 The first wrote, Wine is the strongest.

Chap. III. In the third and fourth chapters follows a narration of three young men that were of Darius's guard contending for the reward of a problem, or sentence, propounded by every one of them. The arguments, it must be confessed, are weighty, and very proper on the occasion; but it is obvious that the writer makes these candidates to prescribe, as it were, to the king what gifts and rewards he shall bestow on them in token of victory: and, besides, the rewards themselves are too magnificent for such a contest, and more proper to be bestowed on a general who had gained a signal victory, or conquered divers provinces. His design in the narrative seems to have been, to embellish the account of Zerubbabel by a circumstance so honourable to him as the obtaining the prize. As the true Ezra takes no notice of it, it seems to be a traditionary story founded probably on truth, but mixed with some circumstances of less authority. Arnald, Calmet.

11 The second wrote, The king is strongest.

12 The third wrote, Women are strongest: but above all things Truth beareth away the victory.

13 ¶ Now when the king was risen up, they took their writings, and delivered them unto him, and so he read them:

14 And sending forth he called all the princes of Persia and Media, and the governors, and the captains, and the lieutenants, and the chief officers;

15 And sat him down in the ‖ royal seat of judgment; and the writings were read before them.

‖ Or, council.

16 And he said, Call the young men, and they shall declare their own sentences. So they were called, and came in.

17 And he said unto them, Declare unto us your mind concerning the writings. Then began the first, who had spoken of the strength of wine;

18 And he said thus, O ye men, how exceeding strong is wine! it causeth all men to err that drink it:

19 It maketh the mind of the king and of the fatherless child to be all one; of the bondman and of the freeman, of the poor man and of the rich:

20 It turneth also every thought into jollity and mirth, so that a man remembereth neither sorrow nor debt:

21 And it maketh every heart rich, so that a man remembereth neither king nor governor; and it maketh to speak all things by talents:

22 And when they are in their cups, they forget their love both to friends and brethren, and a little after draw out swords:

23 But when they are from the wine, they remember not what they have done.

24 O ye men, is not wine the strongest, that enforceth to do thus? And when he had so spoken, he held his peace.

CHAP. IV.

1 The second declareth the power of a king. 13 The third the force of women, 33 and of truth. The third is judged to be wisest, 47 and obtaineth letters of the king to build Jerusalem. 58 He praiseth God, and showeth his brethren what he had done.

THEN the second, that had spoken of the strength of the king, began to say,

2 O ye men, do not men excel in strength, that ‖ bear rule over sea and land, and all things in them?

‖ Or, have the command.

3 But yet the king is more mighty: for he is lord of all these things, and hath dominion over them; and whatsoever he commandeth them they do.

4 If he bid them make war the one against the other, they do it: if he send them out against the enemies, they go, and break down mountains, walls, and towers.

5 They slay and are slain, and transgress not the king's commandment: if they get the victory, they bring all to the king, as well the spoil, as all things else.

6 Likewise for those that are no soldiers, and have not to do with wars, but use husbandry, when they have reaped again that which they had sown, they bring it to the king, and compel one another to pay tribute unto the king.

7 And yet he is but one man: if he command to kill, they kill; if he command to spare, they spare;

8 If he command to smite, they smite; if he command to make desolate, they make desolate; if he command to build, they build;

9 If he command to cut down, they cut down; if he command to plant, they plant.

10 So all his people and his armies obey him: furthermore he lieth down, he eateth and drinketh, and taketh his rest:

11 And these keep watch round about him, neither ‖ may any one depart, and do his own business, neither disobey they him in any thing.

‖ Or, can.

12 O ye men, how should not the king be mightiest, when in such sort he is obeyed? And he held his tongue.

13 ¶ Then the third, who had spoken of women, and of the truth, (this was Zorobabel) began to speak.

14 O ye men, it is not the great king, nor the multitude of men, neither is it wine, that † excelleth; who is it then that ruleth them, or hath the lordship over them? are they not women?

15 Women have borne the king and all the people that bear rule by sea and land.

16 Even of them came they: and they nourished them up that planted the vineyards, from whence the wine cometh.

17 These also make garments for men;

Chap. IV. ver. 13. — (this was Zorobabel)] The author here speaks of Zerubbabel as one of the king's (Darius's) guards at Babylon; but, on the other hand, we learn from the true Ezra that Zerubbabel was at this time at Jerusalem, Ezra 4. 2. Calmet.

these bring glory unto men; and without women cannot men be.

18 Yea, and if men have gathered together gold and silver, or any other goodly thing, do they not love a woman which is comely in favour and beauty?

19 And letting all those things go, do they not gape, and even with open mouth fix their eyes fast on her; and have not all men more desire unto her than unto silver or gold, or any goodly thing whatsoever?

20 A man leaveth his own father that brought him up, and his own country, and cleaveth unto his wife.

21 He sticketh not to spend his life with his wife, and remembereth neither father, nor mother, nor country.

22 By this also ye must know that women have dominion over you: do ye not labour and toil, and give and bring all to the woman?

23 Yea, a man taketh his sword, and goeth his way to rob and to steal, to sail upon the sea and upon rivers;

24 And looketh upon a lion, and goeth in the darkness; and when he hath stolen, spoiled, and robbed, he bringeth it to his love.

25 Wherefore a man loveth his wife better than father or mother.

26 Yea, many there be that have ‖ run out of their wits for women, and become servants for their sakes.

27 Many also have perished, have erred, and sinned, for women.

28 And now do ye not believe me? is not the king great in his power? do not all regions fear to touch him?

29 Yet did I see him and Apame the king's concubine, the daughter of the admirable ‖ Bartacus, sitting at the right hand of the king, † Jos. Ant. lib. 11. cap. 3. Rabaces Thamasus.

30 And taking the crown from the king's head, and setting it upon her own head; she also struck the king with her left hand.

31 And yet ‖ for all this the king gaped and gazed upon her with open mouth: if she laughed upon him, he laughed also: but if she took any displeasure at him, the king was fain to flatter, that she might ‖ be reconciled to him again.

‖ Or, be friends with him.

32 O ye men, how can it be but women should be strong, seeing they do thus?

33 Then the king and the princes looked one upon another: so he began to speak of the truth.

34 O ye men, are not women strong? great is the earth, high is the heaven, swift is the sun in his course, for he compasseth the heavens round about, and fetcheth his course again to his own place in one day.

35 Is he not great that maketh these things? therefore great is the truth, and stronger than all things.

36 All the earth ‖ calleth upon the truth, and the heaven blesseth it: all works shake and tremble at it, and with it is no unrighteous thing.

‖ Or, praiseth the truth, Athanasius.

37 Wine is wicked, the king is wicked, women are wicked, all the children of men are wicked, and such are all their wicked works; and there is no truth in them; in their unrighteousness also they shall perish.

38 As for the truth, it endureth, and is always strong; it liveth and conquereth for evermore.

39 With her there is no accepting of persons or rewards; but she doeth the things that are just, and refraineth from all unjust and wicked things; and all men do well like of her works.

40 Neither in her judgment is any unrighteousness; and she is the strength, kingdom, power, and majesty, of all ages. Blessed be the God of truth.

41 And with that he held his peace. And all the people then shouted, and said, Great is Truth, and mighty above all things.

42 Then said the king unto him, Ask what thou wilt more than is appointed in the writing, and we will give it thee, because thou art found wisest; and thou shalt sit next me, and shalt be called my cousin.

43 Then said he unto the king, Remember thy vow, which thou hast vowed to build Jerusalem, in the day when thou camest to thy kingdom,

44 And to send away all the vessels that were taken away out of Jerusalem, which Cyrus set apart, when he vowed to destroy Babylon, and to send them again thither.

45 Thou also hast vowed to build up the temple, which the Edomites burned when Judea was made desolate by the Chaldees.

44. And to send away all the vessels — which Cyrus set apart,] It is here affirmed, that Zerubbabel entreated Darius to send to Jerusalem the holy vessels, which Cyrus intended to have sent, as if Cyrus had not executed the design: but this is contrary to what the true Ezra affirms, and to what the author of this book himself affirms at chap. vi. 18, 19. Calmet.

46 And now, O lord the king, this is that which I require, and which I desire of thee, and this is the princely liberality proceeding from thyself: I desire therefore that thou make good the vow, the performance whereof with thine own mouth thou hast vowed to the King of heaven.

47 Then Darius the king stood up, and kissed him, and wrote letters for him unto all the treasurers and lieutenants and captains and governors, that they should safely convey on their way both him, and all those that go up with him to build Jerusalem.

48 He wrote letters also unto the lieutenants that were in Celosyria and Phenice, and unto them in Libanus, that they should bring cedar wood from Libanus unto Jerusalem, and that they should build the city with him.

49 Moreover he wrote for all the Jews that went out of his realm up into Jewry, concerning their freedom, that no officer, no ruler, no lieutenant, nor ‖ treasurer, should forcibly enter into their doors;

50 And that all the country which they hold should be free without tribute; and that the Edomites should give over the villages of the Jews which then they held:

51 Yea, that there should be yearly given twenty talents to the building of the temple, until the time that it were built;

52 And other ten talents yearly, to maintain the burnt offerings upon the altar every day, as they had a commandment to offer seventeen:

53 And that all they that went from Babylon to build the city should have free liberty, as well they as their posterity, and all the priests that went away.

54 He wrote also concerning the charges, and the priests' vestments wherein they minister;

55 And likewise for the charges of the Levites, to be given them until the day that the house were finished, and Jerusalem builded up.

56 And he commanded to give to all that kept the city ‖ pensions and wages.

‖ Or, portions of land.

57 He sent away also all the vessels from Babylon, that Cyrus had set apart; and all that Cyrus had given in commandment, the same charged he also to be done, and sent unto Jerusalem.

58 Now when this young man was gone forth, he lifted up his face to heaven toward Jerusalem, and praised the King of heaven, 59 And said, From thee cometh victory, from thee cometh wisdom, and thine is the glory, and I am thy servant.

60 Blessed art thou, who hast given me wisdom: for to thee I give thanks, O Lord of our fathers.

61 And so he took the letters, and went out, and came unto Babylon, and told it all his brethren.

62 And they praised the God of their fathers, because he had given them freedom and liberty

63 To go up, and to build Jerusalem, and the temple which is called by his name: and they feasted with instruments of musick and gladness seven days.

46. — that thou make good the vow, &c.] If this had been the case, that Darius had engaged himself by a solemn vow to rebuild their temple, there would have been no need to search the archives with such diligence for the decree of Cyrus to that effect, as is represented at Ezra vi. 1. Calmet.

47. — and wrote letters for him unto all the treasurers &c.] That which is here related does not accord with the true history of Ezra. For, if it had been true that Darius, when he sent back the Jews to Jerusalem under Zerubbabel, wrote to his officers residing in that country in their favour, those officers would never have sent to inquire by what authority they built the temple; nor would Zerubbabel have had recourse to the ancient permission granted by Cyrus to the Jews, rather than to this ordinance of Darius. Before CHRIST about 536. the sons of the servants of Solomon, were three hundred seventy and two.

37 Neither could they shew their families, nor their stock, how they were of Israel: the sons of [c] Ladan, the son of [d] Ban, the sons of [e] Necodan, six hundred fifty and two.

38 And of the priests that usurped the office of the priesthood, and were not found: the sons of [h] Obdia, the sons of [i] Accoz, the sons of [k] Addus, who married Augia one of the daughters of Berzelus, and was named after his name.

39 And when the description of the kindred of these men was sought in the register, and was not found, they were removed from executing the office of the priesthood:

40 For unto them said ‖ Nehemias and Atharias, that they should not be partakers of the holy things, till there arose up an high priest clothed with † doctrine and truth.

41 So of Israel, from them of twelve years old and upward, they were all in number forty thousand, beside menservants and womenservants two thousand three hundred and sixty.

42 Their ‖ menservants and handmaids were seven thousand three hundred forty and seven: the singing men and singing women, two hundred forty and five:

48 Four hundred thirty and five camels, seven thousand thirty and six horses, two hundred forty and five mules, [l] five thousand five hundred twenty and five ‖ beasts used to the yoke.

44 And certain of the chief of their families, when they came to the temple of God that is in Jerusalem, vowed to set up the house again in his own place according to their ability,

45 And to give into the holy treasury of the works a thousand pounds of gold, five thousand of silver, and an hundred priestly vestments.

46 And so dwelt the priests and the Levites and the people in Jerusalem, and in the country, the singers also and the porters; and all Israel in their villages.

47 But when the seventh month was at hand, and when the children of Israel were every man in his own place, they came all together with one consent into the open place of the first ‖ gate which is toward the east.

48 Then stood up Jesus the son of Josedec, and his brethren the priests, and Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and his brethren, and made ready the altar of the God of Israel, 49 To offer burnt sacrifices upon it, according as it is expressly commanded in the book of Moses the man of God.

50 And there were gathered unto them out of the other nations of the land, and they erected the altar upon his own place, because all the nations of the land were at enmity with them, and oppressed them; and they offered sacrifices according to the time, and burnt offerings to the Lord both morning and evening.

51 Also they held the feast of tabernacles, as it is commanded in the law, and offered sacrifices daily, as was meet:

52 And after that, the ‖ continual oblations, and the sacrifice of the sabbaths, and of the new moons, and of all holy feasts.

53 And all they that had † made any vow to God began to offer sacrifices to God from the first day of the seventh month, although the temple of the Lord was not yet built.

54 And they gave unto the masons and carpenters money, meat, and drink, with chearfulness.

55 Unto them of Zidon also and Tyre they gave carrs, that they should bring cedar trees from Libanus, which should be brought by floats to the haven of Joppe, according as it was commanded them by Cyrus king of the Persians.

56 And in the second year and second month after his coming to the temple of God at Jerusalem began Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and Jesus the son of Josedec, and their brethren, and the priests, and the Levites, and all they that were come unto Jerusalem out of the captivity:

57 And they laid the foundation of the house of God in the first day of the second month, in the second year after they were come to Jewry and Jerusalem.

Chap. V. ver. 48. — and made ready the altar &c.] Thus the author of this book places the consecration of the altar, and the renewal of the sacrifices, after the departure of Zerubbabel and the second year of Darius, ver. 6; whereas the true Ezra informs us, that this happened in the reign of Cyrus, and before Artaxerxes had forbidden the continuance of the rebuilding of the temple, Ezra iii. 1—8; iv. 13. Calmet.

Before CHRIST about 538.

58 ‖ And they appointed the Levites from twenty years old over the works of the Lord. Then stood up Jesus, and his sons and brethren, and Cadmiel his brother, and the sons of Madiabun, with the sons of Joda the son of Eliadun, with their sons and brethren, all Levites, with one accord ‖ setters forward of the business, labouring to advance the works in the house of God. So the workmen built the temple of the Lord.

‖ See Ezra 3. 9.

‖ Or, overseers, or, encouragers of them that wrought in the house of the Lord.

59 And the priests stood arrayed in their vestments with musical instruments and trumpets; and the Levites the sons of Asaph had cymbals, 60 Singing songs of thanksgiving, and praising the Lord, ‖ according as David the king of Israel had ordained.

‖ Or, after the manner of David king of Israel.

61 And they sung with loud voices songs to the praise of the Lord, because his mercy and glory is for ever in all Israel.

62 And all the people sounded trumpets, and shouted with a loud voice, singing songs of thanksgiving unto the Lord for the rearing up of the house of the Lord.

63 [m] Also of the priests and Levites, and of the chief of their families, the ancients who had seen the former house came to the building of this with weeping and great crying.

[m] Ezra 3. 12, 13.

64 But many with trumpets and joy shouted with loud voice,

65 Insomuch that the trumpets might not be ‖ heard for the weeping of the people: yet the multitude sounded marvellously, so that it was heard afar off.

‖ Or, discerned.

66 Wherefore when the enemies of the tribe of Judah and Benjamin heard it, they came to know what that noise of trumpets should mean.

67 And they perceived that they that were of the captivity did build the temple unto the Lord God of Israel.

68 So they went to Zorobabel and Jesus, and to the chief of the families, and said unto them, We will build together with you.

69 For we likewise, as ye, do obey your Lord, and do sacrifice unto him from the days of ‖ Azbazareth the king of the Assyrians, who brought us hither.

‖ Or, Esar-haddon, Ezra 4. 2. about 534.

70 Then Zorobabel and Jesus and the chief of the families of Israel said unto them, It is not for us and you to build together an house unto the Lord our God.

71 We ourselves alone will build unto the Lord of Israel, according as Cyrus the king of the Persians hath commanded us.

72 But the heathen of the land lying heavy upon the inhabitants of Judea, and holding them strait, hindered their building;

Before CHRIST about 534.

73 And by their secret plots, and popular persuasions and commotions, they hindered the finishing of the building all the time that king Cyrus lived: so they were hindered from building for the space of two years, ‖ until the reign of Darius.

‖ Or, until the second year of Darius, Ezra 4. 5, 6, 7.

CHAP. VI.

1 The prophets stir up the people to build the temple. 8 Darius is solicited to hinder it: 27 but he doth further it by all means, 32 and threateneth those that shall hinder it.

NOW in the second year of the reign of Darius Aggeus and Zacharias the son of ‖ Addo, the prophets, prophesied unto the Jews in Jewry and Jerusalem in the name of the Lord God of Israel, ‖ which was upon them.

about 520.

‖ Or, Iddo.

‖ Or, which was called on them.

2 Then stood up Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and Jesus the son of Josedec, and began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, the prophets of the Lord being with them, and helping them.

3 [n] At the same time came unto them ‖ Sisinnes the governor of Syria and Phenice, with ‖ Sathrabuzanes and his companions, and said unto them, [n] Ezra 5. 3.

‖ Or, Tatnai.

‖ Or, Shethar-boznai.

4 By whose appointment do ye build this house and this roof, and perform all the other things? and who are the workmen that perform these things?

5 Nevertheless the elders of the Jews obtained favour, because the Lord had visited the captivity;

6 And they were not hindered from building, until such time as signification was given unto Darius concerning them, and an answer received.

7 The copy of the letters which Sisinnes, governor of Syria and Phenice, and Sathrabuzanes, with their companions, rulers in Syria and Phenice, wrote and sent unto Darius; To king Darius, greeting:

about 518.

8 Let all things be known unto our lord the king, that being come into the country of Judea, and entered into the city of Jerusalem, we found in the city of Jerusalem the ancients of the Jews that were of the captivity

9 Building an house unto the Lord, great and new, of hewn and costly stones, and the timber already laid upon the walls.

10 And those works are done with great speed, and the work goeth on prosperously in their hands, and with all glory and diligence is it made.

Before CHRIST about 519.

11 Then asked we these elders, saying, By whose commandment build ye this house, and lay the foundations of these works?

12 Therefore to the intent that we might give knowledge unto thee by writing, we demanded of them who were the chief doers, and we required of them the names in writing of their principal men.

13 So they gave us this answer, We are the servants of the Lord which made heaven and earth.

14 And as for this house, it was builded many years ago by a king of Israel great and strong, and was finished.

15 But when our fathers provoked God unto wrath, and sinned against the Lord of Israel, which is in heaven, he gave them over into the power of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon, of the Chaldees;

16 Who pulled down the house, and burned it, and carried away the people captives unto Babylon.

17 But in the first year that king Cyrus reigned over the country of Babylon Cyrus the king wrote to build up this house.

18 And the holy vessels of gold and of silver, that Nabuchodonosor had carried away out of the house at Jerusalem, and had set them in his own temple, those Cyrus the king brought forth again out of the temple at Babylon, and they were delivered to ‖ Zorobabel and to Sanabassarus the ruler,

‖ Or, Zorobabel, which is also Sanabassar the ruler, so as Zorobabel seemeth to be added to the text, Ezra 1. 8.

19 With commandment that he should carry away the same vessels, and put them in the temple at Jerusalem; and that the temple of the Lord should be built in his place.

20 Then the same Sanabassarus, being come hither, laid the foundations of the house of the Lord at Jerusalem; and from that time to this being still a building, it is not yet fully ended.

21 Now therefore, if it seem good unto the king, let search be made among the ‖ records of king Cyrus:

22 And if it be found that the building of the house of the Lord at Jerusalem hath been done with the consent of king Cyrus, and if our lord the king be so minded, let him signify unto us thereof.

23 Then commanded king Darius to seek among the records at Babylon: and so at Ecbatana the palace, which is in the country of Media, there was found a ‖ roll wherein these things were recorded.

24 In the first year of the reign of Cyrus king Cyrus commanded that the house of the Lord at Jerusalem should be built again, where they do sacrifice with continual fire:

Before CHRIST about 518.

25 Whose height shall be sixty cubits, and the breadth sixty cubits, with three rows of hewn stones, and one row of new wood of that country; and the expences thereof to be given out of the house of king Cyrus:

26 And that the holy vessels of the house of the Lord, both of gold and silver, that Nabuchodonosor took out of the house at Jerusalem, and brought to Babylon, should be restored to the house at Jerusalem, and be set in the place where they were before.

27 And also he commanded that Sisinnes the governor of Syria and Phenice, and Sathrabuzanes, and their companions, and those which were appointed rulers in Syria and Phenice, should be careful not to meddle with the place, but suffer Zorobabel, the servant of the Lord, and governor of Judea, and the elders of the Jews, to build the house of the Lord in that place.

28 I have commanded also to have it built up whole again; and that they look diligently to help those that be of the captivity of the Jews, till the house of the Lord be finished:

29 And out of the tribute of Celosyria and Phenice a portion carefully to be given these men for the sacrifices of the Lord, that is, to Zorobabel the governor, for bullocks, and rams, and lambs;

30 And also corn, salt, wine, and oil, and that continually every year without further question, according as the priests that be in Jerusalem shall signify to be daily spent:

31 That ‖ offerings may be made to the most high God for the king and for his children, and that they may pray for their lives.

32 And he commanded that whosoever should transgress, yea, or make light of any thing afore spoken or written, out of his own house should a tree be taken, and he thereon be hanged, and all his goods seized for the king.

33 The Lord therefore, whose name is there called upon, utterly destroy every king and nation, that stretcheth out his hand to hinder or endamage that house of the Lord in Jerusalem.

34 I Darius the king have ordained that according unto these things it be done with diligence.

[a] Ezra 6. 14. THEN [a] Sisinnes the governor of Celosyria and Phenice, and Sathrabuzanes, with their companions, following the commandments of king Darius,

2 Did very carefully oversee the holy works, assisting the ancients of the Jews and governors of the temple.

3 And so the holy works prospered, when Aggeus and Zacharias the prophets prophesied.

4 And they finished these things by the commandment of the Lord God of Israel, and with ‖ the consent of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes, kings of Persia.

5 And thus was the holy house finished in † the three and twentieth day of the month Adar, in the sixth year of Darius king of the Persians.

† Heb. the third day. Ezra 6. 15.

6 And the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and others that were of the captivity, that were added unto them, did according to the things written in the book of Moses.

7 And to the dedication of the temple of the Lord they offered an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs;

8 And twelve goats for the sin of all Israel, according to the number of the ‖ chief of the tribes of Israel.

9 The priests also and the Levites stood arrayed in their vestments, according to their † kindreds, in the service of the Lord God of Israel, according to the book of Moses: and the porters at every gate.

† Heb. divisions. Ezra 6. 18.

10 And the children of Israel ‖ that were of the captivity held the passover the fourteenth day of the first month, after that the priests and the Levites were sanctified.

11 They that were of the captivity were not all sanctified together: but the Levites were all sanctified together.

12 And so they offered the passover for all them of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and for themselves.

13 And the children of Israel that came out of the captivity did eat, even all they that had separated themselves from the abominations of the people of the land, and sought the Lord.

14 And they kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days, making merry before the Lord,

15 For that he had turned the ‖ counsel of the king of Assyria toward them, to strengthen their hands in the works of the Lord God of Israel.

AND after these things, when Artaxerxes the king of the Persians reigned, came Esdras the son of Saraias, the son of ‖ Ezerias, the son of Helchiah, the son of Salum, about 457.

‖ Azarias.

2 The son of Sadduc, the son of Achitob, the son of Amarias, the son of ‖ Ezias, the son of ‖ Meremoth, the son of Zaraias, the son of ‖ Savias, the son of Boccas, the son of Abisum, the son of Phinees, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron † the chief priest.

3 This Esdras went up from Babylon, as a scribe, being very ready in the law of Moses, that was given by the God of Israel.

4 And the king did him honour: for he found grace in his sight in all his requests.

5 There went up with him also certain of the children of Israel, of the priests, of the Levites, of the holy singers, porters, and ‖ ministers of the temple, unto Jerusalem,

‖ Or, Nethinims.

6 In ‖ the seventh year of the reign of Artaxerxes, in the fifth month, this was the king's seventh year; for they went from Babylon in the first day of the first month, and came to Jerusalem, according to the ‖ prosperous journey which the Lord gave them.

‖ See Ezra 7. 7, 8, 9. ‖ Or, success.

7 For Esdras had very great skill, so that he omitted nothing of the law and commandments of the Lord, but taught all Israel the ordinances and judgments.

8 Now the copy of the ‖ commission, which was written from Artaxerxes the king, and came to Esdras the priest and reader of the law of the Lord, is this that followeth;

9 King Artaxerxes unto Esdras the priest and reader of the law of the Lord sendeth greeting:

10 Having determined to deal graciously, I have given order, that such of the nation of the Jews, and of the priests and Levites, being within our realm, as are willing and desirous, should go with thee unto Jerusalem.

11 As many therefore as have a mind thereunto, let them depart with thee, as it hath seemed good both to me and my seven friends the counsellers;

Before CHRIST 457.

12 That they may look unto the affairs of Judea and Jerusalem, agreeably to that which is in the law of the Lord;

13 And carry the gifts unto the Lord of Israel to Jerusalem, which I and my friends have vowed, and all the gold and silver that in the country of Babylon can be ‖ found, to the Lord in Jerusalem,

‖ Or, got.

14 With that also which is given of the people for the temple of the Lord their God at Jerusalem: and that silver and gold may be collected for bullocks, rams, and lambs, and things thereunto appertaining;

15 To the end that they may offer sacrifices unto the Lord upon the altar of the Lord their God, which is in Jerusalem.

16 And whatsoever thou and thy brethren will do ‖ with the silver and gold, that do, according to the will of thy God.

‖ Or, with the rest of, Ezra 7. 18.

17 And the holy vessels of the Lord, which are given thee for the use of the temple of thy God, which is in Jerusalem, thou shalt set before thy God in Jerusalem.

18 And whatsoever thing else thou shalt remember for the use of the temple of thy God, thou shalt give it out of the king's treasury.

19 And I king Artaxerxes have also commanded the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenice, that whatsoever Esdras the priest and the reader of the law of the most high God shall send for, they should give it him with speed, 20 To the sum of an hundred talents of silver, likewise also of wheat even to an hundred ‖ cors, and an hundred pieces of wine, and other things in abundance.

‖ Or, measures, or, salt, Ezra 7. 22.

21 Let all things be performed after the law of God diligently unto the most high God, that wrath come not upon the kingdom of the king and his sons.

22 I command you also, that ye require no tax, nor any other imposition, of any of the priests, or Levites, or holy singers, or porters, or ministers of the temple, or of any that have doings in this temple, and that no man have authority to impose any thing upon them.

23 And thou, Esdras, according to the wisdom of God ordain judges and justices, that they may judge in all Syria and Phenice † all those that know the law of thy God; and those that know it not thou shalt teach.

24 And [a] whosoever shall transgress the law of thy God, and of the king, shall be punished diligently, whether it be by death, or other punishment, by penalty of money, or by imprisonment.

Before CHRIST 457.

25 ¶ Then said Esdras the scribe, Blessed be the only Lord God of my fathers, who hath put these things into the heart of the king, to glorify his house that is in Jerusalem:

26 And hath honoured me in the sight of the king, and his counsellers, and all his friends and nobles.

27 Therefore was I encouraged by the help of the Lord my God, and gathered together men of Israel to go up with me.

28 And these are the chief according to their families and several dignities, that went up with me from Babylon in the reign of king Artaxerxes:

29 Of the sons of Phinees, Gerson: of the sons of Ithamar, ‖ Gamael: of the sons of David, ‖ Lettus [b] the son of Sechenias:

‖ Or, Daniel. ‖ Or, Dantus. [b] Ezra 8. 2. of the sons of Sarchanias. of the sons of Phar.

‖ Zerahiah.

32 ‖ Of the sons of Zathoe, Sechenias the son of Jezelus, and with him three hundred men: of the sons of Adin, Obeth the son of Jonathan, and with him † two hundred and fifty men:

‖ Or, Zebadiah. ‖ Or, Fourscore men.

35 Of the sons of Joab, ‖ Abadias son of ‖ Jezelus, and with him two hundred and ‖ twelve men:

‖ Or, Obadiah. ‖ Or, Jehiel.

36 ‖ Of the sons of Banid, Assalimoth son of Josaphias, and with him an hundred and threescore men:

‖ Or, eighteen men.

37 Of the sons of Babi, Zacharias son of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight men:

‖ Or, Of the sons of Shelomith the son of Josiphiah.

38 Of the sons of Astath, Johannes son of ‖ Acatan, and with him an hundred and ten men:

‖ Or, Asgad. ‖ Or, Catan.

39 Of the sons of Adonikam the last, and these are the names of them, Eliphalet, Jeuel, and ‖ Samaias, and with them ‖ seventy men:

‖ Or, Shemaia. ‖ Or, sixty men.

40 Of the sons of Bago, Uthi the son of Istalcurus, and with him seventy men.

‖ Or, to the river called Ahava, Ezra 8. 15. ‖ Or, he numbered the people and the priests: but found none of the sons of Levi.

41 And these I gathered together ‖ to the river called Theras, where we pitched our tents three days: and then ‖ I surveyed them.

Before CHRIST 457.

42 But when I had found there none of the priests and Levites,

43 Then sent I unto Eleazar, and ‖ Iduel, and ‖ Masman,

44 And Alnathan, and Mamaias, and ‖ Joribas, and Nathan, Eunatan, Zacharias, and Mosollamon, principal men and learned.

45 And I bade them that they should go unto ‖ Saddeus the captain, ‖ who was in the place of ‖ the treasury:

46 And commanded them that they should speak unto Daddeus, and to ‖ his brethren, and to the treasurers in that place, to send us such men as might execute the priests' office in the house of the Lord.

47 And by the mighty hand of our Lord they brought unto us skilful men of the sons of ‖ Moli the son of Levi, the son of Israel, ‖ Asebebia, and his sons, and his brethren, who were eighteen.

48 ‖ And Asebia, and Annuus, and Osaias his brother, of the sons of Channuneus, and their sons, were twenty men.

49 And of the servants of the temple whom David had ordained, and the principal men for the service of the Levites, to wit, the servants of the temple, two hundred and twenty, the catalogue of whose names were shewed.

50 And there I ‖ vowed a fast unto the young men before our Lord, to desire of him a prosperous journey both for us and them that were with us, for our children, and for the † cattle:

51 For I was ashamed to ask the king footmen, and horsemen, and conduct for safeguard against our adversaries.

52 For we had said unto the king, that the power of the Lord our God should be with them that seek him, to support them in all ways.

53 And again we besought our Lord as touching these things, and found him favourable unto us.

54 Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, ‖ Esebrias, and Assanias, and ten men of their brethren with them:

55 And I weighed them the gold, and the silver, and the holy vessels of the house of our Lord, which the king, and his council, and the princes, and all Israel, had given.

56 And when I had weighed it, I delivered unto them six hundred and sixty talents of silver, and silver vessels of an hundred talents, and an hundred talents of gold, 57 And twenty golden vessels, and † twelve vessels of brass, even of fine brass, glittering like gold.

58 And I said unto them, Both ye are holy unto the Lord, and the vessels are holy, and the gold and the silver is a vow unto the Lord, the Lord of our fathers.

59 Watch ye, and keep them till ye deliver them to the chief of the priests and Levites, and to the principal men of the families of Israel, in Jerusalem, into the chambers of the house of our God.

60 So the priests and the Levites, who had received the silver and the gold and the vessels, brought them unto Jerusalem, into the temple of the Lord.

61 And from the river Theras we departed the twelfth day of the first month, and came to Jerusalem by the mighty hand of our Lord, which was with us: and from the ‖ beginning of our journey the Lord delivered us from every enemy, and so we came to Jerusalem.

62 And when we had been there three days, the gold and silver that was weighed was delivered in the house of our Lord on the fourth day ‖ unto Marmoth the priest the son of Iri.

63 And with him was Eleazar the son of Phinees, and with them were Josabad the son of Jesu and ‖ Moeth the son of Sabban, Levites: all was delivered them by number and weight.

64 And all the weight of them was written up the same hour.

65 Moreover they that were come out of the captivity offered sacrifice unto the Lord God of Israel, even twelve bullocks for all Israel, fourscore and sixteen rams, 66 † Threescore and twelve lambs, goats for a peace offering, twelve; all of them a sacrifice to the Lord.

67 And they delivered the king's commandments unto the king's stewards, and to the governors of Celosyria and Phenice; and they honoured the people and the temple of God.

68 Now when these things were done, the rulers came unto me, and said,

69 The nation of Israel, the princes, the priests and Levites, have not put away from them the strange people of the land, nor the pollutions of the Gentiles, to wit, of the Canaanites, Hittites, Pherezites, Jebusites, and the Moabites, Egyptians, and Edomites.

71 And as soon as I had heard these things, I rent my clothes, and the holy garment, and pulled off the hair from off my head and beard, and sat me down sad and very heavy.

72 So all they that were then moved at the word of the Lord God of Israel assembled unto me, whilst I mourned for the iniquity: but I sat still full of heaviness until the evening sacrifice.

73 Then rising up from the fast with my clothes and the holy garment rent, and bowing my knees, and stretching forth my hands unto the Lord,

74 I said, O Lord, I am confounded and ashamed before thy face;

‖ Or, have confounded. 75 For our sins ‖ are multiplied above our heads, and our ignorances have reached up unto heaven.

76 For ever since the time of our fathers we have been and are in great sin, even unto this day.

77 And for our sins and our fathers' we with our brethren and our kings and our priests were given up unto the kings of the earth, to the sword, and to captivity, and for a prey with shame, unto this day.

78 And now in some measure hath mercy been shewed unto us from thee, O Lord, that there should be left us a root and a name in the place of thy sanctuary;

79 And to discover unto us a light in the house of the Lord our God, and to give us

† Heb. life. Ezra 9. 8. † food in the time of our servitude.

80 Yea, when we were in bondage, we were not forsaken of our Lord; but he made us gracious before the kings of Persia, so that they gave us food;

81 Yea, and honoured the temple of our Lord, and raised up the desolate Sion, that they have given us a sure abiding in Jewry and Jerusalem.

82 And now, O Lord, what shall we say, having these things? for we have transgressed thy commandments, which thou gavest by the hand of thy servants the prophets, saying,

83 That the land, which ye enter into to possess as an heritage, is a land polluted with the pollutions of the strangers of the land, and they have filled it with their uncleanness.

84 Therefore now shall ye not join your daughters unto their sons, neither shall ye take their daughters unto your sons.

85 Moreover ye shall never seek to have peace with them, that ye may be strong, and eat the good things of the land, and that ye may leave the inheritance of the land unto your children for evermore. Before CHRIST about 457.

86 And all that is befallen is done unto us for our wicked works and great sins; for thou, O Lord, didst make our sins light, 87 And didst give unto us such a root: but we have turned back again to transgress thy law, and to mingle ourselves with the uncleanness of the nations of the land.

88 ‖ Mightest not thou be angry with us to destroy us, till thou hadst left us neither root, seed, nor name? ‖ Or, Be not angry, &c.

89 O Lord of Israel, thou art true: for we are left a root this day.

90 Behold, now are we before thee in our iniquities, for we cannot stand any longer by reason of these things before thee.

91 And as Esdras in his prayer made his confession, weeping, and lying flat upon the ground before the temple, there gathered unto him from Jerusalem a very great multitude of men and women and children: for there was great weeping among the multitude.

92 Then Jechonias the son of Jeelus, one of the sons of Israel, called out, and said, O Esdras, we have sinned against the Lord God, we have married strange women of the nations of the land, and now is all Israel ‖ aloft. ‖ Or, exalted, Deut. 28. 13. Baruch 2. 5.

93 Let us make an oath to the Lord, that we will put away all our wives, which we have taken of the heathen, with their children, 94 Like as thou hast decreed, and as many as do obey the law of the Lord.

95 Arise, and put in execution: for to thee doth this matter appertain, and we will be with thee: do valiantly.

96 So Esdras arose, and took an oath of the chief of the priests and Levites † of all Israel to do after these things; and so they sware. † Heb. call all Israel. Ezra 10. 5.

CHAP. IX.

3 Esdras assembleth all the people. 10 They promise to put away the strange wives. 20 The names and number of them that did so. 40 The law of Moses is read and declared before all the people. 49 They weep, and are put in mind of the feast day.

THEN Esdras rising from the court of the temple went to the chamber of Joanan the son of Eliasib,

2 And remained there, and did eat no

Before CHRIST about 457. meat nor drink water, mourning for the great iniquities of the multitude.

3 And there was a proclamation in all Jewry and Jerusalem to all them that were of the captivity, that they should be gathered together at Jerusalem:

4 And that whosoever met not there within two or three days, according as the elders that bare rule appointed, their cattle should be seized to the use of the temple, and himself ‖ cast out from them that were of the captivity.

‖ utterly destroyed, Josh. 10. 8.

5 And in three days were all they of the tribe of Judah and Benjamin gathered together at Jerusalem the twentieth day of the ninth month.

6 And all the multitude sat trembling in the broad court of the temple because of the present foul weather.

7 So Esdras arose up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed the law in marrying strange wives, thereby to increase the sins of Israel.

8 And now by confessing give glory unto the Lord God of our fathers,

9 And do his will, and separate yourselves from the heathen of the land, and from the strange women.

10 Then cried the whole multitude, and said with a loud voice, Like as thou hast spoken, so will we do.

11 But forasmuch as the people are many, and it is foul weather, so that we cannot stand without, and this is not a work of a day or two, seeing our sin in these things is spread far:

12 Therefore let the rulers of the multitude ‖ stay, and let all them of our habitations that have strange wives come at the time appointed,

13 And with them the rulers and judges of every place, till we turn away the wrath of the Lord from us for this matter.

14 Then Jonathan the son of Azael and Ezechias the son of Theocanus accordingly took this matter upon them: and Mosollam and Levis and Sabbatheus helped them.

15 And they that were of the captivity did according to all these things.

16 And Esdras the priest chose unto him the principal men of their families, all by name: and in the first day of the tenth month they sat together to examine the matter.

33 And of the sons of Asom; [k] Altaneus, and [l] Matthias, and [m] Bannaia, Eliphalat, and Manasses, and Semei.

34 And of the sons of Maani; Jeremias, Momdis, Omaerus, Juel, Mabdai, and Pelias, and Anos, Carabasion, and Enasibus, and Mamnitanaimus, Eliasis, Banuus, Eliali, Samis, Selemias, Nathanias: and of the sons of Ozora; Sesis, Esril, Azaelus, Samatus, Zambis, Josephus.

35 And of the sons of Ethma; Mazitias, Zabadaias, Edes, Juel, Banaias.

36 All these had taken strange wives, and they put them away with their children.

37 And the priests and Levites, and they

Before CHRIST about 456. that were of Israel, dwelt in Jerusalem, and in the country, in the first day of the seventh month: so the children of Israel were in their ‖ habitations.

‖ Or, villages.

38 [a] And the whole multitude came together with one accord into the broad place of the holy porch toward the east:

[a] Neh. 8. 1. about 445.

39 And they spake unto Esdras the priest and reader, that he would bring the law of Moses, that was given of the Lord God of Israel.

40 So Esdras the chief priest brought the law unto the whole multitude from man to woman, and to all the priests, to hear the law in the first day of the seventh month.

41 And he read in the broad court before the holy porch from morning unto midday, before both men and women; and all the multitude gave heed unto the law.

42 And Esdras the priest and reader of the law stood up upon a pulpit of wood, which was made for that purpose.

43 And there stood up by him Mattathias, Sammus, Ananias, Azarias, Urias, ‖ Ezecias, ‖ Balasamus, upon the right hand:

‖ Or, Hilkiah.

44 And upon his left hand stood ‖ Phaldaius, Misael, Melchias, ‖ Lothasubus, and ‖ Nabarias.

‖ Or, Moaziah. ‖ Or, Pedaiah.

45 Then took Esdras the book of the law before the multitude: for he sat † honourably in the first place in the sight of them all.

‖ Or, Hashum. § See Neh. 8. 4. † Heb. above them all.

46 And when he opened the law, they stood all straight up. So Esdras blessed the Lord God most High, the God of hosts, Almighty.

Before CHRIST about 445.

47 And all the people answered, Amen; and lifting up their hands they fell to the ground, and worshipped the Lord.

48 Also Jesus, Anus, Sarabias, Adinus, Jacubus, Sabateas, ‖ Auteas, Maianeas, and Calitas, Azarias, and Joazabdus, and Ananias, Biatas, the Levites, taught the law of the Lord, making them withal to understand it.

‖ Or, Hodijah.

49 ‖ Then spake Attharates unto Esdras the chief priest and reader, and to the Levites that taught the multitude, even to all, saying,

‖ Then Nehemiah, and Esdras the priest the scribe, and the Levites that instructed the people, said unto all the people, Neh. 8. 9.

50 This day is holy unto the Lord; (for they all wept when they heard the law:)

51 Go then, and eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send part to ‖ them that have nothing;

52 For this day is holy unto the Lord: and be not sorrowful; for the Lord will bring you to honour.

53 So the Levites published all things to the people, saying, This day is holy to the Lord; be not sorrowful.

54 Then went they their way, every one to eat and drink, and make merry, and to give part to them that had nothing, and to make great chear;

55 Because they understood the words wherein they were instructed, and for the which they had been assembled.

II. ESDRAS.

INTRODUCTION.

THE second book of Esdras is not now to be found in any Hebrew or Greek manuscripts. It is supposed to have been originally written in the Greek language; but is extant only in a few Latin copies, and in an Arabick version. It is generally maintained, that the work could not have been the genuine production of Ezra, as it seems to bear some intrinsick marks of having been composed after his time, and, indeed, after the period at which the prophetick spirit is reputed to have ceased; notwithstanding also the author's confident assumption of the prophetick character, his pretensions to inspiration have not been admitted. It is not, indeed, probable, that an inspired writer would have claimed a name to which he was not entitled; or have interspersed in his work those extravagant conceits and inconsistencies which occasionally disfigure and degrade this production. The book, it is true, contains much sublime instruction, many animated exhortations to righteousness, and many sentiments not unworthy of the sacred source from whence they are related to have flowed. It represents Ezra as commanded to remonstrate with the people for their disobedience; and on their contempt of God's words, as addressing himself to the heathen, whom he enjoins to prepare for that "everlasting light" which should shine upon them. It describes the Prophet as pleading with submissive piety for the removal of the afflictions of his captive countrymen; as anxiously inquiring why the chosen people of the Almighty should suffer severer punishments for their sins than the heathen, for whom they were seemingly rejected, chap. iii. 28; iv. 23—31; as lamenting the effects of entailed corruption, chap. iii. 20—22; iv. 30—32; vii. 48; as bewailing the evil propensities and condition of men, of whom a few only appear to be marked out and distinguished as objects of Divine favour, chap. iv. 12; vii. 4—54; ix. 15, 16. He is said to have been honoured with visions and Divine communications in answer to those inquiries. The boasted revelations are described in a lofty and prophetick style, in a manner similar to that adopted by Daniel, Ezekiel, and St. John. They discountenance with becoming dignity the presumptuous curiosity and complaints of man, chap. iv. 5—11; contain very elevated descriptions of God's attributes, chap. vii. 62—70; viii. 20—23, 39; xvi. 54—63; and rest the equity of His proceedings on the projected decisions of a future judgment. They impart consolatory assurances of returning favour, and represent, in an interesting vision, Jerusalem reestablished on its foundations, chap. x. 10, 27, &c. The angel likewise, in these pretended visions, reveals many striking prophecies relative to the Messiah, chap. ii. 34—48; the destruction of the Roman empire, chap. xi, xii; and the fate of Egypt; of Babylon, chap. xv, xvi; and of other nations; besides others of very obscure and uncertain interpretation, chap. v. 1—13; vi. 7—28.

This book was never admitted into the Hebrew canon; and there is no sufficient authority to prove that it was ever extant in the Hebrew language. Its pretended prophecies are not produced in evidence by Christian writers, striking as such testimony must have been, if they had been genuine; and the book was never publickly or generally acknowledged either in the Greek or Latin church; nor was it ever inserted in the sacred catalogue, by either councils or fathers; but it is expressly represented as Apocryphal by St. Jerome, who describes it as rejected by the Church.

From many passages occurring in this book, which bear a very manifest resemblance to doctrines, sentiments, and expressions contained in the writings of the New Testament, and from the circumstance of our Saviour being mentioned by name in much clearer terms than in the canonical books of prophecy, (see chap. vii. 28, 29,) there is reason to conclude that the whole, or at least the greater part of it, was written after the promulgation of the Gospel. The work is indeed of too mixed and mysterious a character to authorize any positive determination. Amidst passages transcribed from the Gospel, it may contain fragments of works written before the time of Christ, and many writers have considered it as a compilation of pieces, of which some at least may have been the genuine production of Ezra. Dr. Gray.

There may be reason to doubt whether this book in its present form was written by any one author. In the two last chapters, there is a considerable difference of style from that of the rest of the book; there is no mention of Ezra in them, and nothing which must be necessarily appropriated to the author of the immediately preceding chapters, but rather the contrary. In some ancient copies, indeed, the two last chapters of this book form a separate book under the title of the fifth book of Esdras. They are written very much in the style and manner of the ancient Hebrew Prophets. Lee.

4 And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

[a] Isa. 58. 1. 5 Go thy way, and [b] shew my people their sinful deeds, and their children their wickedness which they have done against me; that they may tell their children's children:

6 Because the sins of their fathers are increased in them: for they have forgotten me, and have offered unto strange gods.

7 Am not I even he that brought them out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage? but they have provoked me unto wrath, and despised my counsels.

8 Pull thou off then the hair of thy head, and cast all evil upon them, for they have not been obedient unto my law, but it is a rebellious people.

9 How long shall I forbear them, unto whom I have done so much good?

10 Many kings have I destroyed for their [c] Exod. 14. 28. sakes; [c] Pharaoh with his servants and all his power have I smitten down.

12 Speak thou therefore unto them, saying, Thus saith the Lord,

15 Thus saith the Almighty Lord, The [h] Exod. 16. 13. Psal. 105. 40. [h] quails were as a token to you; I gave you tents for your safeguard: nevertheless ye murmured there,

16 And triumphed not in my name for the destruction of your enemies, but ever to this day do ye yet murmur.

17 Where are the benefits that I have done for you? when ye were hungry and [i] Numb. 14. 3. thirsty in the wilderness, [i] did ye not cry unto me,

18 Saying, Why hast thou brought us into this wilderness to kill us? it had been better for us to have served the Egyptians, than to die in this wilderness.

19 Then had I pity upon your mournings, and gave you manna to eat; [k] so ye did eat angels' bread.

20 [l] When ye were thirsty, did I not cleave the rock, and waters flowed out ‖ to your fill? for the heat I covered you with the leaves of the trees.

21 I divided among you a fruitful land, I cast out the Canaanites, the Pherezites, and the Philistines, before you: [m] what shall I yet do more for you? saith the Lord.

23 I gave you not fire for your blasphemies, but cast a tree in the water, and made the river sweet.

24 What shall I do unto thee, O Jacob? thou, [n] Juda, wouldest not obey me: I will turn me to other nations, and unto those will I give my name, that they may keep my statutes.

[n] Exod. 32. 8.

25 Seeing ye have forsaken me, I will forsake you also; when ye desire me to be gracious unto you, I shall have no mercy upon you.

[o] Isai. 1. 15.

27 Ye have not as it were forsaken me, but your own selves, saith the Lord.

28 Thus saith the Almighty Lord, Have I not prayed you as a father his sons, as a mother her daughters, and a nurse her young babes,

29 That ye would be my people, ‖ and I should be your God; that ye would be my children, and I should be your father?

11. — I have scattered the people even of Tyrus and Sidon,] This fact of God's having scattered the people of Tyre and Sidon in favour of His people returning from Egypt, receives no confirmation from any other part of Scripture, and the relation of it here may be thought to impair the authority of this book. Arnald. Or it may be thought that the Canaanites are here meant, who extended as far as Tyre and Sidon. Junius.

22, 23. — in the river of the Amorites, &c.] In these two verses the writer seems to confound different historical facts; for he alludes to the miracle of Moses's sweetening the water, as having occurred at the river Arnon, Numb. xxi. 16, which was wrought in reality at the waters of Marah, Exod. xv. 25. Calmet.

torn their bodies in pieces, whose blood I will require of your hands, saith the Lord.

33 Thus saith the Almighty Lord, Your house is desolate, I will cast you out as the wind doth stubble.

34 And your children shall not be fruitful; for they have despised my commandment, and done the thing that is evil before me.

35 Your houses will I give to a people that shall come; which not having heard of me yet shall believe me; to whom I have shewed no signs, yet they shall do that I have commanded them.

36 They have seen no prophets, yet they shall call their sins to remembrance, and acknowledge them.

37 I take to witness the grace of the people to come, whose little ones rejoice in gladness: and though they have not seen me with bodily eyes, yet in spirit they believe the thing that I say.

38 And now, brother, behold what glory; and see the people that come from the east:

39 Unto whom I will give for leaders, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Oseas, Amos, and Micheas, Joel, Abdias, and Jonas,

CHAP. II.

1 God complaineth of his people: 10 yet Esdras is willed to comfort them. 34 Because they refused, the Gentiles are called. 43 Esdras seeth the Son of God, and those that are crowned by him.

THUS saith the Lord, I brought this people out of bondage, and I gave them my commandments by my servants the prophets; whom they would not hear, but despised my counsels.

2 The mother that bare them saith unto them, Go your way, ye children; for I am a widow and forsaken.

3 I brought you up with gladness; but with sorrow and heaviness have I lost you: for ye have sinned before the Lord your God, and done that thing that is evil before him.

4 But what shall I now do unto you? I am a widow and forsaken: go your way, O my children, and ask mercy of the Lord.

5 As for me, O father, I call upon thee for a witness over the mother of these children, which would not keep my covenant,

6 That thou bring them to confusion, and their mother to a spoil, that there may be no offspring of them.

7 Let them be scattered abroad among the heathen, let their names be put out of the earth: for they have despised my [‖] covenant.

8 Woe be unto thee, Assur, thou that hidest the unrighteous in thee! O thou wicked people, remember [u] what I did unto Sodom and Gomorrha;

[u] Gen. 19. 24.

9 Whose land lieth in clods of pitch and heaps of ashes: even so also will I do unto them that hear me not, saith the Almighty Lord.

10 Thus saith the Lord unto Esdras, Tell my people that I will give them the kingdom of Jerusalem, which I would have given unto Israel.

11 Their glory also will I take unto me, and give these the everlasting tabernacles, which I had prepared for them.

12 They shall have the tree of life for an ointment of sweet savour; they shall neither labour, nor be weary.

13 Go, and ye shall receive: pray for few days unto you, that they may be shortened: the kingdom is already prepared for you: watch.

14 Take heaven and earth to witness; for I have broken the evil in pieces, and created the good: for I live, saith the Lord.

15 Mother, embrace thy children, and [‖] bring them up with gladness, make their feet as fast as a pillar: for I have chosen thee, saith the Lord.

16 And those that be dead will I raise up again from their places, and bring them out of the graves: for I have known [‖] my name in Israel.

[‖] Or, thy name, O Israel.

17 Fear not, thou mother of the children: for I have chosen thee, saith the Lord.

18 For thy help will I send my servants Esay and Jeremy, after whose counsel I

40. — Aggeus, Zachary, and Malachy.] It is observable, that these three Prophets are here mentioned, although the two former did not probably flourish as Prophets till after the return from the captivity, and Malachi not till 100 years after the decree of Cyrus. It may also be remarked, that the Prophets are here enumerated, not according to the order of the Hebrew Bibles, but according to that of the Septuagint or Greek version; circumstances which bespeak this second book of Esdras to be of later date than the time of Ezra. Dr. Gray.

— which is called also an angel of the Lord.] That Malachi was so called is among the conceits of the Jewish rabbies. Arnald.

have sanctified and prepared for thee twelve trees laden with divers fruits,

19 And as many fountains flowing with milk and honey, and seven mighty mountains, whereupon there grow roses and lilies, whereby I will fill thy children with joy.

20 Do right to the widow, judge for the fatherless, give to the poor, defend the orphan, clothe the naked, 21 Heal the broken and the weak, laugh not a lame man to scorn, defend the maimed, and let the blind man come into the sight of my clearness.

22 Keep the old and young within thy walls.

23 [b] Wheresoever thou findest the dead, † take them and bury them, and I will give thee the first place in my resurrection.

[b] Tobit 1. 17, 18. † signing bury them.

24 Abide still, O my people, and take thy rest, for thy quietness shall come.

25 Nourish thy children, O thou good nurse; stablish their feet.

26 As for the servants whom I have given thee, there shall not one of them perish; for I will require them from among thy number.

27 Be not weary: for when the day of trouble and heaviness cometh, others shall weep and be sorrowful, but thou shalt be merry and have abundance.

28 The heathen shall envy thee, but they shall be able to do nothing against thee, saith the Lord.

29 My hands shall cover thee, so that thy children shall not see hell.

30 Be joyful, O thou mother, with thy children; for I will deliver thee, saith the Lord.

31 Remember thy children that sleep, for I shall bring them out of the sides of the earth, and shew mercy unto them: for I am merciful, saith the Lord Almighty.

32 Embrace thy children until I come and ‖ shew mercy unto them: for my wells run over, and my grace shall not fail.

33 I Esdras received a charge of the Lord upon the mount Oreb, that I should go unto Israel; but when I came unto them, they set me at nought, and despised the commandment of the Lord.

34 And therefore I say unto you, O ye heathen, that hear and understand, look for your Shepherd, he shall give you everlasting rest; for he is nigh at hand, that shall come in the end of the world.

35 Be ready to the reward of the kingdom, for the everlasting light shall shine upon you for evermore.

36 Flee the shadow of this world, receive the joyfulness of your glory: I testify my Saviour openly.

37 O receive the gift that is given you, and be glad, giving thanks unto him that hath called you to the heavenly kingdom.

38 Arise up and stand, behold the number of those that be sealed ‖ in the feast of the Lord;

‖ Or, for.

39 Which are departed from the shadow of the world, and have received glorious garments of the Lord.

40 Take thy number, O Sion, and † shut up those of thine that are clothed in white, which have fulfilled the law of the Lord.

† Lat. conclude

41 The number of thy children, whom thou longedst for, is fulfilled: beseech the power of the Lord, that thy people, which have been called from the beginning, may be hallowed.

42 [c] I Esdras saw upon the mount Sion a great people, whom I could not number, and they all praised the Lord with songs.

[c] Rev. 7. 9.

43 And in the midst of them there was a young man of a high stature, taller than all the rest, and upon every one of their heads he set crowns, and was more exalted; which I marvelled at greatly.

44 So I asked the angel, and said, ‖ Sir, what are these?

‖ Or, Lord.

45 He answered and said unto me, These be they that have put off the mortal clothing, and put on the immortal, and have confessed the name of God: now are they crowned, and receive palms.

46 Then said I unto the angel, What young person is it that crowneth them, and giveth them palms in their hands?

47 So he answered and said unto me, It is the Son of God, whom they have confessed in the world. Then began I greatly to commend them that stood so stiffly for the name of the Lord.

48 Then the angel said unto me, Go thy way, and tell my people what manner of things, and how great wonders of the Lord thy God, thou hast seen.

CHAP. III.

1 Esdras is troubled, 13 and acknowledgeth the sins of the people: 28 yet complaineth that the heathen were lords over them, being more wicked than they.

IN the thirtieth year after the ruin of the city I was in Babylon, and lay troubled upon my bed, and my thoughts came up over my heart:

2 For I saw the desolation of Sion, and the wealth of them that dwelt at Babylon.

3 And my spirit was sore moved, so that

I began to speak words full of fear to the most High, and said,

4 O Lord, who bearest rule, thou spakest at the beginning, when thou didst plant the earth, and that thyself alone, and commandedst the people,

[a] Gen. 2. 7. 5 [a] And gavest a body unto Adam without soul, which was the workmanship of thine hands, and didst breathe into him the breath of life, and he was made living before thee.

6 And thou leddest him into paradise, which thy right hand had planted, before ever the earth came forward.

7 And unto him thou gavest commandment to love thy way: which he transgressed, and immediately thou appointedst death in him and in his generations, of whom came nations, tribes, people, and kindreds, out of number.

[b] Gen. 6. 12. 8 [b] And every people walked after their own will, and did wonderful things before thee, and despised thy commandments.

[c] Gen. 7. 10. 9 [c] And again in process of time thou broughtest the flood upon those that dwelt in the world, and destroyedst them.

10 And it came to pass in every of them, that as death was to Adam, so was the flood to these.

11 Nevertheless one of them thou leftest, namely, [d] Noah with his houshold, of whom came all righteous men.

[d] 1 Pet. 3. 20. 12 And it happened, that when they that dwelt upon the earth began to multiply, and had gotten them many children, and were a great people, they began again to be more ungodly than the first.

13 Now when they lived so wickedly before thee, [e] thou didst choose thee a man from among them, whose name was [f] Abraham.

[e] Gen. 12. 1. [f] Gen. 17. 5.

14 Him thou lovedst, and unto him only thou shewedst thy will:

15 And madest an everlasting covenant with him, promising him that thou wouldest never forsake his seed.

[g] Gen. 21. 2, 3. [h] Gen. 25. 25, 26. [i] Mal. 1. 2, 3. Rom. 9. 13. 16 [g] And unto him thou gavest Isaac, and [h] unto Isaac also thou gavest Jacob and Esau. As for Jacob, thou [i] didst choose him to thee, and put by Esau: and so Jacob became a great multitude.

[k] Exod. 19. 1. Deut. 4. 10. 17 And it came to pass, that when thou leddest his seed out of Egypt, [k] thou broughtest them up to the mount Sinai.

18 And bowing the heavens, thou didst set fast the earth, movedst the whole world, and madest the depths to tremble, and troubledst the men of that age.

19 And thy glory went through four gates, of fire, and of earthquake, and of wind, and of cold; that thou mightest give the law unto the seed of Jacob, ‖ and diligence unto the generation of Israel. ‖ Or, and to all the generation of Israel.

20 And yet tookest thou not away from them a wicked heart, that thy law might bring forth fruit in them. that they should keep it with diligence.

21 For the first Adam bearing a wicked heart transgressed, and was overcome; and so be all they that are born of him.

22 Thus infirmity was made permanent; and the law (also) in the heart of the people with the malignity of the root; so that the good departed away, and the evil abode still.

23 So the times passed away, and the years were brought to an end: [l] then didst thou raise thee up a servant, called David: [l] 1 Sam. 16. 13.

24 [m] Whom thou commandedst to build a city unto thy name, and to offer incense and oblations unto thee therein. [m] 2 Sam. 5. 7. 2 Sam. 13.

25 When this was done many years, then they that inhabited the city forsook thee,

26 And in all things did even as Adam and all his generations had done: for they also had a wicked heart:

27 And so thou gavest thy city over into the hands of thine enemies.

28 Are their deeds then any better that inhabit Babylon, that they should therefore have the dominion over Sion?

29 For when I came thither, and had seen impieties without number, then my soul saw many evildoers in this thirtieth year, so that my heart failed me.

30 For I have seen how thou sufferest them sinning, and hast spared wicked doers: and hast destroyed thy people, and hast preserved thine enemies, and hast not signified it.

31 ‖ I do not remember how this way may be left: Are they then of Babylon better than they of Sion? ‖ Or, I conceive.

32 Or is there any other people that knoweth thee beside Israel? or what generation hath so believed thy covenants as Jacob?

33 And yet their reward appeareth not, and their labour hath no fruit: for I have gone here and there through the heathen,

---

Chap. III. ver. 4. — and commandedst the people.] By "people" are probably here meant the different sorts of animals with which God filled the earth at the first. See Prov. xxx. 25. Jamins.

and I see that they ‖ flow in wealth, and think not upon thy commandments.

‖ Or, abound.

34 Weigh thou therefore our wickedness now in the balance, and their's also that dwell in the world; and so shall thy name no where be found but in Israel.

35 Or when was it that they which dwell upon the earth have not sinned in thy sight? or what people have so kept thy commandments?

36 Thou shalt find that Israel by name hath kept thy precepts; but not the heathen.

CHAP. IV.

1 The angel declareth the ignorance of Esdras in God's judgments, 13 and adviseth him not to meddle with things above his reach. 23 Nevertheless Esdras asketh divers questions, and receiveth answers to them.

AND the angel that was sent unto me, whose name was Uriel, gave me an answer,

2 And said, Thy heart hath gone too far in this world, and thinkest thou to comprehend the way of the most High?

3 Then said I, Yea, my lord. And he answered me, and said, I am sent to shew thee three ways, and to set forth three similitudes before thee:

4 Whereof if thou canst declare me one, I will shew thee also the way that thou desirest to see, and I shall shew thee from whence the wicked heart cometh.

5 And I said, Tell on, my lord. Then said he unto me, Go thy way, weigh me the weight of the fire, or measure me the blast of the wind, or call me again the day that is past.

6 Then answered I and said, What man is able to do that, that thou shouldest ask such things of me?

7 And he said unto me, If I should ask thee how great dwellings are in the midst of the sea, or how many springs are in the beginning of the deep, or how many springs are above the firmament, or which are the outgoings of paradise:

8 Peradventure thou wouldest say unto me, I never went down into the deep, nor as yet into hell, neither did I ever climb up into heaven.

9 Nevertheless now have I asked thee but only of the fire and wind, and of the day wherethrough thou hast passed, and of things from which thou canst not be separated, and yet canst thou give me no answer of them.

10 He said moreover unto me, Thine own things, and such as are grown up with thee, canst thou not know;

11 How should thy vessel then be able to comprehend the way of the Highest, and, the world being now outwardly corrupted, to understand the ‖ corruption that is evident in my sight?

12 Then said I unto him, It were better that we were not at all, than that we should live still in wickedness, and to suffer, and not to know wherefore.

13 He answered me, and said, I went into a forest into a plain, and the [a] trees took counsel,

[a] Judges 9. 8. 2 Chron. 25. 18.

14 And said, Come, let us go and make war against the sea, that it may depart away before us, and that we may make us more woods.

15 The floods of the sea also in like manner took counsel, and said, Come, let us go up and subdue the woods of the plain, that there also we may make us another country.

16 The thought of the wood was in vain, for the fire came and consumed it.

17 The thought of the floods of the sea came likewise to nought, for the sand stood up and stopped them.

18 If thou wert judge now betwixt these two, whom wouldest thou begin to justify? or whom wouldest thou condemn?

19 I answered and said, Verily it is a foolish thought that they both have devised, for ‖ the ground is given unto the wood, and the sea also hath his place to bear his ‖ floods.

‖ Or, the land.

‖ Or, woods.

20 Then answered he me, and said, Thou hast given a right judgment, but why judgest thou not thyself also?

21 For like as ‖ the ground is given unto the wood, and the sea to his floods: even so [b] they that dwell upon the earth may understand nothing but that which is upon the earth: and he that dwelleth upon the heavens may only understand the things that are above the height of the heavens.

‖ Or, the land.

[b] Isa. 55. 8, 9. John 3. 31. 1 Cor. 2. 14.

22 Then answered I and said, I beseech thee, O Lord, let me have understanding:

23 For it was not my mind to be curious of the high things, but of such as pass by us daily, namely, wherefore Israel is given up as a reproach to the heathen, and for what cause the people whom thou hast loved is given over unto ungodly nations, and why the law of our forefathers is brought to nought, and the written covenants come ‖ to none effect,

‖ Or, no where.

24 And we pass away out of the world as grashoppers, and our life is astonishment and fear, and we are not worthy to obtain mercy.

25 What will he then do unto his name whereby we are called? of these things have I asked.

26 Then answered he me, and said, The more thou searchest, the more thou shalt marvel; for the world hasteth fast to pass away,

27 And cannot comprehend the things that are promised to the righteous in time to come: for this world is full of unrighteousness and infirmities.

28 But as concerning the things whereof thou askest me, I will tell thee; for the evil is sown, but the destruction thereof is not yet come.

29 If therefore that which is sown be not turned upside down, and if the place where the evil is sown pass not away, then cannot it come that is sown with good.

30 For the grain of evil seed hath been sown in the heart of Adam from the beginning, and how much ungodliness hath it brought up unto this time? and how much shall it yet bring forth until the ‖ time of threshing come?

31 Ponder now by thyself, how great fruit of wickedness the grain of evil seed hath brought forth.

32 And when the ears shall be cut down, which are without number, how great a floor shall they fill?

33 Then I answered and said, How, and when shall these things come to pass? wherefore are our years few and evil?

34 And he answered me, saying, Do not thou hasten above the most Highest: for thy haste is in vain to be above him, for thou hast much exceeded.

35 Did not the souls also of the righteous ask question of these things in their chambers, saying, How long shall I hope on this fashion? when cometh the fruit of the floor of our reward?

‖ Or, Jeremiel.

36 And unto these things ‖ Uriel the archangel gave them answer, and said, Even when the number of seeds is filled in you: for he hath weighed the world in the balance.

37 By measure hath he measured the times, and by number hath he numbered the times; and he doth not move nor stir them, until the said measure be fulfilled.

38 Then answered I and said, O Lord that bearest rule, even we all are full of impiety.

39 And for our sakes peradventure it is that the floors of the righteous are not filled, because of the sins of them that dwell upon the earth.

40 So he answered me, and said, Go thy way to a woman with child, and ask of her when she hath fulfilled her nine months, if her womb may keep the birth any longer within her.

41 Then said I, No, Lord, that can she not. And he said unto me, In the grave the chambers of souls are like the womb of a woman:

42 For like as a woman that travaileth maketh haste to escape the necessity of the travail: even so do these places haste to deliver those things that are committed unto them.

43 From the beginning, look, what thou desirest to see, it shall be shewed thee.

44 Then answered I and said, If I have found favour in thy sight, and if it be possible, and if I be meet therefore,

45 Shew me then whether there be more to come than is past, or more past than is to come.

46 What is past I know, but what is for to come I know not.

47 And he said unto me, Stand up upon the right side, and I shall expound the similitude unto thee.

48 So I stood, and saw, and, behold, an hot burning oven passed by before me: and it happened, that when the flame was gone by I looked, and, behold, the smoke remained still.

49 After this there passed by before me a watery cloud, and sent down much rain with a storm; and when the stormy rain was past, the drops remained still.

50 Then said he unto me, Consider with thyself; as the rain is more than the drops, and as the fire is greater than the smoke; but the drops and the smoke remain behind: so the ‖ quantity which is past did more exceed.

‖ Or, measure.

51 Then I prayed, and said, May I live, thinkest thou, until that time? or ‖ what shall happen in those days?

‖ Or, who shall be? Manuscript.

52 He answered me, and said, As for the tokens whereof thou askest me, I may tell thee of them in part: but as touching thy life, I am not sent to shew thee; for I do not know it.

CHAP. V.

1 The signs of the times to come. 23 He asketh why God, choosing but one people, did cast them off. 30 He is taught, that God's judgments are unsearchable, 46 and that God doeth not all at once.

NEVERTHELESS as concerning the tokens, behold, the days shall come, that they which dwell upon earth ‖ shall be taken in a great number, and the way of truth shall be hidden, and the land shall be barren of faith.

‖ Or, shall be found with great wealth.

2 But [a] iniquity shall be increased above that which now thou seest, or that thou hast heard long ago.

[a] Matt. 24. 12.

3 And the land, ‖ that thou seest now to have root, shalt thou see wasted suddenly.

‖ Or, that thou treadest upon and seest.

4 But if the most High grant thee to live, thou shalt see after the third trumpet that the sun shall suddenly shine again in the night, and the moon thrice in the day:

5 And blood shall drop out of wood, and the stone shall give his voice, and the people shall be troubled:

6 And even he shall rule, whom they look not for that dwell upon the earth, and the fowls shall take their flight away together:

7 And the Sodomitish sea shall cast out fish, and make a noise in the night, which many have not known: but they shall all hear the voice thereof.

8 There shall be a confusion also in many places, and the fire shall be oft ‖ sent out again, and the wild beasts shall change their places, and menstruous women shall bring forth monsters:

9 And salt waters shall be found in the sweet, and all friends shall destroy one another; then shall wit hide itself, and understanding withdraw itself into his secret chamber,

10 And shall be sought of many, and yet not be found: then shall unrighteousness and incontinency be multiplied upon earth.

11 One land also shall ask another, and say, Is righteousness that maketh a man righteous gone through thee? And it shall say, No.

12 At the same time shall men hope, but nothing obtain: they shall labour, but their ways shall not ‖ prosper.

13 To shew thee such tokens I have leave; and if thou wilt pray again, and weep as now, and fast seven days, thou shalt hear yet greater things.

14 Then I awaked, and an extreme fearfulness went through all my body, and my mind was troubled, so that it fainted.

15 So the angel that was come to talk with me held me, comforted me, and set me upon my feet.

16 And in the second night it came to pass, that Salathiel the captain of the people came unto me, saying, Where hast thou been? and why is thy countenance so heavy?

17 Knowest thou not that Israel is committed unto thee in the land of their captivity?

18 Up then, and eat bread, and forsake us not, as the shepherd that leaveth his flock in the hands of cruel wolves.

19 Then said I unto him, Go thy ways from me, and come not nigh me. And he heard what I said, and went from me.

20 And so I fasted seven days, mourning and weeping, like as Uriel the angel commanded me.

21 And after seven days so it was, that the thoughts of my heart were very grievous unto me again,

22 And my soul recovered the spirit of understanding, and I began to talk with the most High again,

23 And said, O Lord that bearest rule, of every wood of the earth, and of all the trees thereof, thou hast chosen thee one only vine:

24 And of all lands of the whole world thou hast chosen thee one pit: and of all the flowers thereof one lily:

25 And of all the depths of the sea thou hast filled thee one river: and of all builded cities thou hast hallowed Sion unto thyself:

26 And of all the fowls that are created thou hast named thee one dove: and of all the cattle that are made thou hast provided thee one sheep:

27 And among all the multitudes of people thou hast gotten thee one people: and unto this people, whom thou lovedst, thou gavest a law that is approved of all.

28 And now, O Lord, why hast thou given this one people over unto many? and ‖ upon the one root hast thou prepared others, and why hast thou scattered thy only one people among many?

‖ Or, over.

29 And they which did gainsay thy promises, and believed not thy covenants, have trodden them down.

30 If thou didst so much hate thy people, yet shouldest thou punish them with thine own hands.

31 Now when I had spoken these words, the angel that came to me the night afore was sent unto me,

32 And said unto me, Hear me, and I will instruct thee; hearken to the thing that I say, and I shall tell thee more.

33 And I said, Speak on, my Lord.

Then said he unto me, Thou art sore troubled in mind for Israel's sake: lovest thou that people better than he that made them?

34 And I said, No, Lord: but of very grief have I spoken: for my reins pain me every hour, while I labour to comprehend the way of the most High, and to seek out part of his judgment.

35 And he said unto me, Thou canst not. And I said, Wherefore, Lord? whereunto was I born then? or why was not my mother's womb then my grave, that I might not have seen the travail of Jacob, and the wearisome toil of the stock of Israel?

36 And he said unto me, Number me the things that are not yet come, gather me together the drops that are scattered abroad, make me the flowers green again that are withered,

37 Open me the places that are closed, and bring me forth the winds that in them are shut up, shew me the image of a voice: and then I will declare to thee the thing that thou labourest to know.

38 And I said, O Lord that bearest rule, who may know these things, but he that hath not his dwelling with men?

39 As for me, I am unwise: how may I then speak of these things whereof thou askest me?

40 Then said he unto me, Like as thou canst do none of these things that I have spoken of, even so canst thou not find out my judgment, or in the end the love that I have promised unto my people.

41 And I said, Behold, O Lord, yet art thou nigh unto them that be reserved till the end: and what shall they do that have been before me, or we that be now, or they that shall come after us?

42 And he said unto me, I will liken my judgment unto a ring: like as there is no slackness of the last, even so there is no swiftness of the first.

43 So I answered and said, Couldest thou not make those that have been made, and be now, and that are for to come, at once; that thou mightest shew thy judgment the sooner?

44 Then answered he me, and said, The creature may not haste above the maker; neither may the world hold them at once that shall be created therein.

45 And I said, As thou hast said unto thy servant, that thou, which givest life to all, hast given life at once to the creature that thou hast created, and the creature bare it: even so it might now also bear them that now be present at once.

46 And he said unto me, Ask the womb of a woman, and say unto her, If thou bringest forth children, why dost thou it not together, but one after another? pray her therefore to bring forth ten children at once.

47 And I said, She cannot: but must do it by distance of time.

48 Then said he unto me, Even so have I given the womb of the earth to those that be sown in it in their times.

49 For like as a young child may not bring forth the things that belong to the aged, even so have I disposed the world which I created.

50 And I asked, and said, Seeing thou hast now given me the way, I will proceed to speak before thee: for our mother, of whom thou hast told me that she is young, draweth now nigh unto age.

51 He answered me, and said, Ask a woman that beareth children, and she shall tell thee.

52 Say unto her, Wherefore are not they whom thou hast now brought forth like those that were before, but less of stature?

53 And she shall answer thee, They that be born in the strength of youth are of one fashion, and they that are born in the time of age, when the womb faileth, are otherwise.

54 Consider thou therefore also, how that ye are less of stature than those that were before you.

55 And so are they that come after you less than ye, as the creatures which now begin to be old, and have passed over the strength of youth.

56 Then said I, Lord, I beseech thee, if I have found favour in thy sight, shew thy servant by whom thou visitest thy creature.

CHAP. VI.

1 God's purpose is eternal. 8 The next world shall follow this immediately. 13 What shall fall out at the last. 31 He is promised more knowledge, 38 and reckoneth up the works of the creation, 57 and complaineth that they have no part in the world for whom it was made.

AND he said unto me, In the beginning, when the ‖ earth was made, before the borders of the world stood, or ever the winds blew, ‖ Or, circle of the earth.

2 Before it thundered and lightened, or ever the foundations of paradise were laid,

3 Before the fair flowers were seen, or ever the moveable powers were established, before the innumerable multitude of angels were gathered together,

4 Or ever the heights of the air were lifted up, before the measures of the firmament were named, or ever the chimneys in Sion were hot,

5 And ere the present years were sought out, and or ever the inventions of them that now sin were turned, before they were sealed that have gathered faith for a treasure:

6 Then did I consider these things, and they all were made through me alone, and through none other: by me also they shall be ended, and by none other.

7 Then answered I and said, What shall be the parting asunder of the times? or when shall be the end of the first, and the beginning of it that followeth?

8 And he said unto me, From Abraham unto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were born of him, [a] Jacob's hand held ‖ first the heel of Esau.

[a] Gen. 25. 26.
‖ Or, From the beginning.

9 For Esau is the end of the world, and Jacob is the beginning of it that followeth.

10 The hand of man is betwixt the heel and the hand: other question, Esdras, ask thou not.

11 ¶ I answered then and said, O Lord that bearest rule, if I have found favour in thy sight, 12 I beseech thee, shew thy servant the end of thy tokens, whereof thou shewedst me part the last night.

13 So he answered and said unto me, Stand up upon thy feet, and hear a mighty sounding voice.

14 And it shall be as it were a great ‖ motion; but the place where thou standest shall not be moved.

15 And therefore when it speaketh be not afraid: for the word is of the end, and the foundation of the earth is understood.

16 And why? because the speech of these things trembleth and is moved: for it knoweth that the end of these things must be changed.

17 And it happened, that when I had heard it I stood up upon my feet, and hearkened, and, behold, there was a voice that spake, and the sound of it was like the sound of many waters.

18 And it said, Behold, the days come, that I will begin to draw nigh, and to visit them that dwell upon the earth,

19 And will begin to make inquisition of them, what they be that have hurt unjustly with their unrighteousness, and when the affliction of Sion shall be fulfilled;

20 And when the world, that shall begin to vanish away, shall be ‖ finished, then will I shew these tokens: the books shall be opened before the firmament, and they shall see all together:

21 And the children of a year old shall speak with their voices, the women with child shall bring forth untimely children of three or four months old, and they shall live, and be raised up.

22 And suddenly shall the sown places appear unsown, the full storehouses shall suddenly be found empty:

23 And the trumpet shall give a sound, which when every man heareth, they shall be suddenly afraid.

24 At that time shall friends fight one against another like enemies, and the earth shall stand in fear with those that dwell therein, the springs of the fountains shall stand still, and in three hours they shall not run.

25 Whosoever remaineth from all these that I have told thee shall escape, and see my salvation, and the end of your world.

26 And the men that are received shall see it, who have not tasted death from their birth: and the heart of the inhabitants shall be changed, and turned into another meaning.

27 For evil shall be put out, and deceit shall be quenched.

28 As for faith, it shall flourish, corruption shall be overcome, and the truth, which hath been so long without fruit, shall be declared.

29 And when he talked with me, behold, I looked by little and little upon him before whom I stood.

30 And these words said he unto me; I am come to shew thee the time of the night to come.

31 If thou wilt pray yet more, and fast seven days again, I shall tell thee greater things ‖ by day than I have heard.

‖ See chap. 13. ver. 52.

32 For thy voice is heard before the most High: for the Mighty hath seen thy righteous dealing, he hath seen also thy chastity, which thou hast had ever since thy youth.

33 And therefore hath he sent me to shew thee all these things, and to say unto thee, Be of good comfort, and fear not.

34 And hasten not with the times that are past, to think vain things, that thou mayest not hasten from the latter times.

35 And it came to pass after this, that I wept again, and fasted seven days in like manner, that I might fulfil the three weeks which he told me.

36 And in the eighth night was my heart vexed within me again, and I began to speak before the most High.

37 For my spirit was greatly set on fire, and my soul was in distress.

38 And I said, O Lord, thou spakest from the beginning of the creation, even
[a] Gen. 1. 1. the first day, and saidst thus; [b] Let heaven and earth be made; and thy word was a perfect work.

39 And then was the spirit, and darkness and silence were on every side; the sound of man's voice was not yet formed.

40 Then commandedst thou a fair light to come forth of thy treasures, that thy work might appear.

41 Upon the second day thou madest the spirit of the firmament, and commandedst it to part asunder, and to make a division betwixt the waters, that the one part might go up, and the other remain beneath.

42 Upon the third day thou didst command that the waters should be gathered in the seventh part of the earth: six parts hast thou dried up, and kept them, to the intent that of these some being planted of God and tilled might serve thee.

43 For as soon as thy word went forth the work was made.

44 For immediately there was great and innumerable fruit, and many and divers pleasures for the taste, and flowers of unchangeable colour, and odours of wonderful smell: and this was done the third day.

[c] Gen. 1. 14. 45 [c] Upon the fourth day thou commandedst that the sun should shine, and the moon give her light, and the stars should be in order:

[d] Gen. 1. 15. Deut. 4. 19. 46 And gavest them a charge to do [d] service unto man, that was to be made.

47 Upon the fifth day thou saidst unto
[e] Gen. 1. 20. the seventh part, [e] where the waters were gathered, that it should bring forth living creatures, fowls and fishes: and so it came to pass.

48 For the dumb water and without life brought forth living things at the commandment of God, that all people might praise thy wondrous works.

49 Then didst thou ordain two living
[f] Behemoth. creatures, the one thou calledst ‖ Enoch, and the other Leviathan;

50 And didst separate the one from the other: for the seventh part, namely, where the water was gathered together, might not hold them both.

51 Unto Enoch thou gavest one part, which was dried up the third day, that he should dwell in the same part, wherein are a thousand hills:

52 But unto Leviathan thou gavest the seventh part, namely, the moist; and hast kept him to be devoured of whom thou wilt, and when.

53 Upon the sixth day thou gavest commandment unto the earth, that before thee it should bring forth beasts, cattle, and creeping things:

54 And after these, Adam also, whom thou madest lord of all thy creatures: of him come we all, and the people also whom thou hast chosen.

55 All this have I spoken before thee, O Lord, because thou madest the world for our sakes.

56 As for the other people, which also come of Adam, thou hast said that they are nothing, but be like unto spittle: and hast likened the abundance of them unto a drop that falleth from a vessel.

57 And now, O Lord, behold, these heathen, which have ever been reputed as nothing, have begun to be lords over us, and to devour us.

58 But we thy people, whom thou hast called thy firstborn, thy only begotten, and thy fervent lover, are given into their hands.

59 If the world now be made for our sakes, why do we not possess an inheritance with the world? how long shall this endure?

CHAP. VII.

4 The way is narrow. 12 When it was made narrow. 28 All shall die, and rise again. 33 Christ shall sit in judgment. 46 God hath not made paradise in vain, 62 and is merciful.

AND when I had made an end of speaking these words, there was sent unto me the angel which had been sent unto me the nights afore:

2 And he said unto me, Up, Esdras, and hear the words that I am come to tell thee.

3 And I said, Speak on, my God. Then said he unto me, The sea is set in a wide place, that it might be deep and great.

4 But put the case the entrance were narrow, and like a river;

Chap. VI. ver. 49. Then didst thou ordain two living creatures, &c.] The story here related has all the appearance of being a rabbinical conceit, which the author borrowed from the fanciful writings of the Jews. Arnald.

5 Who then could go into the sea to look upon it, and to rule it? if he went not through the narrow, how could he come into the broad?

6 There is also another thing; A city is builded, and set upon a broad field, and is full of all good things:

7 The entrance thereof is narrow, and is set in a ‖ dangerous place to fall, like as if there were a fire on the right hand, and on the left a deep water:

‖ Or, steep place.

8 And one only path between them both, even between the fire and the water, so small that there could but one man go there at once.

9 If this city now were given unto a man for an inheritance, if he never shall pass the danger set before it, how shall he receive this inheritance?

10 And I said, It is so, Lord. Then said he unto me, Even so also is Israel's portion.

11 Because for their sakes I made the world: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was decreed that now is done.

12 Then were the entrances of this world made narrow, full of sorrow and travail: they are but few and evil, full of perils, and very painful.

13 For the entrances of the ‖ elder world were wide and sure, and brought immortal fruit.

14 If then they that live labour not to enter these strait and vain things, they can never receive those that are laid up for them.

15 Now therefore why disquietest thou thyself, seeing thou art but a corruptible man? and why art thou moved, whereas thou art but mortal?

16 Why hast thou not considered in thy mind this thing that is to come, rather than that which is present?

17 Then answered I and said, O Lord that bearest rule, thou hast ordained in thy

* Deut. 8. 1. * law, that the righteous should inherit these things, but that the ungodly should perish.

18 Nevertheless the righteous shall suffer strait things, and hope for wide: for they that have done wickedly have suffered the strait things, and yet shall not see the wide.

19 And he said unto me, There is no judge above God, and none that hath understanding above the Highest.

20 For there be many that perish in this life, because they despise the law of God that is set before them.

21 For God hath given strait commandment to such as came, what they should do to live, even as they came, and what they should observe to avoid punishment.

22 Nevertheless they were not obedient unto him; but spake against him, and imagined vain things;

23 And deceived themselves by their wicked deeds; and said of the most High, that he is not; and knew not his ways:

24 But his law have they despised, and denied his covenants: in his statutes have they not been faithful, and have not performed his works.

25 And therefore, Esdras, for the empty are empty things, and for the full are the full things.

26 Behold, the time shall come, that these tokens which I have told thee shall come to pass, and the bride shall appear, and she coming forth shall be seen, that now is withdrawn from the earth.

27 And whosoever is delivered from the foresaid evils shall see my wonders.

28 For my son Jesus shall be revealed with those that be with him, and they that remain shall rejoice within four hundred years.

29 After these years shall my son Christ die, and all men that have life.

30 And the world shall be turned into the old silence seven days, like as in the ‖ former judgments: so that no man shall remain.

31 And after seven days the world, that yet awaketh not, shall be raised up, and that shall die that is corrupt.

32 And the earth shall restore those that are asleep in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in silence, and the secret places shall deliver those souls that were committed unto them.

33 And the most High shall appear upon the seat of judgment, and misery shall pass away, and the long suffering shall have an end:

34 But judgment only shall remain, truth shall stand, and faith shall wax strong:

35 And the work shall follow, and the Chap. VII. ver. 28. — my son Jesus, &c.] This and several other passages of this book speak so plainly of Jesus Christ, His coming, office, death, &c, that it seems impossible any Jews, who received this book as authentick, could remain unconverted. On this account it is inferred, that this book must have been written subsequently to the time of our Saviour, from whose history, and the writings of His Apostles, the author has transcribed several passages. Arnald.

reward shall be shewed, and the good deeds shall be of force, and wicked deeds shall bear no rule.

[b] Gen. 18. 23. [c] Exod. 32. 11.

36 Then said I, [b] Abraham prayed first for the Sodomites, and [c] Moses for the fathers that sinned in the wilderness:

37 And Jesus after him for Israel in the time of ‖ Achan:

‖ Or, Achor.

[d] 2 Sam. 24. 17. [e] 1 Chron. 6. 14. [f] 1 Kings 17. 21. & 18. 42, 45. [g] 2 Kings 19. 15.

38 And Samuel and [d] David for the destruction: and [e] Solomon for them that should come to the sanctuary:

39 And [f] Helias for those that received rain; and for the dead, that he might live:

40 And [g] Ezechias for the people in the time of Sennacherib: and many for many.

41 Even so now, seeing corruption is grown up, and wickedness increased, and the righteous have prayed for the ungodly: wherefore shall it not be so now also?

42 He answered me, and said, This present life is not the end where much glory doth abide; therefore have they prayed for the weak.

43 But the day of doom shall be the end of this time, and the beginning of the immortality for to come, wherein corruption is past,

44 Intemperance is at an end, infidelity is cut off, righteousness is grown, and truth is sprung up.

45 Then shall no man be able to save him that is destroyed, nor to oppress him that hath gotten the victory.

46 I answered then and said, This is my first and last saying, that it had been better not to have given the earth unto Adam: or else, when it was given him, to have restrained him from sinning.

47 For what profit is it for men now in this present time to live in heaviness, and after death to look for punishment?

[h] Rom. 5. 18.

48 O thou Adam, what hast thou done? for though it was [h] thou that sinned, thou art not fallen alone, but we all that come of thee.

49 For what profit is it unto us, if there be promised us an immortal time, whereas we have done the works that bring death?

50 And that there is promised us an everlasting hope, whereas ourselves being most wicked are made vain?

51 And that there are laid up for us dwellings of health and safety, whereas we have lived wickedly?,

52 And that the glory of the most High is kept to defend them which have led ‖ a wary life, whereas we have walked in the most wicked ways of all?

53 And that there should be shewed a paradise, whose fruit endureth for ever, wherein is ‖ security and medicine, since we shall not enter into it?

54 (For we have walked in unpleasant places.)

55 And that the faces of them which have used abstinence shall shine above the stars, whereas our faces shall be blacker than darkness?

56 For while we lived and committed iniquity, we considered not that we should begin to suffer for it after death.

57 Then answered he me, and said, This is the ‖ condition of the battle, which man that is born upon the earth shall fight;

58 That, if he be overcome, he shall suffer as thou hast said: but if he get the victory, he shall receive the thing that I say.

59 For this is the life whereof Moses spake unto the people while he lived, saying, [i] Choose thee life, that thou mayest live.

[i] Deut. 30. 19.

60 Nevertheless they believed not him, nor yet the prophets after him, no nor me which have spoken unto them,

61 That there should not be such heaviness in their destruction, as shall be joy over them that are persuaded to salvation.

62 I answered then, and said, I know, Lord, that the most High is called merciful, in that he hath mercy upon them which are not yet come into the world,

63 And upon those also that turn to his law;

[k] Rom. 2. 4.

64 And that [k] he is patient, and long suffereth those that have sinned, as his creatures;

65 And that he is bountiful, for he is ready to give where it needeth;

66 And that he is of great mercy, for he multiplieth more and more mercies to them that are present, and that are past, and also to them which are to come.

67 For if he shall not multiply his mercies, the world would not continue with them that inherit therein.

68 And he pardoneth; for if he did not so of his goodness, that they which have committed iniquities might be eased of them, the ten thousandth part of men should not remain living.

69 And being judge, if he should not forgive them that are ‖ cured with his word, and put out the multitude of ‖ contentions,

‖ Or, created. ‖ Or, concupisc.

70 There should be very few left peradventure in an innumerable multitude.

CHAP. VIII.

1 Many created, but few saved. 6 He asketh why God destroyeth his own work, 26 and prayeth God to look upon the people which only serve him. 41 God answereth, that all sect cometh not to good, 52 and that glory is prepared for him and such like.

AND he answered me, saying, The most High hath made this world for many, but the world to come for few.

2 I will tell thee a similitude, Esdras; As when thou askest the earth, it shall say unto thee, that it giveth much mould whereof earthen vessels are made, but little dust that gold cometh of: even so is the course of this present world.

[a] Matt. 20. 16. 3 [a] There be many created, but few shall be saved.

4 So answered I and said, Swallow then down, O my soul, understanding, and devour wisdom.

5 For thou hast agreed to give ear, and art willing to prophesy: for thou hast no longer space than only to live.

6 O Lord, if thou suffer not thy servant, that we may pray before thee, and ‖ thou give us seed unto our heart, and culture to our understanding, that there may come fruit of it; how shall each man live that is corrupt, who beareth the place of a man?

7 For thou art alone, and we all one workmanship of thine hands, like as thou hast said.

‖ Or, how is the body fashioned.

8 For ‖ when the body is fashioned now in the mother's womb, and thou givest it members, thy creature is preserved in fire and water, and nine months doth thy workmanship endure thy creature which is created in her.

9 But that which keepeth and is kept shall both be preserved: and when the time cometh, the womb preserved delivereth up the things that grew in it.

10 For thou hast commanded out of the parts of the body, that is to say, out of the breasts, milk to be given, which is the fruit of the breasts.

11 That the thing which is fashioned may be nourished for a time, till thou disposest it to thy mercy.

12 Thou broughtest it up with thy righteousness, and nurturedst it in thy law, and reformedst it with thy judgment.

13 And thou shalt mortify it as thy creature, and quicken it as thy work.

14 If therefore thou shalt destroy him which with so great [b] labour was fashioned, it is an easy thing to be ordained by thy commandment, that the thing which was made might be preserved.

[b] Job 10. 8. Psal. 139. 14, &c.

15 Now therefore, Lord, I will speak; touching man in general, thou knowest best; but touching thy people, for whose sake I am sorry;

16 And for thine inheritance, for whose cause I mourn; and for Israel, for whom I am heavy; and for Jacob, for whose sake I am troubled;

17 Therefore will I begin to pray before thee for myself and for them: for I see the falls of us that dwell in the land.

18 But I have heard the swiftness of the judge which is to come.

19 Therefore hear my voice, and understand my words, and I shall speak before thee. This is the beginning of the words of Esdras, before he was taken up: and I said,

20 O Lord, thou that dwellest in everlastingness, which beholdest from above things in the heaven and in the air;

21 Whose throne is inestimable; whose glory may not be comprehended; before whom the hosts of angels stand with trembling,

22 Whose service is conversant in wind and fire; whose word is true, and sayings constant; whose commandment is strong, and ordinance fearful;

23 Whose look drieth up the depths, and indignation maketh the mountains to melt away; which the truth witnesseth:

24 O hear the prayer of thy servant, and give ear to the petition of thy creature.

25 For while I live I will speak, and so long as I have understanding I will answer.

26 O look not upon the sins of thy people; but on them which serve thee in truth.

27 Regard not the wicked inventions of the heathen, but the desire of those that keep thy testimonies in afflictions.

28 Think not upon those that have walked feignedly before thee: but remember them, which according to thy will have known thy fear.

29 Let it not be thy will to destroy them which have lived like beasts; but to look upon them that have clearly taught thy law.

30 Take thou no indignation at them which are deemed worse than beasts; but love them that alway put their trust in thy righteousness and glory.

31 For we and our fathers ‖ do languish of such diseases: but because of us sinners thou shalt be called merciful.

32 For if thou ‖ hast a desire to have mercy upon us, thou shalt be called merciful, to us namely, that have no works of righteousness.

33 For the just, which have many good works laid up with thee, shall out of their own deeds receive reward.

34 For what is man, that thou shouldest take displeasure at him? or what is a corruptible generation, that thou shouldest be so bitter toward it?

[c] 1 Kings 8. 46. 2 Chron. 6. 36. 35 [c] For in truth there is no man among them that be born, but he hath dealt wickedly; and among the faithful there is none which hath not done amiss.

36 For in this, O Lord, thy righteousness and thy goodness shall be declared, if thou be merciful unto them which have not the ‖ confidence of good works.

37 Then answered he me, and said, Some things hast thou spoken aright, and according unto thy words it shall be.

38 For indeed I will not think on the disposition of them which have sinned before death, before judgment, before destruction:

[d] Gen. 4. 4. 39 But [d] I will rejoice over the disposition of the righteous, and I will remember also their pilgrimage, and the salvation, and the reward, that they shall have.

40 Like as I have spoken now, so shall it come to pass.

41 For as the husbandman soweth much seed upon the ground, and planteth many trees, and yet the thing that is sown good in his season cometh not up, neither doth all that is planted take root: even so is it of them that are sown in the world; they shall not all be saved.

42 I answered then and said, If I have found grace, let me speak.

43 Like as the husbandman's seed perisheth, if it come not up, and receive not thy rain in due season; or if there come too much rain, and corrupt it:

44 Even so perisheth man also, which is formed with thy hands, and is called thine own image, because thou art like unto him, for whose sake thou hast made all things, and likened him unto the husbandman's seed.

45 Be not wroth with us, but spare thy people, and have mercy upon thine own inheritance: for thou art merciful unto thy creature.

46 Then answered he me, and said, Things present are for the present, and things to come for such as be to come.

47 For thou comest far short that thou shouldest be able to love my creature more than I: but I have ofttimes drawn nigh unto thee, and unto it, but never to the unrighteous.

48 In this also thou art marvellous before the most High:

49 In that thou hast humbled thyself, as it becometh thee, and hast not judged thyself worthy to be much glorified among the righteous.

50 For many great miseries shall be done to them that in the latter time shall dwell in the world, because they have walked in great pride.

51 But understand thou for thyself, and seek out the glory for such as be like thee.

52 For unto you is paradise opened, the tree of life is planted, the time to come is prepared, plenteousness is made ready, a city is builded, and rest is allowed, yea, perfect goodness and wisdom.

53 The root of evil is sealed up from you, weakness and the moth is hid from you, and corruption is fled into ‖ hell to be forgotten:

54 Sorrows are passed, and in the end is shewed the treasure of immortality.

55 And therefore ask thou no more questions concerning the multitude of them that perish.

56 For when they had taken liberty, they despised the most High, thought scorn of his law, and forsook his ways.

57 Moreover they have trodden down his righteous,

58 And [e] said in their heart, that there is no God; yea, and that knowing they must die.

[e] Psal. 14. 1 & 53. 1.

59 For as the things aforesaid shall receive you, so thirst and pain are prepared for them: for it was not his will that men should come to nought:

60 But they which be created have defiled the name of him that made them, and were unthankful unto him which prepared life for them.

61 And therefore is my judgment now at hand.

62 These things have I not shewed unto all men, but unto thee, and a few like thee. Then answered I and said,

63 Behold, O Lord, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the wonders, which thou wilt begin to do in the last times: but at what time, thou hast not shewed me.

CHAP. IX.

7 Who shall be saved, and who not. 19 All the world is now corrupted: 22 yet God doth save a few. 33 He complaineth that those perish which keep God's law: 38 and seeth a woman lamenting in a field.

HE answered me then, and said, Measure thou the time diligently in itself: and when thou seest part of the signs past, which I have told thee before,

2 Then shalt thou understand, that it is the very same time, wherein the Highest will begin to visit the world which he made.

3 Therefore when there shall be seen [a] earthquakes and uproars of the people in the world:

[a] Matt. 24. 7.

4 Then shalt thou well understand, that the most High spake of those things from the days that were before thee, even from the beginning.

5 For like as all that is made in the world hath a beginning and an end, and the end is manifest:

6 Even so the times also of the Highest have plain beginnings in wonders and powerful works, and endings in effects and signs.

7 And every one that shall be saved, and shall be able to escape by his works, and by faith, whereby ye have believed,

8 Shall be preserved from the said perils, and shall see my salvation in my land, and within my borders: for I have sanctified them for me from the beginning.

9 Then ‖shall they be in pitiful case, which now have abused my ways: and they that have cast them away despitefully shall dwell in torments.

‖ Or, they shall marvel.

10 For such as in their life have received benefits, and have not known me;

11 And they that have lothed my law, while they had yet liberty, and, when as yet place of repentance was open unto them, understood not, but despised it;

12 The same must know it after death by pain.

13 And therefore be thou not curious how the ungodly shall be punished, and when: but enquire how the righteous shall be saved, whose the world is, and for whom the world is created.

14 Then answered I and said,

15 I have said before, and now do speak, and will speak it also hereafter, that there be many more of them which perish, than of them which shall be saved:

16 Like as a wave is greater than a drop.

17 And he answered me, saying, Like as the field is, so is also the seed; as the flowers be, such are the colours also; such as the workman is, such also is the work; and as the husbandman is himself, so is his husbandry also: for it was the time of the world.

‖ And now because the time of the world was come, when I was preparing the world, &c.

18 ‖ And now when I prepared the world, which was not yet made, even for them to dwell in that now live, no man spake against me.

19 For then every one obeyed: ‖ but now the manners of them which are created in this world that is made are corrupted by a perpetual seed, and by a law which is unsearchable did themselves.

‖ but when the world was made, look now and then the manners of every one created were corrupted by a never failing harvest, and a law unsearchable.

20 So I considered the world, and, behold, there was peril because of the devices that were come into it.

21 And I saw, and spared it greatly, and have kept me a ‖grape of the cluster, and a plant of a great people.

‖ Or, grain.

22 Let the multitude perish then, which was born in vain; and let my ‖grape be kept, and my plant; for with great labour have I made it perfect.

‖ Or, grain.

23 Nevertheless, if thou wilt cease yet seven days more, (but thou shalt not fast in them, 24 But go into a field of flowers, where no house is builded, and eat only the flowers of the field; taste no flesh, drink no wine, but eat flowers only;)

25 And pray unto the Highest continually, then will I come and talk with thee.

26 So I went my way into the field which is called Ardath, like as he commanded me; and there I sat among the flowers, and did eat of the herbs of the field, and the meat of the same satisfied me.

27 After seven days I sat upon the grass, and my heart was vexed within me, like as before:

28 And I opened my mouth, and began to talk before the most High, and said,

29 O Lord, thou that shewest thyself unto us, thou wast [b] shewed unto our fathers in the wilderness, in a place where no man ‖treadeth, in a barren place, when they came out of Egypt.

[b] Exod. 19. 9. & 24. 10. Deut. 4. 12.

‖ Or, cometh.

30 And thou spakest, saying, Hear me, O Israel; and mark my words, thou seed of Jacob.

31 For, behold, I sow my law in you, and it shall bring fruit in you, and ye shall be honoured in it for ever.

32 But our fathers, which received the law, kept it not, and observed not thy ordinances: and though the fruit of thy law did not perish, neither could it, for it was thine;

33 Yet they that received it perished, because they kept not the thing that was sown in them.

34 And, lo, it is a custom, when the ground hath received seed, or the sea a ship, or any vessel meat or drink, that, that being perished wherein it was sown or cast into,

35 That thing also which was sown, or cast therein, or received, doth perish, and remaineth not with us: but with us it hath not happened so.

36 For we that have received the law perish by sin, and our heart also which received it.

37 Notwithstanding the law perisheth not, but remaineth in his force.

38 And when I spake these things in my heart, I looked back with mine eyes, and upon the right side I saw a woman, and, behold, she mourned and wept with a loud voice, and was much grieved in heart, and her clothes were rent, and she had ashes upon her head.

39 Then let I my thoughts go that I was in, and turned me unto her,

40 And said unto her, Wherefore weepest thou? why art thou so grieved in thy mind?

41 And she said unto me, Sir, let me alone, that I may bewail myself, and add unto my sorrow, for I am sore vexed in my mind, and brought very low.

42 And I said unto her, What aileth thee? tell me.

43 She said unto me, I thy servant have been barren, and had no child, though I had an husband thirty years.

44 And those thirty years I did nothing else day and night, and every hour, but make my prayer to the Highest.

45 After thirty years God heard me thine handmaid, looked upon my misery, considered my trouble, and gave me a son: and I was very glad of him, so was my husband also, and all my neighbours: and we gave great honour unto the Almighty.

46 And I nourished him with great travail.

47 So when he grew up, and came to the time that he should have a wife, I made a feast.

CHAP. X.

1 He comforteth the woman in the field. 17 She vanisheth away, and a city appeareth in her place. 40 The angel declareth these visions in the field.

AND it came to pass, that when my son was entered into his wedding chamber, he fell down, and died.

2 Then we all overthrew the lights, and all my ‖ neighbours rose up to comfort me: so I took my rest unto the second day at night.

3 And it came to pass, when they had all left off to comfort me, to the end I might be quiet; then rose I up by night, and fled, and came hither into this field, as thou seest.

4 And I do now purpose not to return into the city, but here to stay, and neither to eat nor drink, but continually to mourn and to fast until I die.

5 Then left I the ‖ meditations wherein I was, and spake to her in anger, saying,

6 Thou foolish woman above all other, seest thou not our mourning, and what happeneth unto us?

7 How that Sion our mother is full of all heaviness, and much humbled, mourning very sore?

8 And now, seeing we all mourn and are sad, for we are all in heaviness, art thou grieved for one son?

9 For ask the earth, and she shall tell thee, that it is she which ought to mourn for the fall of so many that grow upon her.

10 For out of her came all at the first, and out of her shall all others come, and, behold, they walk almost all into destruction, and a multitude of them is utterly ‖ rooted out.

11 Who then should make more mourning than she, that hath lost so great a multitude; and not thou, which art sorry but for one?

12 But if thou sayest unto me, My lamentation is not like the earth's, because I have lost the fruit of my womb, which I brought forth with pains, and bare with sorrows;

13 ‖ But the earth not so: for the multitude present in it according to the course of the earth is gone, as it came:

‖ But the earth after the manner of the universe the present multitude is gone upon, as it came.

14 Then say I unto thee, Like as thou hast brought forth with labour; even so the earth also hath given her fruit, namely, man, ever since the beginning unto him that made her.

15 Now therefore keep thy sorrow to thyself, and bear with a good courage that which hath befallen thee.

16 For if thou shalt acknowledge the determination of God to be just, thou shalt both receive thy son in time, and shalt be commended among women.

17 Go thy way then into the city to thine husband.

18 And she said unto me, That will I not do: I will not go into the city, but here will I die.

19 So I proceeded to speak further unto her, and said,

20 Do not so, but be counselled by me: for how many are the adversities of Sion? be comforted in regard of the sorrow of Jerusalem.

21 For thou seest that our sanctuary is laid waste, our altar broken down, our temple destroyed;

22 Our psaltery is laid on the ground, our song is put to silence, our rejoicing is at an end, the light of our candlestick is put out, the ark of our covenant is spoiled, our holy things are defiled, and the name that is called upon us is almost profaned: our children are put to shame, our priests are burnt, our Levites are gone into captivity, our virgins are defiled, and our wives ravished; our righteous men carried away, our little ones destroyed, our young men are brought in bondage, and our strong men are become weak;

23 And, which is the greatest of all, the seal of Sion hath now lost her honour; for she is delivered into the hands of them that hate us.

24 And therefore shake off thy great heaviness, and put away the multitude of sorrows, that the Mighty may be merciful unto thee again, and the Highest shall give thee rest and ease from thy labour.

25 And it came to pass, while I was talking with her, behold, her face upon a sudden shined exceedingly, and her countenance glistered, so that I was afraid of her, and mused what it might be.

26 And, behold, suddenly she made a great cry very fearful: so that the earth shook at the noise of the woman.

27 And I looked, and, behold, the woman appeared unto me no more, but there was a city builded, and a large place shewed itself from the foundations: then was I afraid, and cried with a loud voice, and said,

[a] Chap. 4. 1. 28 Where is [a] Uriel the angel, who came unto me at the first? for he hath caused me to fall ‖ into many trances, and mine end is turned into corruption, and my prayer to rebuke.

‖ Or, into the multitude in a trance.

29 And as I was speaking these words, behold, he came unto me, and looked upon me.

30 And, lo, I lay as one that had been dead, and mine understanding was taken from me: and he took me by the right hand, and comforted me, and set me upon my feet, and said unto me,

31 What aileth thee? and why art thou so disquieted? and why is thine understanding troubled, and the thoughts of thine heart?

32 And I said, Because thou hast forsaken me, and yet I did according to thy [b] words, and I went into the field, and, lo, I have seen, and yet see, that I am not able to express.

[b] Chap. 5. 20.

33 And he said unto me, Stand up manfully, and I will advise thee.

34 Then said I, Speak on, my lord, in me; only forsake me not, lest I die frustrate of my hope.

35 For I have seen that I knew not, and hear that I do not know.

36 Or is my sense deceived, or my soul in a dream?

37 Now therefore I beseech thee that thou wilt shew thy servant of this ‖ vision.

‖ Or, trance.

38 He answered me then, and said, Hear me, and I shall inform thee, and tell thee wherefore thou art afraid: for the Highest will reveal many secret things unto thee.

39 He hath seen that thy ‖ way is right: for that thou sorrowest continually for thy people, and makest great lamentation for Sion.

‖ Or, purpose.

40 This therefore is the meaning of the vision which thou lately sawest:

41 Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou begannest to comfort her:

42 But now seest thou the likeness of the woman no more, but there appeared unto thee a city builded.

43 And whereas she told thee of the death of her son, this is the ‖ solution:

44 This woman, whom thou sawest, is Sion: and whereas she said unto thee, even she whom thou seest as a city builded,

45 Whereas, I say, she said unto thee, that she hath been thirty years barren: those are the thirty years wherein there was no offering made in her.

46 But after thirty years Solomon builded the city, and offered offerings: and then bare the barren a son.

47 And whereas she told thee that she nourished him with labour: that was the dwelling in Jerusalem.

48 But whereas she said unto thee, That my son coming into his marriage chamber happened to have a fall, and died: this was the destruction that came to Jerusalem.

49 And, behold, thou sawest her likeness, and because she mourned for her son, thou begannest to comfort her: and of these things which have chanced, these are to be opened unto thee.

50 For now the most High seeth that thou art grieved unfeignedly, and sufferest from thy whole heart for her, so hath he shewed thee the brightness of her glory, and the comeliness of her beauty:

51 And therefore I bade thee remain in the field where no house was builded:

52 For I knew that the Highest would shew this unto thee.

53 Therefore I commanded thee to go into the field, where no foundation of any building was.

54 For in the place wherein the Highest beginneth to shew his city, there can no man's building be able to stand.

55 And therefore fear not, let not thine heart be affrighted, but go thy way in, and see the beauty and greatness of the building, as much as thine eyes be able to see:

56 And then shalt thou hear as much as thine ears may comprehend.

57 For thou art blessed above many other, and ‖ art called with the Highest; and so are but few.

‖ Or, art called to be with, &c.

58 But to morrow at night thou shalt remain here;

59 And so shall the Highest shew thee visions of the ‖ high things, which the most High will do unto them that dwell upon earth in the last days. So I slept that night and another, like as he commanded me.

CHAP. XI.

1 He seeth in his dream an eagle coming out of the sea, 37 and a lion out of a wood talking to the eagle.

THEN saw I a dream, and, behold, there came up from the sea an eagle, which had twelve feathered wings, and three heads.

2 And I saw, and, behold, she spread her wings over all the earth, and all the winds of the air blew on her, and were gathered together.

3 And I beheld, and out of her feathers there grew other contrary feathers; and they became little feathers and small.

4 But her heads were at rest: the head in the midst was greater than the other, yet rested † it with the residue.

† Lat. she.

5 Moreover I beheld, and, lo, the eagle flew with her feathers, and reigned upon earth, and over them that dwelt therein.

6 And I saw that all things under heaven were subject unto her, and no man spake against her, no, not one creature upon earth.

7 And I beheld, and, lo, the eagle rose upon her talons, and spake to her feathers, saying,

8 Watch not all at once: sleep every one in his own place, and watch by course:

9 But let the heads be preserved for the last.

10 And I beheld, and, lo, the voice went not out of her heads, but from the midst of her body.

11 And I numbered her contrary feathers, and, behold, there were eight of them.

12 And I looked, and, behold, on the right side there arose one feather, and reigned over all the earth;

13 And so it was, that when it reigned, the end of it came, and the place thereof appeared no more: so the next following stood up, and reigned, and had a great time;

14 And it happened, that when it reigned, the end of it came also, like as the first, so that it appeared no more.

15 Then came there a voice unto it, and said,

16 Hear thou that hast borne rule over the earth so long: this I say unto thee, before thou beginnest to appear no more,

17 There shall none after thee attain unto thy time, neither unto the half thereof.

18 Then arose the third, and reigned as the other before, and appeared no more also.

19 So went it with all the residue one after another, as that every one reigned, and then appeared no more.

20 Then I beheld, and, lo, in process of time the feathers that followed stood up upon the right side, that they might rule also; and some of them ruled, but within a while they appeared no more:

21 For some of them were set up, but ruled not.

22 After this I looked, and, behold, the twelve feathers appeared no more, nor the two little feathers:

23 And there was no more upon the eagle's body, but three heads that rested, and six little wings.

24 Then saw I also that two little feathers divided themselves from the six, and remained under the head that was upon the right side: for the four continued in their place.

25 And I beheld, and, lo, the feathers that were under the wing thought to set up themselves, and to have the rule.

26 And I beheld, and, lo, there was one set up, but shortly it appeared no more.

27 And the second was sooner away than the first.

28 And I beheld, and, lo, the two that remained thought also in themselves to reign:

29 And when they so thought, behold, there awaked one of the heads that were at rest, namely, it that was in the midst; for that was greater than the two other heads.

30 And then I saw that the two other heads were joined with it.

31 And, behold, the head was turned with them that were with it, and did eat up the two feathers under the wing that would have reigned.

32 But this head put the whole earth in fear, and bare rule in it over all those that dwelt upon the earth with much oppression; and it had the governance of the world more than all the wings that had been.

33 And after this I beheld, and, lo, the head that was in the midst suddenly appeared no more, like as the wings.

34 But there remained the two heads, which also in like sort ruled upon the earth, and over those that dwelt therein.

35 And I beheld, and, lo, the head upon the right side devoured it that was upon the left side.

36 Then I heard a voice, which said unto me, Look before thee, and consider the thing that thou seest.

37 And I beheld, and lo as it were a roaring lion chased out of the wood: and I saw that he sent out a man's voice unto the eagle, and said,

38 Hear thou, I will talk with thee, and the Highest shall say unto thee,

39 Art not thou it that remainest of the four beasts, whom I made to reign in my world, that the end of their times might come through them?

40 And the fourth came, and overcame all the beasts that were past, and had power over the world with great fearfulness, and over the whole compass of the earth with much wicked oppression; and so long time dwelt he upon the earth with deceit.

41 For the earth hast thou not judged with truth.

42 For thou hast afflicted the meek, thou hast hurt the peaceable, thou hast loved liars, and destroyed the dwellings of them that brought forth fruit, and hast cast down the walls of such as did thee no harm.

43 Therefore is thy wrongful dealing come up unto the Highest, and thy pride unto the Mighty.

44 The Highest also hath looked upon the proud times, and, behold, they are ended, and his abominations are fulfilled.

45 And therefore appear no more, thou eagle, nor thy horrible wings, nor thy wicked feathers, nor thy malicious heads, nor thy hurtful claws, nor all thy vain body:

46 That all the earth may be refreshed, and may return, being delivered from thy violence, and that she may hope for the judgment and mercy of him that made her.

CHAP. XII.

3 The eagle, which he saw, is destroyed. 10 The vision is interpreted. 37 He is bid to write his visions, 39 and to fast, that he may see more. 46 He doth comfort those that were grieved for his absence.

AND it came to pass, whiles the lion spake these words unto the eagle, I saw,

2 And, behold, the head that remained and the four wings appeared no more, and the two went unto it, and set themselves up to reign, and their kingdom was small, and full of uproar.

3 And I saw, and, behold, they appeared no more, and the whole body of the eagle was burnt, so that the earth was in great fear: then awaked I out of the trouble and trance of my mind, and from great fear, and said unto my spirit,

4 Lo, this hast thou done unto me, in that thou searchest out the ways of the Highest.

5 Lo, yet am I weary in my mind, and very weak in my spirit; and little strength is there in me, for the great fear wherewith I was affrighted this night.

6 Therefore will I now beseech the Highest, that he will comfort me unto the end.

7 And I said, Lord that bearest rule, if I have found grace before thy sight, and if I am justified with thee before many others, and if my prayer indeed be come up before thy face;

8 Comfort me then, and shew me thy servant the interpretation and plain difference of this fearful vision, that thou mayest perfectly comfort my soul.

9 For thou hast judged me worthy to shew me the last times.

10 And he said unto me, This is the interpretation of the vision:

11 The eagle, whom thou sawest come up from the sea, is the kingdom which was seen in the [a] vision of thy brother Daniel.

12 But it was not expounded unto him, therefore now I declare it unto thee.

13 Behold, the days will come, that there shall rise up a kingdom upon earth, and it shall be feared above all the kingdoms that were before it.

14 In the same shall twelve kings reign, one after another:

15 Whereof the second shall begin to reign, and shall have more time than any of the twelve.

16 And this do the twelve wings signify, which thou sawest.

17 As for the voice which thou heardest speak, and that thou sawest not to go out from the heads, but from the midst of the body thereof, this is the interpretation:

18 That after the time of that kingdom there shall arise great strivings, and it shall stand in peril of falling: nevertheless it shall not then fall, but shall be restored again to his beginning.

19 And whereas thou sawest the eight small under feathers sticking to her wings, this is the interpretation:

20 That in him there shall arise eight kings, whose times shall be but small, and their years swift.

21 And two of them shall perish, the middle time approaching: four shall be kept until their end begin to approach: but two shall be kept unto the end.

22 And whereas thou sawest three heads resting, this is the interpretation:

23 In his last days shall the most High raise up three kingdoms, and renew many things therein, and they shall have the dominion of the earth,

24 And of those that dwell therein, with much oppression, above all those that were before them: therefore are they called the heads of the eagle.

25 For these are they that shall accomplish his wickedness, and that shall finish his last end.

26 And whereas thou sawest that the great head appeared no more, it signifieth that one of them shall die upon his bed, and yet with pain.

27 For the two that remain shall be slain with the sword.

28 For the sword of the one shall devour the other: but at the last shall he fall through the sword himself.

29 And whereas thou sawest two feathers under the wings passing over the head that is on the right side;

30 It signifieth that these are they, whom the Highest hath kept unto their end: this is the small kingdom and full of trouble, as thou sawest.

31 And the lion, whom thou sawest rising up out of the wood, and roaring, and speaking to the eagle, and rebuking her for her unrighteousness with all the words which thou hast heard;

32 This is the anointed, which the Highest hath kept for them and for their wickedness unto the end: he shall reprove them, and shall upbraid them with their cruelty.

33 For he shall set them before him alive in judgment, and shall rebuke them, and correct them.

34 For the rest of my people shall he deliver with mercy, those that have been preserved upon my borders, and he shall make them joyful until the coming of the day of judgment, whereof I have spoken unto thee from the beginning.

35 This is the dream that thou sawest, and these are the interpretations.

36 Thou only hast been meet to know this secret of the Highest.

37 Therefore write all these things that thou hast seen in a book, and hide them:

38 And teach them to the wise of the people, whose hearts thou knowest may comprehend and keep these secrets.

39 But wait thou here thyself yet seven days more, that it may be shewed thee, whatsoever it pleaseth the Highest to declare unto thee. And with that he went his way.

40 And it came to pass, when all the people saw that the seven days were past, and I not come again into the city, they gathered them all together, from the least unto the greatest, and came unto me, and said,

41 What have we offended thee? and what evil have we done against thee, that thou forsakest us, and sittest here in this place?

42 For of all the ‖ prophets thou only art left us, as a cluster of the vintage, and as a candle in a dark place, and as a haven or ship preserved from the tempest. ‖ Or, people.

43 Are not the evils which are come to us sufficient?

44 If thou shalt forsake us, how much better had it been for us, if we also had been burned in the midst of Sion?

45 For we are not better than they that died there. And they wept with a loud voice. Then answered I them, and said,

46 Be of good comfort, O Israel; and be not heavy, thou house of Jacob:

47 For the Highest hath you in remembrance, and the Mighty hath not forgotten you in temptation.

48 As for me, I have not forsaken you, neither am I departed from you: but am come into this place, to pray for the desolation of Sion, and that I might seek mercy for the low estate of your sanctuary.

49 And now go your way home every man, and after these days will I come unto you.

50 So the people went their way into the city, like as I commanded them:

51 But I remained still in the field seven days, as the angel commanded me; and did eat only in those days of the flowers of the field, and had my meat of the herbs.

CHAP. XIII.

1 He seeth in his dream a man coming out of the sea. 25 The declaration of his dream. 54 He is praised, and promised to see more.

AND it came to pass after seven days, I dreamed a dream by night:

‖ a certain man as the wind. Junius.

2 And, lo, there arose ‖ a wind from the sea, that it moved all the waves thereof.

3 And I beheld, and, lo, that man waxed strong with the ‖ thousands of heaven: and when he turned his countenance to look, all the things trembled that were seen under him.

4 And whensoever the voice went out of his mouth, all they burned that heard his voice, like as the earth faileth when it feeleth the fire.

5 And after this I beheld, and, lo, there was gathered together a multitude of men, out of number, from the four winds of the heaven, to subdue the man that came out of the sea.

6 But I beheld, and, lo, he had graved himself a great mountain, and flew up upon it.

7 But I would have seen the region or place whereout the hill was graven, and I could not.

8 And after this I beheld, and, lo, all they which were gathered together to subdue him were sore afraid, and yet durst fight.

9 And, lo, as he saw the violence of the multitude that came, he neither lifted up his hand, nor held sword, nor any instrument of war:

10 But only I saw that he sent out of his mouth as it had been a blast of fire, and out of his lips a flaming breath, and out of his tongue he cast out sparks and tempests.

11 And they were all mixed together; the blast of fire, the flaming breath, and the great tempest; and fell with violence upon the multitude which was prepared to fight, and burned them up every one, so that upon a sudden of an innumerable multitude nothing was to be perceived, but only dust and smell of smoke: when I saw this I was afraid.

12 Afterward saw I the same man come down from the mountain, and call unto him another peaceable multitude.

13 And there came much people unto him, whereof some were glad, some were sorry, some of them were bound, and other some brought ‖ of them that were offered: then was I sick through great fear, and I awaked, and said, ‖ Gathering of the things that were offered.

14 Thou hast shewed thy servant these wonders from the beginning, and hast counted me worthy that thou shouldest receive my prayer:

15 Shew me now yet the interpretation of this dream.

16 For as I conceive in mine understanding, woe unto them that shall be left in those days! and much more woe unto them that are not left behind!

17 For they that were not left were in heaviness.

18 Now understand I the things that are laid up in the latter days, which shall happen unto them, and to those that are left behind.

19 Therefore are they come into great perils and many necessities, like as these dreams declare.

20 Yet is it easier for him that is in danger to come into ‖ these things, than to pass away as a cloud out of the world, and not to see the things that happen in the last days. And he answered unto me, and said,

21 The interpretation of the vision shall I shew thee, and I will open unto thee the thing that thou hast required.

22 Whereas thou hast spoken of them that are left behind, this is the interpretation:

23 He that shall endure the peril in that time hath kept himself: they that be fallen into danger are such as have works, and faith toward the Almighty.

24 Know this therefore, that they which be left behind are more blessed than they that be dead.

25 This is the meaning of the vision: Whereas thou sawest a man coming up from the midst of the sea:

26 The same is he whom God the Highest hath kept a great season, which by his own self shall deliver his creature: and he shall order them that are left behind.

27 And whereas thou sawest, that out of his mouth there came as a blast of wind, and fire, and storm;

28 And that he held neither sword, nor any instrument of war, but that the rushing in of him destroyed the whole multitude that came to subdue him; this is the interpretation:

29 Behold, the days come, when the most High will begin to deliver them that are upon the earth.

30 And he shall come to the astonishment of them that dwell on the earth.

31 And one shall undertake to fight against another, one city against another, one place against another, [a] one people against another, and one realm against another.

[a] Matt. 24. 7.

32 And the time shall be when these things shall come to pass, and the signs shall happen which I shewed thee before, and then shall my Son be declared, whom thou sawest as a man ascending.

33 And when all the people hear his voice, every man shall in their own land leave the battle they have one against another.

34 And an innumerable multitude shall be gathered together, as thou sawest them, willing to come, and to overcome him by fighting.

35 But he shall stand upon the top of the mount Sion.

36 And Sion shall come, and shall be shewed to all men, being prepared and builded, like as thou sawest the hill graven without hands.

37 And this my Son shall rebuke the wicked inventions of those nations, which for their wicked life are fallen into the tempest;

38 And shall lay before them their evil thoughts, and the torments wherewith they shall begin to be tormented, which are like unto a flame: and he shall destroy them without labour by the law which is like unto fire.

39 And whereas thou sawest that he gathered another peaceable multitude unto him;

40 Those are the ten tribes, which were carried away prisoners out of their own land in the time of Osea the king, whom [b] Salmanasar the king of Assyria led away captive, and he carried them over the waters, and so came they into another land.

41 But they took this counsel among themselves, that they would leave the multitude of the heathen, and go forth into a further country, where never mankind dwelt,

42 That they might there keep their statutes, which they never kept in their own land.

43 And they entered into Euphrates by the narrow passages of the river.

44 For the most High then shewed [c] signs for them, and held still the flood, till they were passed over.

[c] Exod. 14. 21. Josh. 3. 15, 16

45 For through that country there was a great way to go, namely, of a year and a half: and the same region is called ‖ Arsareth.

‖ Or. Ararath.

46 Then dwelt they there until the latter time; and now when they shall begin to come,

47 The Highest shall stay the springs of the stream again, that they may go through: therefore sawest thou the multitude with peace.

48 But those that be left behind of thy people are they that are found within my borders.

49 Now when he destroyeth the multitude of the nations that are gathered together, he shall defend his people that remain.

50 And then shall he shew them great wonders.

51 Then said I, O Lord that bearest rule, shew me this: wherefore have I seen the man coming up from the midst of the sea?

52 And he said unto me, Like as thou canst neither seek out nor know the things that are in the deep of the sea: even so can no man upon earth see my Son, or those that be with him, but in the day time.

53 This is the interpretation of the dream which thou sawest, and whereby thou only art here lightened.

54 For thou hast forsaken thine own way, and applied thy diligence unto my law, and sought it.

55 Thy life hast thou ordered in wisdom, and hast called understanding thy mother.

56 And therefore have I shewed thee

Chap. XIII. ver. 44. For the most High then shewed signs for them, &c.] The relation here given of the ten tribes being miraculously carried through the Euphrates, seems to have been a fond persuasion of the Jews in later times, arising from the national prejudice, that God will never cease to do miracles in behalf of His chosen people. Arnald.

the treasures of the Highest: after other three days I will speak other things unto thee, and declare unto thee mighty and wondrous things.

57 Then went I forth into the field, giving praise and thanks greatly unto the most High because of his wonders, which he did in time;

58 And because he governeth the same, and such things as fall in their seasons: and there I sat three days.

CHAP. XIV.

1 A voice out of a bush calleth Esdras, 10 and telleth him that the world waxeth old. 22 He desireth, because the law was burnt, to write all again, 24 and is bid to get swift writers. 39 He and they are filled with understanding: 45 but he is charged not to publish all that is written.

AND it came to pass upon the third day, I sat under an oak, and, behold, there came a voice out of a bush over against me, and said, Esdras, Esdras.

2 And I said, Here am I, Lord. And I stood up upon my feet.

[a] Exod. 3. 2, 8.

3 Then said he unto me, [a] In the bush I did manifestly reveal myself unto Moses, and talked with him, when my people served in Egypt:

4 And I sent him, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought him up to the mount of Sinai, where I held him by me a long season,

5 And told him many wondrous things, and shewed him the secrets of the times, and the end; and commanded him, saying,

6 These words shalt thou declare, and these shalt thou hide.

7 And now I say unto thee,

8 That thou lay up in thy heart the signs that I have shewed, and the dreams that thou hast seen, and the interpretations which thou hast heard:

9 For thou shalt be taken away from all, and from henceforth thou shalt remain with my Son, and with such as be like thee, until the times be ended.

10 For the world hath lost his youth, and the times begin to wax old.

11 For the world is divided into twelve parts, and the ten parts of it are gone already, and half of a tenth part:

12 And there remaineth that which is after the half of the tenth part.

13 Now therefore set thine house in order, and reprove thy people, comfort such of them as be in trouble, and now renounce corruption,

14 Let go from thee mortal thoughts, cast away the burdens of man, put off now the weak nature,

15 And set aside the thoughts that are most heavy unto thee, and haste thee to flee from these times.

16 For [b] yet greater evils than those which thou hast seen happen shall be done hereafter.

[b] Matt. 24. 7.

17 For look how much the world shall be weaker through age, so much the more shall evils increase upon them that dwell therein.

18 For the truth is fled far away, and leasing is hard at hand: for now hasteth the vision to come, which thou hast seen.

19 Then answered I before thee, and said,

20 Behold, Lord, I will go, as thou hast commanded me, and reprove the people which are present: but they that shall be born afterward, who shall admonish them? thus the world is set in darkness, and they that dwell therein are without light.

21 For thy law is burnt, therefore no man knoweth the things that are done of thee, or the works that shall begin.

22 But if I have found grace before thee, send the Holy Ghost into me, and I shall write all that hath been done in the world since the beginning, which were written in thy law, that men may find thy path, and that they which will live in the latter days may live.

23 And he answered me, saying, Go thy way, gather the people together, and say unto them, that they seek thee not for forty days.

24 But look thou prepare thee many ‖ box trees, and take with thee Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, ‖ Ecanus, and Asiel, these five which are ready to write swiftly;

‖ Or, box tables to write on: See ver. 44.

25 And come hither, and I shall light a candle of understanding in thine heart, which shall not be put out, till the things be performed which thou shalt begin to write.

‖ Or, Banias.

26 And when thou hast done, some things shalt thou publish, and some things shalt thou shew secretly to the wise: to morrow this hour shalt thou begin to write.

27 Then went I forth, as he commanded, and gathered all the people together, and said, 28 Hear these words, O Israel.

29 [c] Our fathers at the beginning were strangers in Egypt, from whence they were delivered:

[c] Gen. 47. 4.

30 [d] And received the law of life, which they kept not, which ye also have transgressed after them.

31 Then was the land, even the land of Sion, parted among you by lot: but your fathers, and ye yourselves, have done unrighteousness, and have not kept the ways which the Highest commanded you.

32 And forasmuch as he is a righteous judge, he took from you in time the thing that he had given you.

33 And now are ye here, and your brethren among you.

34 Therefore if so be that ye will subdue your own understanding, and reform your hearts, ye shall be kept alive, and after death ye shall obtain mercy.

35 For after death shall the judgment come, when we shall live again: and then shall the names of the righteous be manifest, and the works of the ungodly shall be declared.

36 Let no man therefore come unto me now, nor seek after me these forty days.

37 So I took the five men, as he commanded me, and we went into the field, and remained there.

38 And the next day, behold, a voice
[c] Ezek. 3. 1. called me, saying, Esdras, [c] open thy mouth, and drink that I give thee to drink.

39 Then opened I my mouth, and, behold, he reached me a full cup, which was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was like fire.

40 And I took it, and drank: and when I had drunk of it, my heart uttered understanding, and wisdom grew in my breast, for my spirit strengthened my memory:

41 And my mouth was opened, and shut no more.

42 The Highest gave understanding unto the five men, and they wrote the wonderful visions of the night that were told, which they knew not: and they sat forty days, and they wrote in the day, and at night they ate bread.

43 As for me, I spake in the day, and I held not my tongue by night.

‖ Or, nine hundred and four.

44 In forty days they wrote ‖ two hundred and four books.

45 And it came to pass, when the forty days were fulfilled, that the Highest spake, saying, The first that thou hast written publish openly, that the worthy and unworthy may read it:

46 But keep the seventy last, that thou mayest deliver them only to such as be wise among the people:

47 For in them is the spring of understanding, the fountain of wisdom, and ‖ the stream of knowledge.

48 And I did so.

CHAP. XV.

1 This prophecy is certain. 5 God will take vengeance upon the wicked, 12 upon Egypt. 28 An horrible vision. 43 Babylon and Asia are threatened.

BEHOLD, speak thou in the ears of my people the words of prophecy, which I will put in thy mouth, saith the Lord:

2 And cause them to be written in paper: for they are faithful and true.

3 Fear not the imaginations against thee, let not the incredulity of them trouble thee, that speak against thee.

4 For all the unfaithful shall die in their unfaithfulness.

5 Behold, saith the Lord, I will bring plagues upon the world; the sword, famine, death, and destruction.

6 For wickedness hath exceedingly polluted the whole earth, and their hurtful works are fulfilled.

7 Therefore saith the Lord,

8 I will hold my tongue no more as touching their wickedness, which they profanely commit, neither will I suffer them in those things, in which they wickedly exercise themselves: behold, the [a] innocent and [a] Rev. 6. 10. & 19. 2. righteous blood crieth unto me, and the souls of the just complain continually.

9 And therefore, saith the Lord, I will surely avenge them, and receive unto me all the innocent blood from among them.

10 Behold, my people is led as a flock to the slaughter: I will not suffer them now to dwell in the land of Egypt:

11 But I will bring them with a mighty hand and a stretched out arm, and smite Egypt with plagues, as before, and will destroy all the land thereof.

12 Egypt shall mourn, and the foundation of it shall be smitten with the plague and punishment that God shall bring upon it.

13 They that till the ground shall mourn: for their seeds shall fail through the blasting and hail, and with a fearful constellation.

14 Woe to the world and them that dwell therein!

15 For the sword and their destruction draweth nigh, and one people shall stand up to fight against another, and swords in their hands.

16 For there shall be sedition among men, and invading one another; they shall not regard their kings nor princes, and the course of their actions shall stand in their power.

17 A man shall desire to go into a city, and shall not be able.

18 For because of their pride the cities shall be troubled, the houses shall be destroyed, and men shall be afraid.

19 A man shall have no pity upon his neighbour, but shall destroy their houses with the sword, and spoil their goods, because of the lack of bread, and for great tribulation.

20 Behold, saith God, I will call together all the kings of the earth to reverence me, which are from the rising of the sun, from the south, from the east, and Libanus; to turn themselves one against another, and repay the things that they have done to them.

21 Like as they do yet this day unto my chosen, so will I do also, and recompense in their bosom. Thus saith the Lord God;

22 My right hand shall not spare the sinners, and my sword shall not cease over them that shed innocent blood upon the earth.

23 The fire is gone forth from his wrath, and hath consumed the foundations of the earth, and the sinners, like the straw that is kindled.

24 Woe to them that sin, and keep not my commandments! saith the Lord.

25 I will not spare them: go your way, ye children, from the power, defile not my sanctuary.

26 For the Lord knoweth all them that sin against him, and therefore delivereth he them unto death and destruction.

27 For now are the plagues come upon the whole earth, and ye shall remain in them: for God shall not deliver you, because ye have sinned against him.

28 Behold an horrible vision, and the appearance thereof from the east:

29 Where the nations of the dragons of Arabia shall come out with many chariots, and the multitude of them shall be carried as the wind upon earth, that all they which hear them may fear and tremble.

30 Also the Carmanians raging in wrath shall go forth as the wild boars of the wood, and with great power shall they come, and join battle with them, and shall waste a portion of the land of the Assyrians.

31 And then shall the dragons have the upper hand, remembering their nature; and if they shall turn themselves, conspiring together in great power to persecute them,

32 Then these shall be troubled, and keep silence through their power, and shall flee.

33 And from the land of the Assyrians shall the enemy besiege them, and consume some of them, and in their host shall be fear and dread, and strife ‖among their kings.

‖ Or, against

34 Behold clouds from the east and from the north unto the south, and they are very horrible to look upon, full of wrath and storm.

35 They shall smite one upon another, and they shall smite down a great multitude of stars upon the earth, even their own star; and blood shall be from the sword unto the belly,

36 And dung of men unto the camel's ‖hough.

‖ Or, paste, or litter.

37 And there shall be great fearfulness and trembling upon earth: and they that see the wrath shall be afraid, and trembling shall come upon them.

38 And then shall there come great storms from the south, and from the north, and another part from the west.

39 And strong winds shall arise from the east, and shall open it; and the cloud which he raised up in wrath, and the star stirred to cause fear toward the east and west wind, shall be destroyed.

40 The great and mighty clouds shall be lifted up full of wrath, and the star, that they may make all the earth afraid, and them that dwell therein; and they shall pour out over every high and eminent place an horrible star,

41 Fire, and hail, and flying swords, and many waters, that all fields may be full, and all rivers, with the abundance of great waters.

42 And they shall break down the cities and walls, mountains and hills, trees of the wood, and grass of the meadows, and their corn.

43 And they shall go stedfastly unto Babylon, and ‖make her afraid.

‖ Or, destroy.

44 They shall come to her, and besiege her, the star and all wrath shall they pour out upon her: then shall the dust and smoke go up unto the heaven, and all they that be about her shall bewail her.

Chap. XV. ver. 29. — the dragons of Arabia]. The inhabitants of Arabia are so called from their manner of living in dens and caverns of the earth. Those who followed this mode of life were often compared to dragons by the old poets and mythologists. Lee.

45 And they that remain under her shall do service unto them that have put her in fear.

‖ Or, like unto Babylon.

46 And thou, Asia, that art ‖ partaker of the hope of Babylon, and art the glory of her person:

47 Woe be unto thee, thou wretch, because thou hast made thyself like unto her; and hast decked thy daughters in whoredom, that they might please and glory in thy lovers, which have alway desired to commit whoredom with thee!

48 Thou hast followed her that is hated in all her works and inventions: therefore saith God, 49 I will send plagues upon thee; widowhood, poverty, famine, sword, and pestilence, to waste thy houses with destruction and death.

50 And the glory of thy power shall be dried up as a flower, when the heat shall arise that is sent over thee.

51 Thou shalt be weakened as a poor woman with stripes, and as one chastised with wounds, so that the mighty and lovers shall not be able to receive thee.

52 Would I with jealousy have so proceeded against thee, saith the Lord,

53 If thou hadst not always slain my chosen, exalting the stroke of thine hands, and saying over their † dead, when thou wast drunken,

† Lat. death.

54 Set forth the beauty of thy countenance?

55 The reward of thy whoredom shall be in thy bosom, therefore shalt thou receive recompence.

56 Like as thou hast done unto my chosen, saith the Lord, even so shall God do unto thee, and shall deliver thee into mischief.

57 Thy children shall die of hunger, and thou shalt fall through the sword: thy cities shall be broken down, and all thine shall perish with the sword in the field.

58 They that be in the mountains shall die of hunger, and eat their own flesh, and drink their own blood, for very hunger of bread, and thirst of water.

59 Thou as unhappy shalt come through the sea, and receive plagues again.

60 And in the passage they shall rush on the idle city, and shall destroy some portion of thy land, and consume part of thy glory, and shall return to Babylon that was destroyed.

61 And thou shalt be cast down by them as stubble, and they shall be unto thee as fire;

62 And shall consume thee, and thy cities, thy land, and thy mountains; all thy woods and thy fruitful trees shall they burn up with fire.

63 Thy children shall they carry away captive, and, look, what thou hast, they shall spoil it, and ‖ mar the beauty of thy face.

‖ Or, break.

CHAP. XVI.

1 Babylon and other places are threatened with plagues that cannot be avoided, 23 and with desolation. 40 The servants of the Lord must look for troubles: 51 and not hide their sins, 74 but leave them, and they shall be delivered.

WOE be unto thee, Babylon, and Asia! woe be unto thee, Egypt, and Syria!

2 Gird up yourselves with cloths of sack and hair, bewail your children, and be sorry; for your destruction is at hand.

3 A sword is sent upon you, and who may turn it back?

4 A fire is sent among you, and who may quench it?

5 Plagues are sent unto you, and what is he that may drive them away?

6 May any man drive away an hungry lion in the wood? or may any one quench the fire in stubble, when it hath begun to burn?

7 May one turn again the arrow that is shot of a strong archer?

8 The mighty Lord sendeth the plagues, and who is he that can drive them away?

9 A fire shall go forth from his wrath, and who is he that may quench it?

10 He shall cast lightnings, and who shall not fear? he shall thunder, and who shall not be afraid?

11 The Lord shall threaten, and who shall not be utterly beaten to powder at his presence?

12 The earth quaketh, and the foundations thereof; the sea ariseth up with waves from the deep, and the waves of it are troubled, and the fishes thereof also, before the Lord, and before the glory of his power:

13 For strong is his right hand that bendeth the bow, his arrows that he shooteth are sharp, and shall not miss, when they begin to be shot into the ends of the world.

14 Behold, the plagues are sent, and shall not return again, until they come upon the earth.

15 The fire is kindled, and shall not be put out, till it consume the foundation of the earth.

16 Like as an arrow which is shot of a mighty archer returneth not backward: even so the plagues that shall be sent upon earth shall not return again.

17 Woe is me! woe is me! who will deliver me in those days?

18 The beginning of sorrows and great mournings; the beginning of famine and great death; the beginning of wars, and the powers shall stand in fear; the beginning of evils! what shall I do when these evils shall come?

19 Behold, famine and plague, tribulation and anguish, are sent as scourges for amendment.

20 But for all these things they shall not turn from their wickedness, nor be alway mindful of the scourges.

21 Behold, victuals shall be so good cheap upon earth, that they shall think themselves to be in good case, and even then shall ‖ evils grow upon earth, sword, famine, and great confusion.

‖ Or, plagues.

22 For many of them that dwell upon earth shall perish of famine; and the other, that escape the hunger, shall the sword destroy.

23 And the dead shall be cast out as dung, and there shall be no man to comfort them: for the earth shall be wasted, and the cities shall be cast down.

24 There shall be no man left to till the earth, and to sow it.

25 The trees shall give fruit, and who shall gather them?

26 The grapes shall ripen, and who shall tread them? for all places shall be desolate of men:

27 So that one man shall desire to see another, and to hear his voice.

28 For of a city there shall be ten left, and two of the field, which shall hide themselves in the thick groves, and in the clefts of the rocks.

29 As in an orchard of olives upon every tree there are left three or four olives;

30 Or as when a vineyard is gathered, there are left some clusters of them that diligently seek through the vineyard:

31 Even so in those days there shall be three or four left by them that search their houses with the sword.

32 And the earth shall be laid waste, and the fields thereof shall wax old, and her ways and all her paths shall grow full of thorns, because no man shall travel therethrough.

33 The virgins shall mourn, having no bridegrooms; the women shall mourn, having no husbands; their daughters shall mourn, having no helpers.

34 In the wars shall their bridegrooms be destroyed, and their husbands shall perish of famine.

35 Hear now these things, and understand them, ye servants of the Lord.

36 Behold the word of the Lord, receive it: believe not the gods of whom the Lord spake.

37 Behold, the plagues draw nigh, and are not slack.

38 As when a woman with child in the ninth month bringeth forth her son, within two or three hours of her birth great pains compass her womb, which pains, when the child cometh forth, they slack not a moment:

39 Even so shall not the plagues be slack to come upon the earth, and the world shall mourn, and sorrows shall come upon it on every side.

40 O my people, hear my word: make you ready to the battle, and in those evils be even as pilgrims upon the earth.

41 He that selleth, let him be as he that fleeth away: and he that buyeth, as one that will lose:

42 He that occupieth merchandise, as he that hath no profit by it: and he that buildeth, as he that shall not dwell therein:

43 He that soweth, as if he should not reap: so also he that planteth the vineyard, as he that shall not gather the grapes:

44 They that marry, as they that shall get no children; and they that marry not, as the widowers.

45 And therefore they that labour labour in vain:

46 For strangers shall reap their fruits, and spoil their goods, overthrow their houses, and take their children captives, for in captivity and famine shall they get children.

47 And they that occupy their merchandise with robbery, the more they deck their cities, their houses, their possessions, and their own persons:

48 The more will I be angry with them for their sin, saith the Lord.

49 Like as a whore envieth a right honest and virtuous woman:

50 So shall righteousness hate iniquity, when she decketh herself, and shall accuse her to her face, when he cometh that shall defend him that diligently searcheth out every sin upon earth.

51 And therefore be ye not like thereunto, nor to the works thereof.

52 For yet a little, and iniquity shall be taken away out of the earth, and righteousness shall reign among you.

53 Let not the sinner say that he hath not sinned: for God shall burn coals of fire upon his head, which saith before the Lord God and his glory, I have not sinned.

54 Behold, the Lord knoweth all the works of men, [a] their imaginations, their thoughts, and their hearts:

Luke 16. 15.

55 Which spake but the word, Let the earth be made; [b] and it was made: Let the heaven be made; and it was created.

[b] Gen. 1. 1.

56 In his word were the stars made, and he knoweth the [c] number of them.

[c] Psal. 147. 4

57 He searcheth the deep, and the treasures thereof; he hath measured the sea, and what it containeth.

58 He hath shut the sea in the midst of the waters, and with his word hath he hanged the earth upon the waters.

59 He spreadeth out the heavens like a vault; upon the waters hath he founded it.

60 In the desert hath he made springs of water, and pools upon the tops of the mountains, that the floods might pour down from the high rocks to water the earth.

61 He made man, and put his heart in the midst of the body, and gave him breath, life, and understanding.

62 Yea, and the Spirit of Almighty God, which made all things, and searcheth out all hidden things in the secrets of the earth, 63 Surely he knoweth your inventions, and what ye think in your hearts, even them that sin, and would hide their sin.

64 Therefore hath the Lord exactly searched out all your works, and he will put you all to shame.

65 And when your sins are brought forth, ye shall be ashamed before men, and your own sins shall be your accusers in that day.

66 What will ye do? or how will ye hide your sins before God and his angels?

67 Behold, God himself is the judge, fear him: leave off from your sins, and forget your iniquities, to meddle no more with them for ever: so shall God lead you forth, and deliver you from all trouble.

68 For, behold, the burning wrath of a great multitude is kindled over you, and they shall take away certain of you, and feed you, ‖ being idle, with things offered unto idols.

‖ Or, being as idle as they

69 And they that consent unto them shall be had in derision and in reproach, and trodden under foot.

70 For there shall be in every place, and in the next cities, a great insurrection upon those that fear the Lord.

71 They shall be like mad men, sparing none, but still spoiling and destroying those that fear the Lord.

72 For they shall waste and take away their goods, and cast them out of their houses.

73 Then shall they be known, who are my chosen; and they shall be tried as the gold in the fire.

74 Hear, O ye my beloved, saith the Lord: behold, the days of trouble are at hand, but I will deliver you from the same.

75 Be ye not afraid, neither doubt; for God is your guide,

76 And the guide of them who keep my commandments and precepts, saith the Lord God: let not your sins weigh you down, and let not your iniquities lift up themselves.

77 Woe be unto them that are bound with their sins, and covered with their iniquities, like as a field is covered over with bushes, and the path thereof covered with thorns, that no man may travel through!

78 It is ‖ left undressed, and is cast into the fire to be consumed therewith.

‖ Or, shall be cast out.

TOBIT.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS Book was probably written by, or at least compiled from the memoirs of, Tobit and Tobias: whom Raphael the angel had commanded to record the events of their lives, chap. xii. 20. The work appears to have been begun by Tobit, who, in the Greek, Hebrew, and Syriack editions, speaks in the first person to the fourth chapter; and by whom other parts of the book, as the prayer in the thirteenth chapter, are said to have been written: what he left unfinished was probably completed by his son; the two last verses of the book being afterwards added by some compilers who digested the materials into their present form.

It is uncertain whether this work were originally written in the Hebrew or in the Chaldaick language, with both of which Tobit and his family must have been well acquainted. The Hebrew copies published by Munster and Fagius appear to be translations comparatively modern; and as the book was extant in the Chaldaick language in the time of St. Jerome, it is possible that it was originally written in that language, though no Chaldaick copy be now extant. The most ancient copy that is known to exist is a Greek version, which was probably made by some Hellenistical Jew, and before the time of Theodotion, as it is quoted by Polycarp: from this our English translation, and probably the Syriack version, was made, as also the Latin version, which was in use before the time of St Jerome. The book, if it even existed in the Hebrew language, was certainly never in the Hebrew canon, and has no pretensions to be considered as the production of an inspired writer. But, though it has no canonical authority, it is a book respectable for its antiquity and contents.

With respect to the history contained in this book, there is no reason to question its truth, at least as to the main particulars; and the Jews do not appear to have entertained any doubts on the subject. It is written with much simplicity, and with an air of verity. The characters are described with great sincerity and effect; and the minute detail of genealogy, of time, place, and personal circumstances, while they heighten the interest, tend to demonstrate the truth and reality of the relation. Tobit then is to be considered as a real character; he was born probably during the reign of Ahaz; he was of the tribe of Naphtali, and the city of Thisbe in upper Galilee; he was carried captive to Nineveh, after the extinction of the kingdom of Israel by Enemessar or Shalmaneser, about the year of the world 3283. The history of this captive, and of his family, is here related in a very interesting manner; it is enlivened with much variety of incident, and decorated by the display of many virtues. Some of the incidents, as the ministry of the angel, the influence and defeat of the evil spirit, as well as the blindness and recovery of Tobit, have appeared so improbable to many writers, that they have chosen to consider the whole book merely as an instructive fiction designed to illustrate the relative and social charities of life, and to exhibit a pattern of virtue exercised in trials, and recompensed in this world: but there are no physical objections to the causes assigned either for the deprivation or restoration of sight to Tobit; since if they are not naturally capable of producing such effects, they might still be miraculously rendered instruments in the hands of Providence.

With respect to the agency of the angels, there is nothing inconsistent with reason, received opinions, or Scripture, in supposing a limited superintendence of superiour beings. We know indeed, that under the peculiar circumstances of the Jewish economy, the ministry of angels was manifestly employed in subserviency to God's designs; and that particular personages were occasionally favoured with their familiar intercourse. It is likewise unquestionable, that before the power and malevolence of evil spirits were checked and restricted by the control of our Saviour, their open influence was experienced; and though in the accounts of this book, invisible beings be represented as endued with corporeal affections, and described under traditionary names of Chaldean extraction; and though the whole history of their proceedings, as here furnished, be in some measure accommodated to vulgar conceptions; yet it would be a violation of all rules of just criticism, to consider the agency of these beings as a mere allegorical machinery. Indeed the events recorded are so dependent on their supposed interference, and the miraculous circumstances so incorporated with the history, that the truth of the whole account rests on the same foundation, and the particular parts cannot be separately removed. Dr. Gray.

2. — of Enemessar king of the Assyrians] Enemessar, otherwise Shalmaneser: see the margin. This invasion by the Assyrians must have been subsequent to that mentioned at 1 Chron. v. 26, under Tiglath-pileser. It is thought that it occurred about B. C. 721, and that Tobit was at the time about forty-four years old. Arnald.

— Thisbe,] This was probably the native city of Elijah. See note at 1 Kings xvii. 1.

— which is called properly Nephthali] Or Kadesh-nephthali. This being the principal city in the tribe of Nephthali, was, for brevity's sake, sometimes called Nephthali.

3 I Tobit have walked all the days of my life in the way of truth and justice, and I did many almsdeeds to my brethren, and my nation, who came with me to Nineve, into the land of the Assyrians.

4 And when I was in mine own country, in the land of Israel, being but young, all the tribe of Nephthali my father fell from the house of Jerusalem, which was chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, that all the tribes should sacrifice there, where the temple of the habitation of the most High was consecrated and built for all ages.

5 Now all the tribes which together revolted, and the house of my father Nephthali, sacrificed ‖ unto the [b] heifer Baal.

‖ Or, to the power of Baal, or, the god Baal.

6 But I alone went often to Jerusalem at the feasts, as it was ordained unto all the people of Israel by an everlasting decree, [c] having the firstfruits and tenths of increase, with that which was first shorn; and them gave I at the altar to the priests the children of Aaron.

8 And the third I gave unto them to whom it was meet, as Debora my father's mother had commanded me, because I was left an orphan by my father.

3. — I did many almsdeeds &c.] We should observe, that Tobit's misfortunes never induce him to leave the path of virtue; and his charity to his brethren under the same captivity is most extraordinary and amiable. Human prudence proceeds on maxims very different: it is natural for a captive, at a distance from his country, and reduced in his circumstances, to manage and reserve the little that remains, in order to subsist himself and his family; and to think that giving to others may be the way to bring poverty on himself: but the faith of Tobit judged otherwise, and "had respect unto the recompense of the reward." Arnald.

11. But I kept myself from eating;] Many of the Jews, and Tobit, as here appears, among them, who were carried into captivity, still retained the true worship of God; and, observing in a strange land the ordinances appointed by the law, fell not into the idolatrous usages and impieties of the heathens among whom they were dispersed. Thus they abstained from all meats and drinks that came from the heathens, and forbore to eat promiscuously with them, from the fear of contracting a pollution, and of partaking of food which had been offered to idols. Arnald. See Dan. i. 8, and the note there.

13. — was his purveyor.] Was made his steward, had the general superintendence of his house and family. Munster.

14. — at Rages a city of Media] This is thought to be the same with Ragau, mentioned at Judith i. 15. Dr. Wells. It was situated in the south part of Media, in the mountains which separate that country from Parthia. Calmet.

15. — whose estate was troubled, &c.] From the time of Tiglath-pileser, the Medes had continued in subjection to the Assyrians; but under Sennacherib, the Assyrian monarchy fell into decay, either by his imprudence or bad fortune. The Medes taking advantage perhaps of his long absence, revolted, and were never after brought again under the Assyrian yoke, though Esarhaddon, the successor of Sennacherib, in the course of his reign seems to have been both a valourous and successful prince. There are the troubles which prevented Tobit from going into Media according to his custom or intention. Arnald.

17. — if I saw any of my nation dead, &c.] The account given in this part of the book of Tobit of the treatment experienced by the poor Jews in their captivity, of their being often arbitrarily put to death, and their bodies left unburied, is very different from what takes place under regular governments, but is perfectly conformable to what is to this day practised in the despotick countries of the East. Harmer.

18. — and fled from Judea, &c.] It appears that Sennacherib after his return to Nineveh from his signal defeat on the angel of the Lord smiting his army, (2 Kings xix. 35,) grew cruel and tyrannical, especially towards the Jews, numbers of whom he caused to be slain and cast into the street. Arnald.

—— I buried them privily;] It was always held an act of great justice and mercy to bestow burial on the dead; the want of burial having been deemed by most nations of antiquity one of the greatest punishments that could be inflicted. Jehoiakim the son of Josiah is threatened with the want of burial, Jer. xxii. 19. St. Ambrose, speaking of this charitable action of Tobit, says, that there is not a more excellent duty than to do good to them that cannot repay, and to rescue a fellow creature from the violence of the fowls of the air and the beasts of the field. Arnald.

19. — complained of me to the king, that I buried them,] It buried them, and hid myself; understanding that I was sought for to be put to death, I withdrew myself for fear.

20 Then all my goods were forcibly taken away, neither was there any thing left me, beside my wife Anna and my son Tobias.

21 And there passed not five and fifty days, before two of his sons [a] killed him, and they fled into the mountains of Ararath; and ‖ Sarchedonus his son reigned in his stead; who appointed over his father's accounts, and over all his affairs, Achiacharus my brother Anael's son.

22 And Achiacharus intreating for me, I returned to Nineve. Now Achiacharus was cupbearer, and keeper of the signet, and steward, and overseer of the accounts: and ‖ Sarchedonus appointed him next unto him: and he was my brother's son.

CHAP. II.

1 Tobit leaveth his meat to bury the dead, 10 and becometh blind. 11 His wife taketh in work to get her living. 14 Her husband and she fall out about a kid.

NOW when I was come home again, and my wife Anna was restored unto me, with my son Tobias, in the feast of Pentecost, which is the holy feast of the seven weeks, there was a good dinner prepared me, in the which I sat down to eat.

2 And when I saw abundance of meat, I said to my son, Go and bring what poor man soever thou shalt find out of our brethren, who is mindful of the Lord; and, lo, I tarry for thee.

3 But he came again, and said, Father, one of our nation is strangled, and is cast out in the marketplace.

4 Then before I had tasted of any meat, I started up, and took him up into a room until the going down of the sun.

5 Then I returned, and washed myself, and ate my meat in heaviness,

6 Remembering that prophecy of [a] Amos, as he said, Your feasts shall be turned into mourning, and all your mirth into lamentation.

7 Therefore I wept: and after the going down of the sun I went and made a grave, and buried him.

8 But my neighbours mocked me, and said, This man is not yet afraid to be put to death for this matter: [b] who fled away; and yet, lo, he burieth the dead again.

9 The same night also I returned from the burial, and slept by the wall of my court-yard, being polluted, and my face was uncovered:

10 And I knew not that there were ‖ sparrows in the wall, and mine eyes being open, the sparrows muted warm dung into mine eyes, and ‖ a whiteness came in mine eyes; and I went to the physicians, but they helped me not: moreover Achiacharus did nourish me, until I went into Elymais.

11 And my wife Anna ‖ did take women's works to do.

12 And when she had sent ‖ them home to the owners, they paid her wages, and gave her also besides a kid.

13 And when it was in my house, and began to cry, I said unto her, From whence still held to be highly criminal in despotick countries to bury without permission persons who are executed. Windus, speaking of what takes place in the empire of Morocco, says, that nobody dares bury the body of a person executed till the emperour has given orders for it. Harmer.

—— Sarchedonus] Or Esar-haddon. See the same related at 2 Kings xix.

Chap. II. ver. 1. — I sat down to eat.] The expression in the Greek is, "I lay down to eat:" which proves that the custom of reclining at meals, which prevailed among the Jews in our Saviour's time, had obtained at this period. Calmet.

It has been supposed by many, that the custom of reclining at meals was derived to the Jews from the Romans; but this passage seems to prove the contrary. Drusius. See the notes on Amos ii. 8; Matt. viii. 11.

2. — bring what poor man soever thou shalt find &c.] The Hebrews were accustomed, on their great festivals, to allow themselves better fare than ordinary; and Tobit, it appears, on such occasions, was not content with providing good entertainment for himself, but charitably gave a portion of it to the poor and stranger. Calmet.

6. Remembering that prophecy of Amos, &c.] Amos prophesied under the reign of Uzziah king of Judah, and Jeroboam II. king of Israel, about eighty years before the event here mentioned. Amos, in the place referred to, either foretells the misery of the captivity, in which the Israelites were involved under the Assyrians, of which Tobit now bewailed the accomplishment; or else Tobit accommodates the words of the Prophet to their present unhappy state and circumstances, when, instead of celebrating their feasts with joy and gladness, as was usual in their own country, they groaned under the yoke and tyranny of their oppressors, being denied even the innocent liberty and commendable right of burying their murdered countrymen, without manifestly incurring the danger of their lives. Arnald.

9. — slept by the wall of my court-yard,] It seems he was unwilling to enter his house on account of the pollution he had contracted from the dead body; since every person or thing, that touched one thus defiled, was polluted thereby. Arnald.

—— being polluted,] This pollution from touching a dead body lasted seven days, Numb. xix. 11, &c. Calmet.

10. — sparrows &c.] Rather, "swallows," as the margin states. The excrement of these animals, as appears from Pliny and other naturalists, is hot and acrimonious, and may cause blindness. Dr. Gray, Calmet. The Greek word here used signifies generally any small birds. Grotius.

11. — did take women's works] Such was Tobit's extreme poverty at this time, that his wife was under the necessity of seeking out an employment for the purpose of subsistence. Arnald.

CHAP. III.

1 Tobit, grieved with his wife's taunts, prayeth. 11 Sara, reproached by her father's maids, prayeth also. 17 An angel is sent to help them both.

THEN I being grieved did weep, and in my sorrow prayed, saying,

2 O Lord, thou art just, and all thy works and all thy ways are mercy and truth, and thou judgest truly and justly for ever.

3 Remember me, and look on me, punish me not for my sins and ignorances, and the sins of my fathers, who have sinned before thee:

4 For they obeyed not thy commandments: wherefore thou hast delivered us
[e] Deut. 28. 15, 37. [e] for a spoil, and unto captivity, and unto death, and for a proverb of reproach to all the nations among whom we are dispersed.

5 And now thy judgments are many and true: deal with me according to my sins and my fathers': because we have not kept thy commandments, neither have walked in truth before thee.

6 Now therefore deal with me as seemeth best unto thee, and command my spirit to be taken from me, that I may be ‖ dissolved, and become earth: for it is profitable for me to die rather than to live, because I have heard false reproaches, and have much sorrow: command therefore that I may now be delivered out of this distress, and go into the everlasting place: turn not thy face away from me. ‖ Or, dismissed, or, deliverance.

7 It came to pass the same day, that in Ecbatane a city of Media Sara the daughter of Raguel was also reproached by her father's maids;

8 Because that she had been married to seven husbands, whom Asmodeus the evil spirit had killed, before they had lain with her. Dost thou not know, said they, that thou hast strangled thine husbands? thou hast had already seven husbands, neither wast thou named after any of them.

9 Wherefore dost thou beat us for them? if they be dead, go thy ways after them, let us never see of thee either son or daughter.

10 When she heard these things, she was very sorrowful, so that she thought to have strangled herself; and she said, I am the only daughter of my father, and if I do this, it shall be a reproach unto him, and I shall bring his old age with sorrow unto the grave.

14. — behold, thou and all thy works are known.] She upbraids him with his tenderness of conscience, and the little good it had done him. You need indeed reproach me; behold, your disgrace is known to every one; the charities which you have exercised all your life profit you nothing; they have not kept you from blindness, which deprives you of every comfort. You had great hopes that, living so piously, you could not fail to be prosperous and happy, and that since you served God, He would most certainly repay you, chap. iv. 14. But where are your alms and righteous deeds now? Have they kept blindness or adversity from you? Have not your extensive and indiscreet charities brought us to the distressed condition we now are in? Arnald.

Chap. III. ver. 1. — and in my sorrow prayed,] We have here a further instance of Tobit's good disposition, and particular sweetness of temper; he does not return railing for railing, but, going to some retired place, (as it should seem from ver. 17,) pours forth his complaints to God of the great injustice done him, but confesses at the same time, in the spirit of humility, that his sins had deserved a worse treatment. Arnald.

7. — in Ecbatane a city of Media] Ecbatane seems to have been built not long after Babylon. We find that Semiramis the wife of Ninus, in a war against the Medes, who had then rebelled, taking an affection to the place, caused watercourses to be made to it, digging a passage through the hills with great labour and charge. Being destroyed by the injury of time, it was rebuilt by Deioces, the sixth king of the Medes, and afterwards much beautified and enlarged by Seleucus Nicanor, one of the successors of Alexander the Great in his Asian conquests. For beauty and magnificence it was little inferior to Babylon or Nineveh. In compass it was said to be 180 or 200 furlongs, which make about twenty-four of our miles. The walls thereof are affirmed in the book of Judith to be seventy cubits high, fifty cubits broad, and the towers upon the gates an hundred cubits higher; all built of hewn and polished stones, each stone being six cubits in length, and three in breadth. But this is to be understood only of the innermost wall, there being seven in all about it, each of them higher than the other, and each distinguished by the colour of their several pinnacles, which gave to the eye a most pleasant prospect. It was the ordinary residence of the kings of Persia in the heat of summer, as Susa was in the cold of winter. The royal palace was about a mile in compass, and built with all the cost and skill that a stately edifice required. Some of its beams are said to have been of silver, and the rest of cedar, which were strengthened with plates of gold. Josephus, the Jewish historian, relates, that it was built by the Prophet Daniel, which must be understood no otherwise, than that he overlooked the work, or contrived the model, appointed to do so by the order of Darius the Mede, to whom the building of the same is ascribed by others. Neglected at length by the kings of the Parthian race, it became a ruin. Dr. Wells.

8. — whom Asmodeus the evil spirit had killed,] The name Asmodeus seems to be derived from a Hebrew word which signifies "to ruin, to destroy, to make desolate;" and therefore most properly belongs to those evil spirits whose aim it is to ruin and destroy the souls of men. It has been thought by some that the evil spirit here mentioned is the demon of impurity, and that God permitted him to punish with death those who approached Sara with evil and criminal dispositions. Calmet.

11 Then she prayed toward the window, and said, Blessed art thou, O Lord my God, and thine holy and glorious name is blessed and honourable for ever: let all thy works praise thee for ever.

12 And now, O Lord, I set mine eyes and my face toward thee,

13 And say, Take me out of the earth, that I may hear no more the reproach.

14 Thou knowest, Lord, that I am pure from all sin with man,.

15 And that I never polluted my name, nor the name of my father, in the land of my captivity: I am the only daughter of my father, neither hath he any child to be his heir, neither any near ‖ kinsman, nor any son of his alive, to whom I may keep myself for a wife: my seven husbands are already dead; and why should I live? but if it please not thee that I should die, command some regard to be had of me, and pity taken of me, that I hear no more reproach.

16 So the prayers of them both were heard before the majesty of the great God.

17 And Raphael was sent to heal them both, that is, to scale away the whiteness of Tobit's eyes, and to give Sara the daughter of Raguel for a wife to Tobias the son of Tobit; and to bind Asmodeus the evil spirit; because she belonged to Tobias by right of inheritance. The self-same time came Tobit home, and entered into his house, and Sara the daughter of Raguel came down from her upper chamber.

CHAP. IV.

IN that day Tobit remembered the money which he had committed to Gabael in Rages of Media,

2 And said with himself, I have wished for death; wherefore do I not call for my son Tobias, that I may signify to him of the money before I die?

3 And when he had called him, he said, My son, when I am dead, bury me; and despise not thy mother, [a] but honour her all the days of thy life, and do that which shall please her, and grieve her not.

[a] Exod. 20. 12. Ecclus. 7. 27.

4 Remember, my son, that she saw many dangers for thee, when thou wast in her womb; and when she is dead, bury her by me in one grave.

5 My son, be mindful of the Lord our God all thy days, and let not thy will be set to sin, or to transgress his commandments: do uprightly all thy life long, and follow not the ways of unrighteousness.

6 For if thou deal truly, thy doings shall prosperously succeed to thee, and to all them that live justly.

7 [b] Give alms of thy substance; and when thou givest alms, let not thine eye be envious, neither turn thy face from any poor, and the face of God shall not be turned away from thee.

[b] Prov. 3. 9. Eccles. 3. 1. & 14. 13. Luke 14. 13.

8 If thou hast abundance, [c] give alms accordingly: if thou have but a little, be not afraid to give according to that little:

[c] Ecclus. 25. 10.

9 For thou layest up a good treasure for thyself against the day of necessity.

10 [d] Because that alms do deliver from death, and suffereth not to come into darkness.

[d] Ecclus. 29. 13.

11 For alms is a good gift unto all that give it in the sight of the most High.

---

11. — toward the window,] Toward the window which opened towards Jerusalem. See Dan. vi. 10. Arnald.

15. — neither any near kinsman, &c.] That is, her father had no son to inherit his substance, nor any near kinsman or relation, neither brother, nor brother's son, to whom, as the law required, she might dispose of herself in marriage. Those women of Israel, who had no brothers of the same blood, were enjoined by the law of Moses to marry the next of kin, Numb. xxvii. 8, &c. Arnald.

17. — Raphael was sent to heal them] The name "Raphael" signifies "the medicine of God," or "the God who heals." Calmet.

—— came down from her upper chamber.] It seems to have been customary among the devout persons of the Jewish nation of both sexes, to set apart some upper room where they might attend the business of prayer without noise or disturbance: see Dan. vi. 10; Acts i. 13: or else this might be a female apartment, where she sat to work; for it was the custom of antiquity to assign the uppermost rooms to the women, that they might be secluded from all intrusion and interruption. Arnald.

Chap. IV. ver. 3. — when he had called him, he said, &c.] The advice which Tobit in this chapter gives his son, when he presumed that death was approaching, and that God had heard his petition to be removed from the miseries of life, has always been esteemed an excellent abridgment of moral duties. The precepts are very plain and obvious, and require only sincerity and a good disposition to apply them. We should observe, that he enters on this advice before he settles his worldly affairs. Arnald.

4. — bury her by me in one grave.] The ancient patriarchs expressed the same care and concern respecting their interment in this particular. Thus Abraham purchased the cave of Machpelah for the burying-place of Sarah, Gen. xxiii. 19, and was afterwards himself deposited in the same, Gen. xxv. 10: Isaac and Jacob with their wives were buried there also, Gen. xlix. 31. Arnald.

10. — alms do deliver from death, &c.] Meaning, that charity, through the blessing of God, often proves the means and occasion of long life, as seems to be more fully expressed at chap. xii. 9; or the meaning may be, that charity is effectual for procuring God's favour and mercy, and will make the latter days of the beneficent man easy and comfortable: or, lastly, that charity wipes away sins, and delivers from death, the consequence of them. Arnald.

—— to come into darkness.] Our Saviour expresses the state of the wicked in death by a similar term, "outer darkness," Matt. viii. 12; xxii. 13. Calmet.

[c] 1 Thess. 4. 3. 12 Beware of all [c] whoredom, my son, and chiefly take a wife of the seed of thy fathers, and take not a strange woman to wife, which is not of thy father's tribe: for we are the children of the prophets, Noe, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: remember, my son, that our fathers from the beginning, even that they all married wives of their own kindred, and were blessed in their children, and their seed shall inherit the land.

13 Now therefore, my son, love thy brethren, and despise not in thy heart thy brethren, the sons and daughters of thy people, in not taking a wife of them: for in pride is destruction and much trouble, and in lewdness is decay and great want: for lewdness is the mother of famine.

[f] Lev. 19. 13. Deut. 24. 14, 15. 14 Let not the [f] wages of any man, which hath wrought for thee, tarry with thee, but give him it out of hand: for if thou serve God, he will also repay thee: be circumspect, my son, in all things thou doest, and be wise in all thy conversation.

[g] Matth. 7. 12. Luke 6. 31. 15 [g] Do that to no man which thou hatest: drink not wine to make thee drunken: neither let drunkenness go with thee in thy journey.

[h] Luke 14. 13. 16 [h] Give of thy bread to the hungry, and of thy garments to them that are naked; [i] Matt. 6. 1. and according to thine abundance [i] give alms; and let not thine eye be envious, when thou givest alms.

17 Pour out thy bread on the burial of the just, but give nothing to the wicked.

18 Ask counsel of all that are wise, and despise not any counsel that is profitable.

19 Bless the Lord thy God alway, and desire of him that thy ways may be directed, and that all thy paths and counsels may prosper: for every nation hath not counsel; but the Lord himself giveth all good things, and he humbleth whom he will, as he will; now therefore, my son, remember my commandments, neither let them be put out of thy mind.

20 And now I signify this to thee, that I committed ten talents to Gabael the son of Gabrias at Rages in Media.

21 And fear not, my son, that we are made poor: for thou hast much wealth, if thou fear God, and depart from all sin, and do that which is pleasing in his sight.

CHAP. V.

4 Young Tobias seeketh a guide into Media. 6 The angel will go with him, 12 and saith he is his kinsman. 16 Tobias and the angel depart together. 17 But his mother is grieved for her son's departing.

TOBIAS then answered and said, Father, I will do all things which thou hast commanded me:

2 But how can I receive the money, seeing I know him not?

3 Then he gave him the handwriting, and said unto him, Seek thee a man which may go with thee, whiles I yet live, and I will give him wages: and go and receive the money.

4 Therefore when he went to seek a man, he found Raphael that was an angel.

5 But he knew not; and he said unto him, Canst thou go with me to Rages? and knowest thou those places well?

---

13. — in lewdness is decay &c.] The word, translated "lewdness," signifies rather, "idleness, unprofitableness;" and to this the observation seems to be applied. Arnald.

14. Let not the wages — tarry with thee,] In conformity with this was the merciful provision of the Mosaick law, not to let "the wages of him that is hired abide all night until the morning," Levit. xix. 13; Deut. xxiv. 15. Calmet. See also James v. 4.

15. Do that to no man which thou hatest:] This precept is extremely similar to that admirable precept, which our blessed Lord sanctioned by His authority at Matt. vii. 12. Calmet. See the notes there.

—— go with thee in thy journey.] Some other copies read "in any of thy ways." But perhaps Tobit may have had particular respect to the journey on which he was about to send his son, and may have given him a caution against excess in drinking, to which the thirst arising from travelling in a warm climate would especially tempt him. Arnald.

17. Pour out thy bread on the burial of the just,] See the note on Jer. xvi. 7.

21. — thou hast much wealth, if thou fear God,] This sentiment is so exalted, that, as has been observed upon it, it might be thought to have been spoken by some Christian father to his son, in the times of the Gospel. Tobit had lost his sight, was a captive, and reduced to low circumstances; and yet in the full assurance of faith, from the good treasure of his heart, he pronounces this encouraging maxim to all others in the like distressed circumstances, "Thou hast much wealth, if thou fear God." God will either return with advantage to a persecuted and afflicted servant what he may at any time have lost, especially for the sake of His truth, and bless his latter end, as He did that of Job, with the greater flow of prosperity; or, having proved his soul by a great trial of afflictions, reserve for him a treasure in the heavens, with which temporal goods are not worthy to be compared. How happy would the case of the poor be, if, like Tobit they had ever this excellent maxim in their minds, which he then gives in charge to his son! It may not be amiss to observe, and place in one view, the several admirable precepts given by a religious father to his son in this chapter. 1. To remember God; and to praise Him devoutly for His blessings. 2. To pay a reverence and regard to parents for the kindness received from them. 3. To shew charity to the poor. 4. To avoid fornication, and every species of lewdness. 5. To abhor all pride. 6. To be just towards all, and in particular to give the labourer his hire. 7. To honour good and just men, and to pay a respect to their memory by a decent funeral. 8. To ask counsel of the wise, and follow it. 9. To trust in God's goodness, even in the midst of poverty Arnald.

Chap. V. ver. 3. — the handwriting,] Containing the acknowledgment of the debt.

5. But he knew not;] He knew not that he was an angel, having assumed a human form. Arnald.

6 To whom the angel said, I will go with thee, and I know the way well: for I have lodged with our brother Gabael.

7 Then Tobias said unto him, Tarry for me, till I tell my father.

8 Then he said unto him, Go, and tarry not. So he went in, and said to his father, Behold, I have found one which will go with me. Then he said, Call him unto me, that I may know of what tribe he is, and whether he be a trusty man to go with thee.

9 So he called him, and he came in, and they saluted one another.

10 Then Tobit said unto him, Brother, shew me of what tribe and family thou art.

11 To whom he said, Dost thou seek for a tribe or family, or an hired man to go with thy son? Then Tobit said unto him, I would know, brother, thy kindred and name.

12 Then he said, I am Azarias, the son of Ananias the great, and of thy brethren.

13 Then Tobit said, Thou art welcome, brother; be not now angry with me, because I have enquired to know thy tribe and thy family; for thou art my brother, of an honest and good stock: for I know Ananias and Jonathas, sons of that great Samaias, as we went together to Jerusalem to worship, and offered the firstborn, and the tenths of the fruits; and they were not seduced with the error of our brethren: my brother, thou art of a good stock.

14 But tell me, what wages shall I give thee? wilt thou a drachm a day, and things necessary, as to mine own son?

15 Yea, moreover, if ye return safe, I will add something to thy wages.

16 So they were well pleased. Then said he to Tobias, Prepare thyself for the journey, and God send you a good journey. And when his son had prepared all things for the journey, his father said, Go thou with this man, and God, which dwelleth in heaven, prosper your journey, and the angel of God keep you company. So they went forth both, and the young man's dog with them.

17 But Anna his mother wept, and said to Tobit, Why hast thou sent away our son? is he not the staff of our hand, in going in and out before us?

18 ‖ Be not greedy to add money to money: but let it be as refuse in respect of our child.

‖ Or, Let not money be added, but be the ransoming of our son.

19 ‖ For that which the Lord hath given us to live with doth suffice us.

‖ Or, So long as God hath granted us to live, this is sufficient.

20 Then said Tobit to her, Take no care, my sister; he shall return in safety, and thine eyes shall see him.

21 For the good angel will keep him company, and his journey shall be prosperous, and he shall return safe.

22 Then she made an end of weeping.

CHAP. VI.

4 The angel biddeth Tobias to take the liver, heart, and gall out of a fish, 10 and to marry Sara the daughter of Raguel: 16 and teacheth how to drive the wicked spirit away.

AND as they went on their journey, they came in the evening to the river Tigris, and they lodged there.

2 And when the young man went down to wash himself, a fish leaped out of the river, and would have devoured him.

11. — Dost thou seek for a tribe or family,] His meaning seems to be, Why dost thou trouble thyself about my tribe or family? Content thyself, without any further inquiry, that thou hast a good guide for thy son. Arnald.

12. — I am Azarias, &c.] The name Azarias signifies "God's help or assistance:" Raphael was manifestly sent on this occasion for the purpose of being a guide and assistance to Tobias on his journey, and therefore he prudently concealed his quality of an angel, that he might more conveniently execute his commission. Stackhouse.

14. — a drachm a day,] We cannot discover with any certainty the value of this drachm. It is inferred from Matt. xvii. 24, that the Greek drachm was a fourth part of the Hebrew shekel: thus allowing the shekel to be about two shillings and fourpence of our money, the drachm was equal to about sevenpence of our money. On the other hand, if we suppose the translation of the book of Tobit from the Chaldee into Greek to have been made by some Alexandrian Jew, then we must understand the Alexandrian drachm to be meant, which was equal to half a Hebrew shekel, or about one shilling and twopence of our money. Arnald.

16. — and the young man's dog with them.] The mention of Tobit's dog has been frequently represented as a ludicrous and unnecessary particular. But there is often as much want of taste as of candour in criticism of this nature. The introduction of such incidental particulars is not unusual in the most admired works of antiquity. Dr. Gray.

17. — is he not the staff of our hand, &c.] This is a Hebrew expression, to which there is a similar phrase at Numb. xxvii. 17. The sense is, Is he not the staff of our age in managing our affairs and taking care of us? Arnald.

20. — my sister;] It was often the custom of the Jews to call their wives by this name, as being descended by the same common stock with themselves from their ancestors, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Grotius.

21. — the good angel will keep him company.] It was the common persuasion of the ancient Hebrews, that every man has a guardian angel, who watches over his preservation. Calmet.

Chap. VI. ver. 1. — to the river Tigris,] This river runs from Nineveh towards Adiabene, which is the route of persons going to Media. Grotius.

2. — a fish leaped out] It is quite uncertain of what species was the fish here mentioned. The gall of the fish called Callionimus is efficacious in removing specks and obstructions of the sight. But this fish seems to be too small to correspond with this

3 Then the angel said unto him, Take the fish. And the young man laid hold of the fish, and ‖ drew it to land.

‖ Or, cast it upon the land.

4 To whom the angel said, Open the fish, and take the heart and the liver and the gall, and put them up safely.

5 So the young man did as the angel commanded him; and when they had roasted the fish, they did eat it: then they both went on their way, till they drew near to Ecbatane.

6 Then the young man said to the angel, Brother Azarias, to what use is the heart and the liver and the gall of the fish?

7 And he said unto him, Touching the heart and the liver, if a devil or an evil spirit trouble any, we must make a smoke thereof before the man or the woman, and the party shall be no more vexed.

8 As for the gall, it is good to anoint a man that hath whiteness in his eyes, and he shall be healed.

9 And when they were come near to Rages,

10 The angel said to the young man, Brother, to day we shall lodge with Raguel, who is thy cousin; he also hath one only daughter, named Sara; I will speak for her, that she may be given thee for a wife.

‖ Or, inheritance. * Numbers 27. 8. & 36. 8.

11 For to thee doth the ‖ * right of her appertain, seeing thou only art of her kindred.

12 And the maid is fair and wise: now therefore hear me, and I will speak to her father; and when we return from Rages we will celebrate the marriage: for I know that Raguel cannot marry her to another according to the law of Moses, but he shall be guilty of death, because the right of inheritance doth rather appertain to thee than to any other.

13 Then the young man answered the angel, I have heard, brother Azarias, that this maid hath been given to seven men, who all died in the marriage chamber.

14 And now I am the only son of my father, and I am afraid, lest, if I go in unto her, I die, as the other before: for a wicked spirit loveth her, which hurteth no body, but those which come unto her: wherefore I also fear lest I die, and bring my father's and my mother's life because of me to the grave with sorrow: for they have no other son to bury them.

15 Then the angel said unto him, Dost thou not remember the precepts which thy father gave thee, that thou shouldest marry a wife of thine own kindred? wherefore hear me, O my brother; for she shall be given thee to wife; and make thou no reckoning of the evil spirit; for this same night shall she be given thee in marriage.

16 And when thou shalt come into the marriage chamber, thou shalt take the ‖ ashes of perfume, and shalt lay upon them some of the heart and liver of the fish, and shalt make a smoke with it:

‖ Or, embers

17 And the devil shall smell it, and flee away, and never come again any more: but when thou shalt come to her, rise up both of you, and pray to God which is merciful, who will have pity on you, and save you: fear not, for she is appointed unto thee from the beginning; and thou shalt preserve her, and she shall go with thee. Moreover I suppose that she shall bear thee children. Now when Tobias had heard these things, he loved her, and his heart was ‖ effectually joined to her.

‖ Or, vehemently.

CHAP. VII.

11 Raguel telleth Tobias what had happened to his daughter: 12 and giveth her in marriage unto him. 17 She is conveyed to her chamber, and weepeth. 18 Her mother comforteth her.

AND when they were come to Ecbatane, they came to the house of Raguel, and Sara met them: and after they had saluted one another, she brought them into the house.

2 Then said Raguel to Edna his wife, description. Bochart contends for the Silurus, the Sheat-fish, or Sturgeon, called also the Glanis. This the naturalists describe as large and voracious: and its liver was famous for removing suffusions and dimness. But it is objected that this fish, as having no scales, could not be eaten consistently with the restrictions of the Levitical law; Lev. xi. 10, 11. The livers of many other fishes may have the same medicinal qualities. Dr. Gray.

12. — cannot marry her to another according to the law of Moses,] According to the precept in the Mosaick law, Numb. xxvii. 8, a woman who, having no brother, succeeded to the inheritance of her father, ought to marry her nearest kinsman. But the penalty of death here mentioned is no where denounced in the law. A preferable sense seems to be that of the Geneva version, "Else he would deserve death," instead of "but he shall be guilty of death." In some copies this clause is wholly omitted. Arnald.

16. — the ashes of perfume,] Perfumes were usually burnt at marriages. See note at Cant. iii. 6. Indeed, at all feasts, it is the common custom of the East to use censers of different perfumes. Sir J. Chardin.

17. — pray to God — who will have pity on you,] This seems sufficiently to intimate, that the expulsion of the evil spirit was effected by the Divine power, although it is related as having been effected by a natural cause, the smoke of the fish. Stackhouse.

—— for she is appointed unto thee from the beginning;] Meaning, she belongs to thee, according to the law, and is thine by Divine appointment and designation. Arnald.

How like is this young man to Tobit my cousin!

3 And Raguel asked them, From whence are ye, brethren? To whom they said, We are of the sons of Nephthalim, which are captives in Nineve.

4 Then he said to them, Do ye know Tobit our kinsman? And they said, We know him. Then said he, Is he in good health?

5 And they said, He is both alive, and in good health: and Tobias said, He is my father.

6 Then Raguel leaped up, and kissed him, and wept,

7 And blessed him, and said unto him, Thou art the son of an honest and good man. But when he had heard that Tobit was blind, he was sorrowful, and wept.

8 And likewise Edna his wife and Sara his daughter wept. Moreover they entertained them chearfully; and after that they had killed ‖ a ram of the flock, they set store of meat on the table. Then said Tobias to Raphael, Brother Azarias, speak of those things of which thou didst talk in the way, and let this business be dispatched.

‖ Or, a sucking ram, or, lamb, Junius.

9 So he communicated the matter with Raguel: and Raguel said to Tobias, Eat and drink, and make merry:

10 For it is meet that thou shouldest marry my daughter: nevertheless I will declare unto thee the truth.

11 I have given my daughter in marriage to seven men, who died that night they came in unto her: nevertheless for the present be merry. But Tobias said, I will eat nothing here, till we agree and swear one to another.

12 Raguel said, Then take her from henceforth according to the ‖ manner, for thou art her cousin, and she is thine, and the merciful God give you good success in all things.

‖ Or, law.

13 Then he called his daughter Sara, and she came to her father, and he took her by the hand, and gave her to be wife to Tobias, saying, Behold, take her after * the law of Moses, and lead her away to thy father. And he blessed them;

* Numbers xxx. 6.

14 And called Edna his wife, and took paper, and did write an instrument of covenants, and sealed it.

15 Then they began to eat.

16 After Raguel called his wife Edna, and said unto her, Sister, prepare another chamber, and bring her in thither.

17 Which when she had done as he had bidden her, she brought her thither: and she wept, and she ‖ received the tears of her daughter, and said unto her,

‖ Or, licked.

18 Be of good comfort, my daughter; the Lord of heaven and earth give thee joy for this thy sorrow: be of good comfort, my daughter.

CHAP. VIII.

3 Tobias driveth the wicked spirit away, as he was taught. 4 He and his wife rise up to pray. 10 Raguel thought he was dead: 15 but finding him alive, praiseth God, 19 and maketh a wedding feast.

AND when they had supped, they brought Tobias in unto her.

2 And as he went, he remembered the words of Raphael, and took the ‖ ashes of the perfumes, and put the heart and the liver of the fish thereupon, and made a smoke therewith.

‖ Or, embers.

3 The which smell when the evil spirit had smelled, he fled into the utmost parts of Egypt, and the angel bound him.

4 And after that they were both shut in together, Tobias rose out of the bed, and said, Sister, arise, and let us pray that God would have pity on us.

5 Then began Tobias to say, Blessed art thou, O God of our fathers, and blessed is thy holy and glorious name for ever; let the heavens bless thee, and all thy creatures.

6 Thou madest Adam, and gavest him

Chap. VII. ver. 7. And blessed him,] As it was customary for aged persons to do to those who were younger than themselves, Gen. xlix. 28; Mark x. 16. Grotius.

13. — and gave her to be wife to Tobias.] We have here an instance of the very simple mode of celebrating a marriage in ancient times. It is the father who performs the ceremony, and joins the right hands of the two parties; as the Latin translation expresses it: a custom, which was common in Media, where this took place, in confirming all alliances and treaties. Calmet.

Chap. VIII. ver. 3. The which smell &c.] The supposed effect of fumigation on demons was agreeable to vulgar notions. We should observe, that the perfume is described as having been rendered efficacious by faith, prayer, and continence; (ver. 6, 5, &c.); and it seems that the burning of the entrails of the fish was enjoined rather as a sign and intimation, than as a physical cause, of the defeat of the evil spirit, as in John ix. 6. Dr. Gray.

— into the utmost parts of Egypt,] The evil spirit was sent to those places where the dominion of Satan was especially established among idolaters, Zech. v. 11. Bp. Wilson.

— and the angel bound him.] We read of the binding of evil spirits in some parts of Scripture; see Rev. xx. 2; 2 Pet. ii. 4; Jude ver. 6. We are not to understand the expression literally, as if the evil spirit were confined or locked up within certain limits of space; but only that his power of doing mischief, and of executing his wicked intentions, was restrained within limited bounds. As when God permits any person to be tempted, the power of the tempter is limited to that person, and to the place where he is. Calmet.

[a] Gen. 2. 7. [b] 18. 22.

[b] Eve his wife for an helper and stay: of them came mankind: thou hast said, It is not good that man should be alone; let us make unto him an aid like unto himself.

7 And now, O Lord, I take not this my sister for lust, but uprightly: therefore mercifully ordain that we may become aged together.

8 And she said with him, Amen.

9 So they slept both that night. And Raguel arose, and went and made a grave,

10 Saying, I fear lest he also be dead.

11 But when Raguel was come into his house,

12 He said unto his wife Edna, Send one of the maids, and let her see whether he be alive: if he be not, that we may bury him, and no man know it.

13 So the maid opened the door, and went in, and found them both asleep,

14 And came forth, and told them that he was alive.

15 Then Raguel praised God, and said, O God, thou art worthy to be praised with all pure and holy praise; therefore let thy saints praise thee with all thy creatures; and let all thine angels and thine elect praise thee for ever.

16 Thou art to be praised, for thou hast made me joyful; and that is not come to me which I suspected; but thou hast dealt with us according to thy great mercy.

17 Thou art to be praised, because thou hast had mercy of two that were the only begotten children of their fathers: grant them mercy, O Lord, and finish their life in health with joy and mercy.

18 Then Raguel bade his servants to fill the grave.

19 And he kept the wedding feast fourteen days.

20 For before the days of the marriage were finished, Raguel had said unto him by an oath, that he should not depart till the fourteen days of the marriage were expired;

21 And then he should take the half of his goods, and go in safety to his father; and should have the rest when I and my wife be dead.

CHAP. IX.

1 Tobias sendeth the angel unto Gabael for the money 6 The angel bringeth it and Gabael to the wedding.

THEN Tobias called Raphael, and said unto him,

2 Brother Azarias, take with thee a servant, and two camels, and go to Rages of Media to Gabael, and bring me the money, and bring him to the wedding.

3 For Raguel hath sworn that I shall not depart.

4 But my father counteth the days; and if I tarry long, he will be very sorry.

5 So Raphael went out, and lodged with Gabael, and gave him the handwriting: who brought forth bags which were sealed up, and gave them to him.

6 And early in the morning they went forth both together, and came to the wedding: and ‖ Tobias blessed his wife.

‖ Or, Gabael blessed him. Tobias blessed his wife. Junius.

CHAP. X.

1 Tobit and his wife long for their son. 7 She will not be comforted by her husband. 10 Raguel sendeth Tobias and his wife away, with half their goods, 12 and blesseth them.

NOW Tobit his father counted every day: and when the days of the journey were expired, and they came not,

2 Then Tobit said, Are they detained? or is Gabael dead, and there is no man to give him the money?

3 Therefore he was very sorry.

4 Then his wife said unto him, My son is dead, seeing he stayeth long; and she began to bewail him, and said,

5 Now I care for nothing, my son, since I have let thee go, the light of mine eyes.

6 To whom Tobit said, Hold thy peace, take no care, for he is safe.

7 But she said, Hold thy peace, and de-

19 — he kept the wedding feast fourteen days.] Rejoicings at the Jewish weddings were esteemed so absolutely necessary, that the husband could not by any means be excused from them, but was obliged to continue them seven days at least; even the sabbath day itself being accounted no hindrance. It appears from several passages of Scripture, that the usual time of the marriage feast was seven days. See Gen. xxix. 27; Judg. xiv. 10, 12; Tob. xi. 19. It is to be observed however, that although the time was usually limited to a week, yet the parents of the espoused were at liberty to prolong it, if they thought fit; and perhaps Raguel doubles the usual time by keeping the feast for fourteen days, from the satisfaction he felt at the escape of his son-in-law from the power and evil intentions of the demon. Arnald.

Chap. IX. ver. 5. — bags which were sealed] See notes at 2 Kings xii. 10; Job xiv. 17. It is the custom of Persia always to seal up bags of money; and the money of the king's treasure is not told, but is received by bags sealed up. Sir J. Chardin.

Chap. X. ver. 6. — take no care, for he is safe.] To the great concern expressed by his wife at the long absence of her son, and the apprehension of his death, Tobit calmly and tenderly replies that she ought not to be thus discouraged and dejected; he was persuaded, through a faith and trust in God, that his son was safe and that some unforeseen accident on Gabael's part, and not any misfortune, had occasioned the delay. We cannot but admire the exemplary patience of Tobit on all occasions, who, though poor blind, old, and almost childless in every sense, yet never desponds or charges God foolishly. Arnald.

TOBIAS ANOINTS HIS FATHER'S EYES.

ceive me not; my son is dead. And she went out every day into the way which they went, and did eat no meat on the daytime, and ceased not whole nights to bewail her son Tobias, until the fourteen days of the wedding were expired, which Raguel had sworn that he should spend there. Then Tobias said to Raguel, Let me go, for my father and my mother look no more to see me.

8 But his father in law said unto him, Tarry with me, and I will send to thy father, and they shall declare unto him how things go with thee.

9 But Tobias said, No; but let me go to my father.

10 Then Raguel arose, and gave him Sara his wife, and half his goods, servants, and cattle, and money:

11 And he blessed them, and sent them away, saying, The God of heaven give you a prosperous journey, my children.

12 And he said to his daughter, Honour thy father and thy mother in law, which are now thy parents, that I may hear good report of thee. And he kissed her. Edna also said to Tobias, The Lord of heaven restore thee, my dear brother, and grant that I may see thy children of my daughter Sara before I die, that I may rejoice before the Lord: behold, I commit my daughter unto thee ‖ of special trust; wherefore do not entreat her evil.

‖ Or, to be safely kept.

CHAP. XI.

6 Tobias' mother spieth her son coming. 10 His father meeteth him at the door, and recovereth his sight. 14 He praiseth God, 17 and welcometh his daughter in law.

AFTER these things Tobias went his way, praising God that he had given him a prosperous journey, and blessed Raguel and Edna his wife, and went on his way till they drew near unto Nineve.

2 Then Raphael said to Tobias, Thou knowest, brother, how thou didst leave thy father:

3 Let us haste before thy wife, and prepare the house.

4 And take in thine hand the gall of the fish. So they went their way, and the dog went after them.

5 Now Anna sat looking about toward the way for her son.

6 And when she espied him coming, she said to his father, Behold, thy son cometh, and the man that went with him.

7 Then said Raphael, I know, Tobias, that thy father will open his eyes.

8 Therefore anoint thou his eyes with the gall, and being pricked therewith, he shall rub, and the whiteness shall fall away, and he shall see thee.

9 Then Anna ran forth, and fell upon the neck of her son, and said unto him, Seeing I have seen thee, my son, from henceforth I am content to die. And they wept both.

10 Tobit also went forth toward the door, and stumbled: but his son ran unto him,

11 And took hold of his father: and he strake of the gall on his father's eyes, saying, Be of good hope, my father.

12 And when his eyes began to smart, he rubbed them;

13 And the whiteness pilled away from the corners of his eyes: and when he saw his son, he fell upon his neck.

14 And he wept, and said, Blessed art thou, O God, and blessed is thy name for ever; and blessed are all thine holy angels:

15 For thou hast scourged, and hast taken pity on me: for, behold, I see my son Tobias. And his son went in rejoicing, and told his father the great things that had happened to him in Media.

16 Then Tobit went out to meet his daughter in law at the gate of Nineve, rejoicing, and praising God: and they which saw him go marvelled, because he had received his sight.

17 But Tobit gave thanks before them,

10. — and half his goods,] The dowry which the Jewish brides brought to their husbands was different according to the circumstances of their parents. As Sarah was an only child, and disposed of in marriage according to her parent's wishes, and agreeably to the determination and appointment of the Mosaical law, Raguel gives her half his substance in the present, and engages to bestow the remainder at his death, chap. viii. 21. Arnald.

12. — restore thee, my dear brother,] Grant thee a safe return. "Brother" is used as an expression of tenderness and affection. Arnald.

Chap. XI. ver. 1. — till they drew near unto Nineve.] The meaning seems to be, that the whole company went together till they came within a day's, or some hours' journey of Nineveh; and then Tobias and Raphael went on before to prepare for their reception in his father's house. Arnald.

6. — when she espied him coming,] The words may be properly rendered, "when she perceived that he was coming," perhaps discovering him by the dog, ver. 4. Allowing this to be the meaning, it explains the reason of the dog being mentioned, and the incident is by no means low or ridiculous, but rather natural, and familiar. Dr. Gray.

13. And the whiteness pilled away] We must understand the Divine power to have particularly concurred with the natural means, for the cure of Tobit's blindness. For although the gall of the fish may have had this natural power, yet it could not have effected so instantaneous a cure without special Divine interference. Dr. Grey.

because God had mercy on him. And when he came near to Sara his daughter in law, he blessed her, saying, Thou art welcome, daughter: God be blessed, which hath brought thee unto us, and blessed be thy father and thy mother. And there was joy among all his brethren which were at Nineve.

‖ Junius, who is also called Nasbas.

18 And Achiacharus, ‖ and Nasbas his brother's son, came:

19 And Tobias' wedding was kept seven days with great joy.

CHAP. XII.

5 Tobit offereth half to the angel for his pains. 6 But he calleth them both aside, and exhorteth them, 15 and telleth them that he was an angel, 21 and was seen no more.

THEN Tobit called his son Tobias, and said unto him, My son, see that the man have his wages, which went with thee, and thou must give him more.

2 And Tobias said unto him, O father, it is no harm to me to give him half of those things which I have brought:

3 For he hath brought me again to thee in safety, and made whole my wife, and brought me the money, and likewise healed thee.

4 Then the old man said, It is due unto him.

5 So he called the angel, and he said unto him, Take half of all that ye have brought, and go away in safety.

6 Then he took them both apart, and said unto them, Bless God, praise him, and magnify him, and praise him for the things which he hath done unto you in the sight of all that live. It is good to praise God, and exalt his name, and ‖ honourably to shew forth the works of God; therefore be not slack to praise him.

7 It is good to keep close the secret of a king, but it is honourable to reveal the works of God. Do that which is good, and no evil shall touch you.

8 Prayer is good with fasting and alms and righteousness. A little with righteousness is better than much with unrighteousness. It is better to give alms than to lay up gold:

9 For alms doth deliver from death, and shall purge away all sin. Those that exercise alms and righteousness shall be filled with life:

10 But they that sin are enemies to their own life.

11 Surely I will keep close nothing from you. For I said, It was good to keep close the secret of a king, but that it was honourable to reveal the works of God.

12 Now therefore, when thou didst pray, and Sara thy daughter in law, I did bring the remembrance of your prayers before the Holy One: and when thou didst bury the dead, I was with thee likewise.

13 And when thou didst not delay to rise up, and leave thy dinner, † to go and cover the dead, thy good deed was not hid from me: but I was with thee.

† Gr. to go and bury.

14 And now God hath sent me to heal thee and Sara thy daughter in law.

15 I am Raphael, one of the seven holy angels, which present the prayers of the saints, and which go in and out before the glory of the Holy One.

16 Then they were both troubled, and fell upon their faces: for they feared.

17 But he said unto them, Fear not, for it shall go well with you; praise God therefore.

18 For not of any favour of mine, but by the will of our God I came; wherefore praise him for ever.

19 * All these days I did appear unto you; but I did neither eat nor drink, but ye did see a vision.

* Gen. 18. 2. & 19. 3. Judg. 13. 16.

18. — Achiacharus, and Nasbas his brother's son,] Achiacharus is mentioned at chap. i. 22. as his brother's son. Thus it has been conjectured, that the expression here should be, "Achiacharus, who was also Nasbas, his brother's son." Arnald.

19. — Tobias' wedding was kept] His wedding was celebrated, or the entertainments on account of his wedding were continued, for seven days. See note at chap. viii. 19.

Chap. XII. ver. 7. — it is honourable to reveal the works of God.] Implying, that the more the works of God are made manifest and revealed, the more they promote His honour and glory, and call for a larger tribute of praise and thanksgiving. Arnald.

9. — shall be filled with life:] Though life eternal is not expressly mentioned here, yet it is implied, and forms the true sense of the passage. Almsgiving is not a natural means of procuring a long and happy life, though God, by bestowing His blessing on the charitable man, is often pleased so to order it. Tobit himself was an instance of the poverty to which those may sometimes be reduced, who shew the greatest zeal in exercising works of charity. The following verse confirms this sense, "they that sin are enemies to their own life;" that is, they bring upon themselves death and destruction, or they expose themselves to eternal misery. Calmet, Arnald.

12. — I did bring the remembrance &c.] The opinion, that the angels, as ministers of God, presented to Him the supplications of men, was extremely ancient. Arnald.

15. — one of the seven holy angels,] We find the seven angels, or spirits, mentioned at Rev. i. 4; iv. 5; v. 6. According to some opinions, seven is here put for an indefinite number, since we have frequent mention of an infinite number of angels before the throne of God; Dan. vii. 10; Rev. v. 11; but it is more probable that seven principal angels are meant, the most exalted, most glorious, and chief of the heavenly host, that hold the first rank in the hierarchy of angels, and are as princes in the court of the sovereign Lord of the universe. Arnald.

20 Now therefore give God thanks: for I go up to him that sent me; but write all things which are done in a book.

21 And when they arose, they saw him no more.

22 Then they confessed the great and wonderful works of God, and how the angel of the Lord had appeared unto them.

CHAP. XIII.

The thanksgiving unto God, which Tobit wrote.

THEN Tobit wrote a prayer of rejoicing, and said, Blessed be God that liveth for ever, and blessed be his kingdom.

[a] Deut. 32. 39. 1 Sam. 2. 6. Wis. 16. 13.

2 [a] For he doth scourge, and hath mercy: he leadeth down to hell, and bringeth up again: neither is there any that can avoid his hand.

3 Confess him before the Gentiles, ye children of Israel: for he hath scattered us among them.

4 There declare his greatness, and extol him before all the living: for he is our Lord, and he is the God our Father for ever.

5 And he will scourge us for our iniquities, and will have mercy again, and will gather us out of all nations, among whom he hath scattered us.

6 If ye turn to him with your whole heart, and with your whole mind, and deal uprightly before him, then will he turn unto you, and will not hide his face from you. Therefore see what he will do with you, and confess him with your whole mouth, and praise the Lord of might, and extol the everlasting King. In the land of my captivity do I praise him, and declare his might and majesty to a sinful nation. O ye sinners, turn and do justice before him: who can tell if he will accept you, and have mercy on you?

7 I will extol my God, and my soul shall praise the King of heaven, and shall rejoice in his greatness.

8 Let all men speak, and let all praise him for his righteousness.

9 O Jerusalem, the holy city, ‖ he will scourge thee for thy children's works, and will have mercy again on the sons of the righteous.

‖ Or, he will lay a scourge upon the works of thy children.

10 Give praise to the Lord, for he is good: and praise the everlasting King, that his tabernacle may be builded in thee again with joy, and ‖ let him make joyful there in thee those that are captives, and love in thee for ever those that are miserable.

11 Many nations shall come from far to the name of the Lord God with gifts in their hands, even gifts to the King of heaven; all generations shall praise thee with great joy.

12 Cursed are all they which hate thee, and blessed shall all be which love thee for ever.

13 Rejoice and be glad for the children of the just: for they shall be gathered together, and shall bless the Lord of the just.

14 O blessed are they which love thee, for they shall rejoice in thy ‖ peace: blessed are they which have been sorrowful for all thy scourges; for they shall rejoice for thee, when they have seen all thy glory, and shall be glad for ever.

‖ Or, prosperity.

15 Let my soul bless God the great King.

16 For Jerusalem shall be built up with sapphires, and emeralds, and precious stone: thy walls and towers and battlements with pure gold.

20. — write all things — in a book.] It has commonly been believed, that Tobit and Tobias wrote their own history; an opinion which has been principally founded on the command here given by the angel. Arnald.

Chap. XIII. ver. 2. — he leadeth down to hell,] The expression seems taken from the song of Hannah, 1 Sam. ii. 6, "The Lord killeth, and maketh alive: He bringeth down to the grave, and bringeth up." What consolation do these words administer to one of sound faith; and how refreshing is it to the afflicted servants of God, to be assured that the chastisement, by which He proves their virtue, tends to their good, and will end happily at last! Arnald.

6. — declare his might and majesty to a sinful nation.] By "a sinful nation" he seems to mean the Israelites, now captive on account of their sins. Thus he blesses God and magnifies His power and justice, not for His favours, but for His chastisement sent upon an ungrateful people, laden with iniquity, who had rendered themselves unworthy of His mercy. In this he acts as is becoming the true servants of God, who bless Him even for the afflictions with which He is pleased to visit them, and acknowledge the justice of His conduct towards them, even though He does not distinguish their lot from that of sinners. Arnald. Or, by declaring "His might and majesty to a sinful nation," may be meant, that he was then publishing the wonderful works of God to the Assyrians, for the purpose of converting them from their idolatries to the religion of the true God. Grotius.

10. — that his tabernacle may be builded in thee again] Tobit seems here to refer to Amos ix. 11, "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen," and prays for its accomplishment. There is no necessity of supposing, in regard to this or any other expression, that Tobit possessed the gift of prophecy; he seems, on the contrary, entirely to ground his observations on the writings of the inspired Prophets who preceded him. Arnald.

11. Many nations shall come from far &c.] He seems here to refer to Ps. lxxii. 10, 11.

16. — with sapphires, and emeralds, &c.] This description seems to be taken from Is. liv. 11, 12. Grotius.

17 And the streets of Jerusalem shall be paved with beryl and carbuncle and stones of Ophir.

18 And all her streets shall say, Alleluia; and they shall praise him, saying, Blessed be God, which hath extolled it for ever.

CHAP. XIV.

3 Tobit giveth instructions to his son, 8 specially to leave Nineve. 11 He and his wife die, and are buried. 12 Tobias removeth to Echatane, 14 and there died, after he had heard of the destruction of Nineve.

SO Tobit made an end of praising God. 2 And he was eight and fifty years old when he lost his sight, which was restored to him after eight years: and he gave alms, and he ‖ increased in the fear of the Lord God, and praised him.

‖ Or, did more and more fear.

3 And when he was very aged, he called his son, and the six sons of his son, and said to him, My son, take thy children; for, behold, I am aged, and am ready to depart out of this life.

4 Go into Media, my son, for I surely believe those things which Jonas the prophet spake of Nineve, that it shall be overthrown; and that for a time peace shall rather be in Media; and that our brethren shall lie scattered in the earth from that good land: and Jerusalem shall be desolate, and the house of God in it shall be burned, and shall be desolate for a time;

[a] Ezra 3. 8. & 6. 14.

5 [a] And that again God will have mercy on them, and bring them again into the land, where they shall build a temple, but not like to the first, until the time of that age be fulfilled; and afterward they shall return from all places of their captivity, and build up Jerusalem gloriously, and the house of God shall be built in it ‖ for ever with a glorious building, as the prophets have spoken thereof.

‖ for ever is not in the Roman copy.

6 And all nations shall turn, and fear the Lord God truly, and shall bury their idols.

7 So shall all nations praise the Lord, and his people shall confess God, and the Lord shall exalt his people; and all those which love the Lord God in truth and justice shall rejoice, shewing mercy to our brethren.

8 And now, my son, depart out of Nineve, because that those things which the prophet Jonas spake shall surely come to pass.

9 But keep thou the law and the commandments, and shew thyself merciful and just, that it may go well with thee.

10 And bury me decently, and thy mother with me; but tarry no longer at Nineve. Remember, my son, how Aman handled Achiacharus that brought him up, how out of light he brought him into darkness, and how he rewarded him again: yet Achiacharus was ‖ saved, but the other had his reward: for he went down into darkness. ‖ Manasses gave alms, and escaped the snares of death ‖ which they had set for him: but Aman fell into the snare, and perished.

11 Wherefore now, my son, consider what alms doeth, and how righteousness

18. — all her streets shall say, &c.] In the Latin copies, it is expressed, "through all her streets Alleluiah shall be sung." Calmet.

—— Alleluia;] See note at Ps. cv. 45.

Chap. XIV. ver. 2. — was eight and fifty years old] The different copies vary considerably respecting Tobit's age at this time; and also respecting his age, and that of Tobias, when they respectively died, ver. 11, 14. Arnald.

4. — which Jonas the prophet &c.] Jonas did not actually prophesy the destruction of Nineveh; but he foretold generally the revenge which God would take upon the Assyrians for their repeated provocations, chap. ii, iii; and though, as is well known, his first prediction against the city, that it should be destroyed in forty days, was not at that time fulfilled, on account of the repentance and humiliation of the inhabitants, yet it was to be inferred, that the same judgments still hung over the city, to be put in execution whenever the people should return to their wicked and abandoned ways. Arnald.

The prophecy of Jonas at chap. iii. 4 of his book, may be supposed to include the destruction of Nineveh by the Medes and Babylonians. Its accomplishment was protracted, but not frustrated.

It should be observed, that in this instance Tobit does not pretend to the spirit of prophecy himself, but speaks entirely from what had been before delivered by Jonas. Dr. Gray.

—— Jerusalem shall be desolate, &c.] He says this on the authority of those inspired Prophets, who had foretold this desolation of Jerusalem, and of the house of God, Mic. iii. 12; Jer. xxvi. 18. Arnald.

In this and the subsequent verse, Tobit mentions four great events of futurity, the knowledge of which he derived from the Prophets; namely, 1st, The end of the Jewish age or state, and a long captivity of his nation ensuing upon it. 2dly, A general return from that captivity. 3dly, The rebuilding gloriously of the city and temple: and lastly, the conversion of all the Gentiles from idolatry, when the horn or kingdom of his people should be exalted. Bp. Chandler.

6. — and shall bury their idols.] The destruction of idolatry is often mentioned by the Prophets as a principal circumstance in their description of the flourishing state of the Church, which should come to pass in aftertimes. See Is. i. 29; Jer. iii. 17; Zech. xiii. 2; Mic. v. 12, 13. Arnald.

10. — Aman — Achiacharus — Manasses] Who these persons were, is wholly unknown; it has been conjectured, that this "Achiacharus" is the nephew of Tobit, mentioned at chap. i. 21; xi. 18; but this is quite uncertain. Arnald.

"Aman" here mentioned, was certainly not Haman, the proud enemy of Mordecai, Esth. iii. 5; nor was this Manasses the husband of Judith, Judith viii. 2; but some predecessor or contemporary of Tobit, with whose history we are unacquainted. Dr. Gray.

doth deliver. When he had said these things, he gave up the ghost in the bed, being an hundred and eight and fifty years old; and he ‖ buried him honourably.

‖ Or, they.

12 And when Anna his mother was dead, he buried her with his father. But Tobias departed with his wife and children to Ecbatane to Raguel his father in law, 13 Where he became old with honour, and he buried his father and mother in law honourably, and he ‖ inherited their substance, and his father Tobit's.

14 And he died at Ecbatane in Media, being an hundred and seven and twenty years old.

15 But before he died he heard of the destruction of Nineve, which was taken by Nabuchodonosor and Assuerus: and before his death he rejoiced over Nineve.

15. — he heard of the destruction of Nineve.] This remarkable event is generally placed in the twenty-ninth year of king Josiah, and the fixing it to this time exactly agrees with the account given by the heathen historians. Arnald.

—— by Nabuchodonosor and Assuerus:] Nabuchodonosor appears to have been a name among the Babylonians commonly given to their kings, as that of Pharaoh was among the Egyptians: or at least the Jews called by this name all the princes that reigned beyond the Euphrates; and in this instance it seems to mean Nabopolassar the father of Nebuchadnezzar. Also, that the Assuerus here mentioned was Astyages, appears from the book of Daniel, chap. ix. 1. For Darius the Mede, who was Cyaxares the son of Astyages, is there called the son of Ahasuerus. Dean Prideaux.

JUDITH.

INTRODUCTION.

THE author and the period of this history are both uncertain. Some commentators imagine that it was written by Joacim or Eliakim whom they conceive to have been high priest in the reign of Manasseh; and that it was translated into Chaldee for the use of those Jews in the captivity of Babylon, who had forgotten their own language. Others attribute the work to Joshua, the son of Josedech, the companion of Zerubbabel. But by whomsoever, or in whatever language it was produced, the original is not now extant. The Hebrew copy, which some have professed to have seen at Constantinople, was probably a work of modern composition; and our English translation, as well as the Syriack, is made from a Greek version which existed probably long before the time of Theodotion, as it seems to have been known to Clemens Romanus. The most probable opinion is, that the book was originally written in Chaldee, by some Jew of Babylon; and it might possibly have been designed to enliven the confidence of the Jews during the captivity, and to invigorate their hopes of a deliverance.

The circumstances described in this history must have occurred previously to the destruction of Jerusalem, since the Persians are represented as still subject to the Assyrian empire; and Nineveh, which is here mentioned as the capital of Nabuchodonosor's empire, was overthrown before that destruction; and upon the impending invasion of Holofernes, the Jews are said in this book to have been troubled "for Jerusalem, and for the temple of the Lord their God." Usher therefore, Lloyd, and Prideaux, have agreed on considering the history as coeval with the time of Manasseh, placing it in about the forty-fourth year of his reign, in the year of the world 3348. Dr. Gray.

Still, though the history cannot with consistency be assigned to any other time than that of Manasseh, there are some objections to the period, which may be attributed to corruptions which have taken place in the copies we possess, or to the obscurities which necessarily hang over a period so distant, and so little illustrated by the remains of ancient history.

It appears from the accounts of Origen and St. Jerome, that the Jews reckoned this book among their apocryphal writings. It is nowhere cited by our Saviour or His Apostles; nor was it received as canonical by any of the Christian fathers, or the more ancient councils.

This book presents an interesting scene of ambition frustrated, and of intemperance punished. The history is written with great grandeur and animation, and the Assyrian and Hebrew manners are well described. The prayer and hymn of Judith, (chap. ix. and xvi.) are composed with much piety. If the address, with which she accomplished her designs, should be thought to partake too much of an insidious character; we may be permitted at least to admire the heroick patriotism and piety which prompted her to undertake the exploit: the urgency and importance of the occasion will likewise excuse the indiscreet exposure of her person to intemperate passions; and in the general description of her character, she may be allowed to have presented an exemplary display of the virtues which become the widowed state. Dr. Gray.

CHAP. I.

2 Arphaxad doth fortify Ecbatane. 5 Nabuchodonosor maketh war against him, 7 and craveth aid. 12 He threateneth those that would not aid him, 15 and killeth Arphaxad, 16 and returneth to Nineve.

IN the twelfth year of the reign of Nabuchodonosor, who reigned in Nineve, the great city; in the days of Arphaxad, which reigned over the Medes in Ecbatane,

2 And built in Ecbatane walls round about of stones hewn three cubits broad and six cubits long, and made the height of the wall seventy cubits, and the breadth thereof fifty cubits:

3 And set the towers thereof upon the gates of it, an hundred cubits high, and the breadth thereof in the foundation threescore cubits:

4 And he made the gates thereof, even gates that were raised to the height of seventy cubits, and the breadth of them was forty cubits, for the going forth of his mighty armies, and for the setting in array of his footmen:

5 Even in those days king Nabuchodonosor made war with king Arphaxad in the great plain, which is the plain in the borders of Ragau.

6 And there came unto him all they that dwelt in the hill country, and all that dwelt by Euphrates, and Tigris, and Hydaspe, and the plain of Arioch the king of the Elymeans, and very many nations of the sons of Chelod, assembled themselves to the battle.

7 Then Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians sent unto all that dwelt in Persia, and to all that dwelt westward, and to those that dwelt in Cilicia, and Damascus, and Libanus, and Antilibanus, and to all that dwelt upon the sea coast,

8 And to those among the nations that were of Carmel, and Galaad, and the higher Galilee, and the great plain of Esdrelom,

9 And to all that were in Samaria and the cities thereof, and beyond Jordan unto Jerusalem, and Betane, and Chellus, and Kades, and the river of Egypt, and Taphnes, and Ramesse, and all the land of Gesem,

10 Until ye come beyond Tanis and Memphis, and to all the inhabitants of Egypt, until ye come to the borders of Ethiopia.

11 But all the inhabitants of the land made light of the commandment of Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians, neither went they with him to the battle; for they were not afraid of him: yea, he was before them as one man, and they sent away his ambassadors from them without effect, and with disgrace.

12 Therefore Nabuchodonosor was very angry with all this country, and sware by his throne and kingdom, that he would surely be avenged upon all those coasts of Cilicia, and Damascus, and Syria, and that he would slay with the sword all the inhabitants of the land of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and all Judea, and all that were in Egypt, till ye come to the borders of the two seas.

13 Then he marched in battle array with his power against king Arphaxad in the seventeenth year, and he prevailed in his battle: for he overthrew all the power of Arphaxad, and all his horsemen, and all his chariots,

14 And became lord of his cities, and came unto Ecbatane, and took the towers, and spoiled the streets thereof, and turned the beauty thereof into shame.

15 He took also Arphaxad in the mountains of Ragau, and smote him through with his darts, and destroyed him utterly that day.

16 So he returned afterward to Nineve, both he and all his company of sundry nations, being a very great multitude of men of war, and there he took his ease, and banqueted, both he and his army, an hundred and twenty days.

AND in the eighteenth year, the two and twentieth day of the first month, there was talk in the house of Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians, that he should, as he said, avenge himself on all the earth.

6. — king of the Elymeans,] The Elymeans bordered on Media, and perhaps were included in its limits. The Latin copies read, "king of the Elicians." Calmet.

—— the sons of Chelod,] Who these were, is wholly unknown. There is considerable variation as to the proper names here mentioned in the different versions. Calmet.

8. — the great plain of Esdrelom,] Or Esdraelon, chap. iii. 9, otherwise Jezreel. See the note at Judg. vi. 33. The name Jezreel was moulded into Esdraela by the Greeks, which was the name of the town in Eusebius's time, and the adjoining plain is still denoted by the name of the plain of Esdraelon. Mr. Maundrell says, that two clans of Arabs were encamped upon it when he went over it. Dr. Wells.

9. — all the land of Gesem,] Meaning the land of Goshen, in lower Egypt, where Joseph placed his father and brethren, when they came down to live in that country, Gen. xlvii. 27. Calmet. It has been thought improbable by some commentators, that Nabuchodonosor should summon the people to his assistance, from such remote countries as Egypt, &c. But it is by no means difficult to believe, that so imperious a prince as Nabuchodonosor is described to be, should send his orders to these remote people, although he had no power to enforce them; which indeed sufficiently appears from the next verse. Arnald.

12. — sware by his throne and kingdom,] This was anciently esteemed a most solemn, sacred, and inviolable oath. Herodotus mentions, that the Scythians particularly used this form when a more solemn oath than ordinary was to be taken. It appears from the Gospel, Matt. v. 34; xxiii. 22, that the Jews sometimes swore by God's throne, which was virtually swearing by God Himself. And it is related by Tavernier, that the Persians use a similar oath to this day. Calmet, Arnald.

—— to the borders of the two seas.] Meaning probably the Mediterranean and the Red sea. It seems to have been an ancient method of describing Egypt, to call it the country bordering on the two seas. Nor has this expression been disused in later ages. It is remarkable, that the title given to Ali Bey, by the sheriff of Mecca, in gratitude for his having been raised by Ali to that honour, was "Sultan of Egypt, and the two seas." Harmer.

Chap. II. ver. 1. And in the eighteenth year,] It is remarkable, that the dates in the Latin copies of this book precede by five years those of the Greek, from which our translation is made. The Latin copy mentions at ch. i. ver. 13, that the battle at Ragau took place in the twelfth year of Nabuchodonosor; and affirms that what is here related took place in the thirteenth, instead of the eighteenth. Thus both agree in giving to the events of this second chapter a date subsequent by one year to that of the battle. Arnald. The dates given in the Latin copy are probably the true dates. Dean Prideaux.

—— on all the earth.] This expression is of course not to be taken literally, but to be considered as including those people and

2 So he called unto him all his officers, and all his nobles, and communicated with
*1 Sam. 20. 7. & 23. 17. them his secret counsel, and *concluded the afflicting of the whole earth out of his own mouth.

3 Then they decreed to destroy all flesh, that did not obey the commandment of his mouth.

4 And when he had ended his counsel, Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians called Holofernes the chief captain of his † Gr. second man. army, which was † next unto him, and said unto him,

5 Thus saith the great king, the lord of the whole earth, Behold, thou shalt go forth from my presence, and take with thee men that trust in their own strength, of footmen an hundred and twenty thousand; and the number of horses with their riders twelve thousand.

6 And thou shalt go against all the west country, because they disobeyed my commandment.

7 And thou shalt declare unto them,
‖ After the manner of the kings of Persia, to whom earth and water was wont to be given, to acknowledge that they were lords of land and sea. Herodotus. that they prepare for me ‖ earth and water: for I will go forth in my wrath against them, and will cover the whole face of the earth with the feet of mine army, and I will give them for a spoil unto them:

8 So that their slain shall fill their valleys and brooks, and the river shall be filled with their dead, till it overflow:

9 And I will lead them captives to the utmost parts of all the earth.

10 Thou therefore shalt go forth, and take beforehand for me all their coasts: and if they will yield themselves unto thee, thou shalt reserve them for me till the day of their punishment.

11 But concerning them that rebel, let not thine eye spare them; but put them to the slaughter, and spoil them wheresoever thou goest.

12 For as I live, and by the power of my kingdom, whatsoever I have spoken, that will I do by mine hand.

13 And take thou heed that thou transgress none of the commandments of thy lord, but accomplish them fully, as I have commanded thee, and defer not to do them.

14 Then Holofernes went forth from the presence of his lord, and called all the governors and captains, and the officers of the army of Assur;

15 And he mustered the chosen men for the battle, as his lord had commanded him, unto an hundred and twenty thousand, and twelve thousand archers on horseback;

16 And he ranged them, as a great army is ordered for the war.

17 And he took camels and asses for their carriages, a very great number; and sheep and oxen and goats without number for their provision:

18 And plenty of victual for every man of the army, and very much gold and silver out of the king's house.

19 Then he went forth and all his power to go before king Nabuchodonosor in the voyage, and to cover all the face of the earth westward with their chariots, and horsemen, and their chosen footmen.

20 A great number also of sundry countries came with them like locusts, and like the sand of the earth: for the multitude was without number.

nations only, who had refused to obey his summons. The words "whole earth" or "world" often occur in this qualified sense. See particularly Luke ii. 1. Arnald.

6. — called Holofernes:] Some annotators are of opinion, that the word "Holofernes" is of Persian extract, in the same manner as Irsaphernes, Intaphernes, &c; but others imagine, that this general was a native either of Pontus or Cappadocia. Polybius makes mention of one of that name, who having conquered Cappadocia, soon lost it again by endeavouring to change the ancient customs of the country, and to introduce drunkenness, together with feasts and rites to Bacchus. Whereupon Casaubon conjectures, that this was the same Holofernes that commanded Nebuchadnezzar's forces; and it must be owned, that his riot and debauchery, as well as the rapidity of his conquests, make him not unlike him. Arnald.

7. — prepare for me earth and water:] See the margin. Darius king of Persia, when he wished to make trial whether the Greeks would submit to him, sent heralds to all their cities to demand earth and water. It appears from this account, that the custom of making this demand was not peculiar to the Persians, but was common to other nations of the East. Arnald.

11. — let not thine eye spare them;] A Hebrew expression, meaning that no compassion should be shewn them. Calmet.

12. — whatsoever I have spoken, that will I do &c.] When we consult that Divine light which teaches us, that men can do nothing but as God shall please to enable them, or shall allow to be done; one cannot help being surprised at the vanity of the Assyrian prince, who, flushed with the conceit of his victory over Arphaxad, and the advantages hitherto gained, resolves upon the vast attempt of subduing the whole earth, as if his power was invincible, and his project, founded either on pride, ambition, or resentment, could not fail of success. From the secrecy and well concerted measures of his expedition, and the number of forces ready to engage in it, he assures himself of conquest, not considering that success depends on God's good pleasure, who often delights to defeat the unjust designs and unwarrantable enterprises of such princes, who aim at establishing their own glory and greatness upon the ruin of innocent and less powerful states. The event of this history in particular shews the vanity of such presumptuous boasting, in defiance of the Most High; and that even weak and inconsiderable means will have the power, by God's appointment, to stop the career, and confound the pride of the mighty. Arnald.

days' journey toward the plain of Bectileth, and pitched from Bectileth near the mountain which is at the left hand of the upper Cilicia.

22 Then he took all his army, his footmen, and horsemen, and chariots, and went from thence into the hill country;

23 And destroyed Phud and Lud, and spoiled all the children of Rasses, and the children of Ismael, which were toward the wilderness at the south of the land of the Chellians.

24 Then he went over Euphrates, and went through Mesopotamia, and destroyed all the high cities that were upon the river Arbonai, till ye come to the sea.

25 And he took the borders of Cilicia, and killed all that resisted him, and came to the borders of Japheth, which were toward the south, over against Arabia.

26 He compassed also all the children of Madian, and burned up their tabernacles, and spoiled their sheepcotes.

27 Then he went down into the plain of Damascus in the time of wheat harvest, and burnt up all their fields, and destroyed their flocks and herds, also he spoiled their cities, and utterly wasted their countries, and smote all their young men with the edge of the sword.

28 Therefore the fear and dread of him fell upon all the inhabitants of the sea coasts, which were in Sidon and Tyrus, and them that dwelt in Sur and Ocina, and all that dwelt in Jemnaan; and they that dwelt in Azotus and Ascalon feared him greatly.

CHAP. III.

1 They of the sea coasts intreat for peace. 7 Holofernes is received there: 8 yet he destroyeth their gods, that they might worship only Nabuchodonosor. 9 He cometh near to Judea.

SO they sent ambassadors unto him to treat of peace, saying,

2 Behold, we the servants of Nabuchodonosor the great king lie before thee; use us as shall be good in thy sight.

3 Behold, our houses, and all our places, and all our fields of wheat, and flocks, and herds, and all the lodges of our tents, lie before thy face; use them as it pleaseth thee.

4 Behold, even our cities and the inhabitants thereof are thy servants; come and deal with them as seemeth good unto thee.

5 So the men came to Holofernes, and declared unto him after this manner.

6 Then came he down toward the sea coast, both he and his army, and set garrisons in the high cities, and took out of them chosen men for aid.

7 So they and all the country round about received them with garlands, with dances, and with timbrels.

8 Yet he did cast down their frontiers, and cut down their groves: for he had decreed to destroy all the gods of the land, that all nations should worship Nabuchodonosor only, and that all tongues and tribes should call upon him as god.

9 Also he came over against ‖ Esdraelon near unto ‖ Judea, over against the † great strait of Judea.

—— that all tongues and tribes should call upon him as god.] Observe of what folly and impiety the human heart is capable, when pride and ambition have obtained possession of it; and when prosperity has so blinded it as to make it forget itself. Calmet. The insolence of affecting Divine honours was common to many Assyrian princes, as appears from their histories; nor was this folly and impiety confined to them; Alexander the Great, and many of the Roman emperours, shewed a similar ambition of passing for gods. Arnald.

the chief captain of Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians had done to the nations, and after what manner he had spoiled all their temples, and brought them to nought.

2 Therefore they were exceedingly afraid of him, and were troubled for Jerusalem, and for the temple of the Lord their God:

3 For they were newly returned from the captivity, and all the people ‖ of Judea were lately gathered together: and the vessels, and the altar, and the house, were sanctified after the profanation.

‖ Or, out of Judea.

4 Therefore they sent into all the coasts of Samaria, and the villages, and to Bethoron, and Belmen, and Jericho, and to Choba, and Esora, and to the valley of Salem:

5 And possessed themselves beforehand of all the tops of the high mountains, and fortified the villages that were in them, and laid up victuals for the provision of war: for their fields were of late reaped.

6 Also Joacim the high priest, which was in those days in Jerusalem, wrote to them that dwelt in Bethulia, and Betomestham, which is over against ‖ Esdraelon toward the ‖ open country, near to Dothaim,

9 Then every man of Israel cried to God with great fervency, and with great vehemency did they humble their souls:

10 Both they, and their wives, and their children, and their cattle, and every stranger and hireling, and their servants bought with money, put sackcloth upon their loins.

11 Thus every man and woman, and the little children, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, fell before the temple, and cast ashes upon their heads, and spread out their sackcloth before the face of the Lord: also they put sackcloth about the altar,

12 And cried to the God of Israel all with one consent earnestly, that he would not give their children for a prey, and their wives for a spoil, and the cities of their inheritance to destruction, and the sanctuary to profanation and reproach, and for the nations to rejoice at.

13 So God heard their prayers, and looked upon their afflictions: for the people fasted many days in all Judea and Jerusalem before the sanctuary of the Lord Almighty.

14 And Joacim the high priest, and all the priests that stood before the Lord, and they which ministered unto the Lord, had their loins girt with sackcloth, and offered the daily burnt offerings, with the vows and free gifts of the people,

Chap. IV. ver. 3. For they were newly returned from the captivity,] This passage, together with that at chap. v. 18, 19, has led many to conclude, that the events here related occurred subsequent to the Babylonish captivity. It should be observed however, that this passage is entirely omitted in the Latin translation of this book; and that the captivity here spoken of may be, not the great Babylonish captivity, but one which was slight in comparison, when Manasseh was carried captive to Babylon; at that time, what is here related of the country being desolate, the people dispersed, and the temple profaned, really happened; and upon Manasseh's restoration to his kingdom, through God's blessing upon his exemplary penitence, the temple was purified, and the service of the sanctuary restored to its ancient dignity, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 12—14. Arnald.

4. — Belmen, — Choba, — Esora,] "Belmen" is perhaps Abelmaim, in the tribe of Naphtali: "Choba" may be Cocheba, a village in Galilee, and "Esora" may be Hazor, a place in upper Galilee, Josh. xi. 1. Calmet.

6. — Joacim the high priest,] Called Eliakim in the Latin copies. Calmet.

—— Bethulia,] It is evident from this text, and from chap. vii. 3, that this place was near to Dothaim, or Dothan, and to Esdraelon, supposed to be Jezreel; hence we may form a good conjecture at its situation. Brocard says, that from the place, which was taken for Bethulia when he travelled the Holy Land, to Tiberias on the sea of Galilee, was one league, and that the latter lay to the south east of the former. Dr. Wells. They pretend still to shew the remains of the encampment of Holofernes, chap. vii 3, near the place, now supposed to be the ancient Bethulia. Calmet.

—— Betomestham,] Probably the same as Bethshemeth, or Betsames, which in the Syriack pronunciation would be Betomes Calmet.

9. Then every man — cried to God &c.] We should reflect upon the behaviour of the Israelites on this occasion, who, while they used every precaution of defence against their enemies, still did not place their whole confidence in human policy and foresight; but, according to the direction of the high priest, had recourse to prayer, humiliation, and fasting, for the purpose of obtaining the favour of God, which alone could render them invincible. And it was this profound humiliation before God, which alone could avail to oppose and subdue the pride and haughtiness of Holofernes. Other nations had hastily submitted through the very terrour of his name, but this people, providing better for their safety, humbled themselves in the sight of God, and thereby obtained the help of His mighty hand, and were enabled to triumph over their enemies. Arnald.

14. — Joacim the high priest, &c. — had their loins girt with sackcloth,] The high priest was forbidden by the law to mourn for the death of his nearest kin, Lev. xxi. 10, 11; but publick calamities, such as affected the very being of the state, admitted of an exemption from the ordinary rule. The Prophet Joel, in such a time of distress, exhorts that the priests, the ministers of the altar, should "gird themselves, lament and how], and lie all night in sackcloth," Joel i. 13. Arnald.

5 Achior telleth Holofernes what the Jews are, 8 and what their God had done for them; 21 and adviseth not to meddle with them. 22 All that heard him were offended at him.

THEN was it declared to Holofernes, the chief captain of the army of Assur, that the children of Israel had prepared for war, and had shut up the passages of the hill country, and had fortified † all the tops of the high hills, and had laid impediments in the champaign countries:

5 [a] Then said Achior, the captain of all the sons of Ammon, Let my lord now hear a word from the mouth of thy servant, and I will declare unto thee the truth concerning this people, which dwelleth near thee, and inhabiteth the hill countries: and there shall no lie come out of the mouth of thy servant.

6 This people are descended of the Chaldeans:

[c] Gen. 12. 1.

9 Then [c] their God commanded them to depart from the place where they sojourned, and to go into the land of Chanaan: where they dwelt, and were increased with gold and silver, and with very much cattle.

10 But when a famine covered all the land of Chanaan, they went down into Egypt, and sojourned there, while they were nourished, and became there a great multitude, so that one could not number their nation.

11 Therefore the king of Egypt rose up against them, and dealt subtilly with them, and brought them low with labouring in [d] brick, and made them slaves.

16 [h] And they cast forth before them the Chanaanite, the Pherezite, the Jebusite, and the Sychemite, and all the Gergesites, and they dwelt in that country many days.

Chap. V. ver. 1. — had laid impediments in the champaign countries:] Meaning, that they had laid stakes and other sharp instruments in the ground, which it was the practice to employ in war for the purpose of retarding the progress of an enemy, by wounding the legs and feet; on this account it was customary to wear on the legs greaves of brass, 1 Sam. xvii. 6. Arnald.

3. — ye sons of Chanaan,] Holofernes, it appears, was but imperfectly acquainted with the origin of the Moabites and Ammonites; they were not properly "sons of Chanaan," that name belonging to the Phenicians. Calmet.

—— who this people is,] It seems impossible that Holofernes could have been really ignorant who the Jews were; but he must have wished to be informed accurately respecting their origin, character, the extent of their country, &c; or perhaps his questions proceeded from affected ignorance, to shew in what contempt he held this people. Calmet, Arnald.

4. — all the inhabitants of the west.] The inhabitants who lay west with respect to the Assyrians.

6. — are descended of the Chaldeans:] As claiming Abraham for their father, who was a Chaldean. Arnald. Respecting what follows, see the marginal references.

16. — and the Sychemite,] Meaning the Hivites, to whom the country about Sichem belonged. Calmet.

19 But [1] now are they returned to their God, and are come up from the places where they were scattered, and have possessed Jerusalem, where their sanctuary is, and ‖ are seated in the hill country; for it was desolate.

20 Now therefore, my lord and governor, if there be any error in this people, and they sin against their God, let us consider that this shall be their ruin, and let us go up, and we shall overcome them.

21 But if there be no iniquity in their nation, let my lord now pass by, lest their Lord defend them, and their God be for them, and we become a reproach before all the world.

22 And when Achior had finished these sayings, all the people standing round about the tent murmured, and the chief men of Holofernes, and all that dwelt by the sea side, and in Moab, spake that he should kill him.

23 For, say they, we will not be afraid of the face of the children of Israel: for, lo, it is a people that have no strength nor power † for a strong battle.

24 Now therefore, lord Holofernes, we will go up, and they shall be a prey to be devoured of all thine army.

CHAP. VI.

3 Holofernes despiseth God. 7 He threateneth Achior, and sendeth him away. 14 The Bethulians receive and hear him. 18 They fall to prayer, and comfort Achior.

AND when the tumult of men that were about the council was ceased, Holofernes the chief captain of the army of Assur said unto Achior and all the Moabites before all the company of other nations,

2 And who art thou, Achior, and the hirelings of Ephraim, that thou hast prophesied among us as to day, and hast said, that we should not make war with the people of Israel, because their God will defend them? and who is God but Nabuchodonosor?

3 He will send his power, and will destroy them from the face of the earth, and their God shall not deliver them: but we his servants will destroy them as one man; for they are not able to sustain the power of our horses.

4 For with them we will tread them under foot, and their mountains shall be drunken with their blood, and their fields shall be filled with their dead bodies, and their footsteps shall not be able to stand before us, for they shall utterly perish, saith king Nabuchodonosor, lord of all the earth: for he said, None of my words shall be in vain.

5 And thou, Achior, an hireling of Ammon, which hast spoken these words in the day of thine iniquity, shalt see my face no more from this day, until I take vengeance of this nation that came out of Egypt.

6 And then shall the sword of mine army, and the multitude of them that serve me, pass through thy sides, and thou shalt fall among their slain, when I return.

7 Now therefore my servants shall bring thee back into the hill country, and shall set thee in one of the cities of the passages:

8 And thou shalt not perish, till thou be destroyed with them.

9 And if thou persuade thyself in thy mind that they shall not be taken, let not thy countenance fall: I have spoken it, and none of my words shall be in vain.

stroyed, but only profaned. See 2 Kings xxi; 2 Chron. xxxiii. But, as these words were spoken by a stranger, an Ammonite, he may have mentioned without grounds the actual destruction of the temple, as Rabshakeh does, 2 Kings xviii. 22, with regard to Hezekiah's taking away the altar of the Lord. Arnald.

From the expressions here used respecting the Jews by Achior, the general of the Ammonites, it appears how famous and how well known in those days was the distinguishing providence of God towards the Jewish nation; and how certainly even strangers expected mercies and judgments upon them, according to their obedience or disobedience to their God, the God of Israel, and according to those ancient promises and threats, which had ever assured them of such conduct of the Almighty towards them. Whiston.

20. — if there be any error] Any sin or transgression. Arnald. This speech of Achior to Holofernes was framed and grounded on the confessed observations of those times; and contained such advice as a faithful counsellor, well acquainted with the affairs of the Jews, should have given to his lord, who did not so well understand them. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. VI. ver. 2. — hirelings of Ephraim,] A contemptuous name for the Jews; as also that at ver. 5, the "nation that came out of Egypt," intimating that they were a race of slaves. We are reminded by this speech of Holofernes, conceived in the spirit of military pride, and expressed in terms of the most impious insolence, of the words of Goliath the Philistine, defying the armies of Israel, 1 Sam. xvii, and of those of Rabshakeh, "whom the king of Assyria sent to reproach the living God," 2 Kings xix. 4. But the event in every instance shewed, that the confidence of such profane boasters was but vain; their blasphemies drew down upon them the judgments of God, and their overthrow made it appear, that "the Lord, He is the God; the Lord, He is the God." Arnald.

5. — an hireling of Ammon, which hast &c.] That is, who hast been hired by the Jews to prophesy falsely, in order to discourage my army, and hast this day betrayed thy perfidiousness and treachery. Arnald.

9. — let not thy countenance fall:] The meaning here seems to be, If thou art assured of the truth of what thou sayest, do not betray alarm, and let not signs of conscious guilt and confusion appear on thy countenance; if thou art a true prophet, there is no occasion for fear; but if by the event thou art detected to be a false one, thy perfidiousness must draw on thee more severe punishment. Arnald.

10 Then Holofernes commanded his servants, that waited in his tent, to take Achior, and bring him to Bethulia, and deliver him into the hands of the children of Israel.

11 So his servants took him, and brought him out of the camp into the plain, and they went from the midst of the plain into the hill country, and came unto the fountains that were under Bethulia.

12 And when the men of the city saw them, they took up their weapons, and went out of the city to the top of the hill: and every man that used a sling kept them from coming up by casting of stones against them.

13 Nevertheless having gotten privily under the hill, they bound Achior, and cast him down, and left him at the foot of the hill, and returned to their lord.

14 But the Israelites descended from their city, and came unto him, and loosed him, and brought him into Bethulia, and presented him to the governors of the city:

15 Which were in those days Ozias the son of Micha, of the tribe of Simeon, and Chabris the son of Gothoniel, and Charmis the son of Melchiel.

16 And they called together all the ancients of the city, and all their youth ran together, and their women, to the assembly, and they set Achior in the midst of all their people. Then Ozias asked him of that which was done.

17 And he answered and declared unto them the words of the council of Holofernes, and all the words that he had spoken in the midst of the princes of Assur, and whatsoever Holofernes had spoken proudly against the house of Israel.

18 Then the people fell down and worshipped God, and cried unto God, saying,

19 O Lord God of heaven, behold their pride, and pity the low estate of our nation, and look upon the face of those that are sanctified unto thee this day.

20 Then they comforted Achior, and praised him greatly.

21 And Ozias took him out of the assembly unto his house, and made a feast to the elders; and they called on the God of Israel all that night for help.

CHAP. VII.

1 Holofernes besiegeth Bethulia, 7 and stoppeth the water from them. 22 They faint, and murmur against the governors, 30 who promise to yield within five days.

THE next day Holofernes commanded all his army, and all his people which were come to take his part, that they should remove their camp against Bethulia, to take aforehand the ascents of the hill country, and to make war against the children of Israel.

2 Then their strong men removed their camps in that day, and the army of the men of war was an hundred and seventy thousand footmen, and twelve thousand horsemen, beside the baggage, and other men that were afoot among them, a very great multitude.

3 And they camped in the valley near unto Bethulia, by the fountain, and they spread themselves in breadth ‖ over Dothaim even to Belmaim, and in length from Bethulia unto † Cyamon, which is over against Esdraelom.

4 Now the children of Israel, when they saw the multitude of them, were greatly troubled, and said every one to his neighbour, Now will these men lick up the face of the earth; for neither the high mountains, nor the valleys, nor the hills, are able to bear their weight.

5 Then every man took up his weapons of war, and when they had kindled fires upon their towers, they remained and watched all that night.

6 But in the second day Holofernes brought forth all his horsemen in the sight of the children of Israel which were in Bethulia,

7 And viewed the passages up to the city, and came to the fountains of their waters, and took them, and set garrisons of men of war over them, and he himself removed toward his people.

8 Then came unto him all the chief of

19. — of those that are sanctified unto thee this day.] The meaning is, Hear the supplications of those who have prepared and sanctified themselves in this time of calamity, and who join in the holy offices of fasting and praying, in order to implore Thy help and mercy against an insulting and proud enemy, who defies even Thy Almighty power. Arnald.

Chap. VII. ver. 2. — was an hundred and seventy thousand footmen,] Thus his army had been increased by reinforcements since his departure from Nineveh, when his force was stated at "an hundred and twenty thousand footmen," chap. ii. 5. Calmet.

3. — and in length from Bethulia &c.] The camp of Holofernes, it seems, was so long as to take up all the plain of Esdraelon, which is described to have been sixteen miles in length. Arnold.

5. — when they had kindled fires upon their towers,] It was usual in Judea to make signal by fire on the tops of the mountains, in order to give notice of the approach of the enemy. See Jer. vi. 1, and the note there. Arnald.

the children of Esau, and all the governors of the people of Moab, and the captains of the sea coast, and said,

9 Let our lord now hear a word, that there be not an overthrow in thine army.

10 For this people of the children of Israel do not trust in their spears, but in the height of the mountains where*in* they dwell, because it is not easy to come up to the tops of their mountains.

11 Now therefore, my lord, fight not against them in battle array, and there shall not so much as one man of thy people perish.

12 Remain in thy camp, and keep all the men of thine army, and let thy servants get into their hands the fountain of water, which issueth forth of the foot of the mountain:

13 For all the inhabitants of Bethulia have their water thence; so shall thirst kill them, and they shall give up their city, and we and our people shall go up to the tops of the mountains that are near, and will camp upon them, to watch that none go out of the city.

14 So they and their wives and their children shall be consumed with famine, and before the sword come against them, they shall be overthrown in the streets where they dwell.

15 Thus shalt thou render them an evil reward; because they rebelled, and met not thy person peaceably.

16 And these words pleased Holofernes and all his servants, and he appointed to do as they had spoken.

17 So the camp of the children of Ammon departed, and with them five thousand of the Assyrians, and they pitched in the valley, and took the waters, and the fountains of the waters of the children of Israel.

18 Then the children of Esau went up with the children of Ammon, and camped in the hill country over against Dothaim: and they sent some of them toward the south, and toward the east, over against Ekrebel, which is near unto Chusi, that is upon the brook Mochmur; and the rest of the army of the Assyrians camped in the plain, and covered the face of the whole land; and their tents and carriages were pitched to a very great multitude.

19 Then the children of Israel cried unto the Lord their God, because their heart failed, for all their enemies had compassed them round about, and there was no way to escape out from among them.

20 Thus all the company of Assur remained about them, both their footmen, chariots, and horsemen, four and thirty days, so that all their vessels of water failed all the inhabitants of Bethulia.

21 And the ‖ cisterns were emptied, and they had not water to drink their fill for one day; for they gave them drink by measure. ‖ Or, pits

22 Therefore their young children were out of heart, and their women and young men fainted for thirst, and fell down in the streets of the city, and by the passages of the gates, and there was no longer any strength in them.

23 Then all the people assembled to Ozias, and to the chief of the city, both young men, and women, and children, and cried with a loud voice, and said before all the elders, 24 God be [a] judge between us and you: for ye have done us great injury, in that ye have not required peace of the children of Assur. [a] Exodus 5. 21.

25 For now we have no helper: but God hath sold us into their hands, that we should be thrown down before them with thirst and great destruction.

26 Now therefore call them unto you, and deliver the whole city for a spoil to the people of Holofernes, and to all his army.

27 For it is better for us to be made a spoil unto them, than to die for thirst: for we will be his servants, that our souls may live, and not see the death of our infants before our eyes, nor our wives nor our children to die.

28 We take to witness against you the heaven and the earth, and our God and Lord of our fathers, which punisheth us according to our sins and the sins of our fathers, ‖ that he do not according as we have said this day. ‖ Or, lest he do, meaning Holofernes.

29 Then there was great weeping with

8. — of the children of Esau,] The Idumeans. Calmet.

28. — that he do not according as we have said] The meaning of these words has been variously conjectured, and, after all, with no great success. The verse in the Latin version stands thus: "We entreat you by heaven and earth this day, and the God of our fathers, who punishes us according to our sins, that you would deliver our city over to the army of Holofernes, and consign us to a speedy death by the sword, rather than to a lingering one by thirst." Calmet.

one consent in the midst of the assembly; and they cried unto the Lord God with a loud voice.

30 Then said Ozias to them, Brethren, be of good courage, let us yet endure five days, in the which space the Lord our God may turn his mercy toward us; for he will not forsake us utterly.

31 And if these days pass, and there come no help unto us, I will do according to your word.

32 And he dispersed the people, every one to their own charge; and they went unto the walls and towers of their city, and sent the women and children into their houses: and they were very low brought in the city.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The state and behaviour of Judith a widow. 12 She blameth the governors for their promise to yield, 17 and adviseth them to trust in God. 28 They excuse their promise. 32 She promiseth to do something for them.

NOW at that time Judith heard thereof, which was the daughter of Merari, the son of Ox, the son of Joseph, the son of Oziel, the son of Elcia, the son of Ananias, the son of Gedeon, the son of Raphaim, the son of Acitho, the son of Eliu, the son of Eliab, the son of Nathanael, the son of ‖ Samael, the son of Salasadai, the son of Israel.

‖ Or, Samalial.

2 And Manasses was her husband, of her tribe and kindred, who died in the barley harvest.

3 For as he stood overseeing them that bound sheaves in the field, the heat came upon his head, and he fell on his bed, and died in the city of Bethulia: and they buried him with his fathers in the field between Dothaim and Balamo.

4 So Judith was a widow in her house three years and four months.

5 And she made her a tent upon the top of her house, and put on sackcloth upon her loins, and ware her widow's apparel.

6 And she fasted all the days of her widowhood, save the eves of the sabbaths, and the sabbaths, and the eves of the new moons, and the new moons, and the feasts and solemn days of the house of Israel.

7 She was also of a goodly countenance, and very beautiful to behold: and her husband Manasses had left her gold, and silver, and menservants, and maidservants, and cattle, and lands; ‖ and she remained upon them.

‖ Or, and she kept them.

8 And there was none that gave her an ill word; for she feared God greatly.

9 Now when she heard the evil words of the people against the governor, that they fainted for lack of water; for Judith had heard all * the words that Ozias had spoken unto them, and that he had sworn to deliver the city unto the Assyrians after five days;

* Chap. 7. 30, 31.

10 Then she sent her waitingwoman, that had the government of all things that she had, to call Ozias and Chabris and Charmis, the ancients of the city.

30. — let us yet endure five days.] We meet with a similar instance to this in the sacred writings at 1 Sam. xi. 3, where, upon the threats of Nahash, king of the children of Ammon, the elders of Israel desire a respite of seven days to send messengers to all the coasts of Israel; and promise to surrender themselves if in that time none should come effectually to their relief. And in that instance the event answered, for "the Spirit of the Lord came upon Saul," and stirred him up to come to their assistance within the expected time, and they proved victorious. Arnald.

Chap. VIII. ver. 2. — of her tribe and kindred.] That is, of the tribe of Simeon, as Judith was, chap. ix. 2. Thus Anna and Tobias were of the same tribe and kindred, Tobit iii. 15, 17; vi. 12. And Joseph and Mary were both of the house and lineage of David, and as such were espoused, Luke ii. 4. Arnald.

3. — stood overseeing them that bound sheaves.] It appears from 2 Kings iv. 18, that in those times persons of note used to employ themselves in their fields in overlooking their labourers. Arnald.

—— the heat came upon his head,] It is known from various sources, that the scorching heat of the sun in warm climates has often proved fatal in this manner.

4. — was a widow — three years and four months.] Meaning, not that this was the whole period of her widowhood, for she lived to be aged, and was never married afterwards, but that she had been so long a widow when the events here to be related occurred. Arnald.

5. — she made her a tent upon the top of her house.] She probably did this for the purpose of being private and secure from interruption in her devotions, according to what is recorded of St. Peter, Acts x. 9. Respecting the flat roofs of the Eastern houses, see notes at Deut. xx. 8; Judges xvi. 27; and Neh. viii. 16.

6. — she fasted all the days — save the eves &c.] This was a great instance of her pious disposition, and of her regard to the memory of her husband. This strictness and severity of life was customary among the Jewish women. See the account of Anna at Luke ii. 37, 38. As to the solemn feasts, the sabbaths, and the new moons, the Jews seem to have carefully observed these in their worst as well as in their best state, from their earliest to their latest times. But at what time the regard, which is here mentioned as paid to the eves of the sabbaths and new moons, first began, has been much controverted. It seems clear, that the custom of observing the eves of festivals in the Christian Church was derived from the same custom in the Jewish. Arnald. Perhaps the custom of observing the eve of a festival arose from the cautious wish to keep duly the whole of the festival, and to prevent there being any remains of antecedent sorrow on that day. Grotius. Or the following reason may be assigned for the fast being dispensed with on the eve of a festival. A festival was held to begin between the two evenings; that is, between three and six o'clock in the afternoon. Now, as the fast of the Hebrews did not end before sunset, it was manifestly not possible to observe a fast on the eve of a festival, because then it could not be continued beyond three in the afternoon, and therefore could not be a proper and legitimate fast. Calmet, Arnald.

10. — the ancients of the city.] Meaning certain officers or magistrates called by this name. Arnald.

11 And they came unto her, and she said unto them, Hear me now, O ye governors of the inhabitants of Bethulia: for your words that ye have spoken before the people this day are not right, touching this oath which ye made and pronounced between God and you, and have promised to deliver the city to our enemies, unless within these days the Lord turn to help you.

12 And now who are ye that have tempted God this day, and stand instead of God among the children of men?

13 And now try the Lord Almighty, but ye shall never know any thing.

14 For ye cannot find the depth of the heart of man, neither can ye perceive the things that he thinketh: then how can ye search out God, that hath made all these things, and know his mind, or comprehend his purpose? Nay, my brethren, provoke not the Lord our God to anger.

15 For if he will not help us within these five days, he hath power to defend us when he will, even every day, or to destroy us before our enemies.

16 Do not ‖bind the counsels of the Lord our God: for [b] God is not as man, that he may be threatened; neither is he as the son of man, that he should be wavering.

17 Therefore let us wait for salvation of him, and call upon him to help us, and he will hear our voice, if it please him.

18 For there arose none in our age, neither is there any now in these days, neither tribe, nor family, nor ‖people, nor city, among us, which worship gods made with [c] hands, as hath been aforetime.

19 For the which cause our fathers were given to the sword, and for a spoil, and had a great fall before our enemies.

20 But we know none other god, therefore we trust that he will not despise us, nor any of our nation.

21 For if we be taken so, all Judea shall lie waste, and our sanctuary shall be spoiled; and he will require the profanation thereof at our mouth.

22 And the ‖slaughter of our brethren, and the captivity of the country, and the desolation of our inheritance, will he turn upon our heads among the Gentiles, wheresoever we shall be in bondage; and we shall be an offence and a reproach to all them that possess us.

23 For our servitude shall not be directed to favour: but the Lord our God shall turn it to dishonour.

24 Now therefore, O brethren, let us shew an example to our brethren, because their hearts depend upon us, and the sanctuary, and the house, and the altar, rest upon us.

25 Moreover let us give thanks to the Lord our God, which trieth us, even as he did our fathers.

26 Remember what things he did to [d] Abraham, and how he tried Isaac, and what happened to [e] Jacob in Mesopotamia of Syria, when he kept the sheep of Laban his mother's brother.

27 For he hath not tried us in the fire, as he did them, for the examination of their hearts, neither hath he taken vengeance on us: but the Lord doth scourge them that come near unto him, to admonish them.

28 Then said Ozias to her, All that thou hast spoken hast thou spoken with a good heart, and there is none that may gainsay thy words.

29 For this is not the first day wherein thy wisdom is manifested; but from the beginning of thy days all the people have known thy understanding, because the disposition of thine heart is good.

30 But the people were very thirsty, and compelled us to do unto them as we have spoken, and to bring an oath upon ourselves, which we will not break.

31 Therefore now pray thou for us, because thou art a godly woman, and the Lord will send us rain to fill our cisterns, and we shall faint no more.

32 Then said Judith unto them, Hear me, and I will do a thing, which shall go throughout all generations to the children of our nation.

12. — who are ye that have tempted God &c.] To tempt God, in Scripture language, frequently signifies to distrust His power, truth, or providence, after sufficient demonstrations and reasons given for encouragement to depend upon them. See Is. vii. 12; 1 Cor. x. 9, 13. And this distrust they had shewn by confining their expectations of help from God to such a limited period as five days, as if He could not afford relief if He did not do so precisely within the time fixed by them, contrary to the fine sentiment expressed at ver. 15. Arnald.

13. — now try the Lord Almighty, &c.] That is, try if you can find out in this, or in any other matter of consequence, what the mind of the Lord is; the result must be, that you cannot pretend to do so with any certainty. Arnald.

21. For if we be taken so, &c.] She insinuates, that on the preservation of the city of Bethulia depended even that of the holy city Jerusalem, and consequently of the temple and altar, and the regular performance of their religious service; that therefore it would be an instance both of weakness and of rashness to resolve to deliver up the city if not relieved within a limited period, since their whole nation and religion would be involved in the common danger. Arnald.

33 Ye shall stand this night in the gate, and I will go forth with my waitingwoman: and within the days that ye have promised to deliver the city to our enemies the Lord will visit Israel by mine hand.

34 But enquire not ye of mine act: for I will not declare it unto you, till the things be finished that I do.

35 Then said Ozias and the princes unto her, Go in peace, and the Lord God be before thee, to take vengeance on our enemies.

36 So they returned from the tent, and went to their wards.

CHAP. IX.

1 Judith humbleth herself, 2 and prayeth God to prosper her purpose against the enemies of his sanctuary.

THEN Judith fell upon her face, and put ashes upon her head, and uncovered the sackcloth wherewith she was clothed; and about the time that the incense of that evening was offered in Jerusalem in the house of the Lord Judith cried with a loud voice, and said,

2 O Lord God of my father [a] Simeon, to whom thou gavest a sword to take vengeance of the strangers, who loosened the girdle of a maid to defile her, and discovered the thigh to her shame, and polluted her virginity to her reproach; for thou saidst, It shall not be so; and yet they did so:

3 Wherefore thou gavest their rulers to be slain, so that they dyed their bed in blood, being deceived, and smotest the servants with their lords, and the lords upon their thrones;

4 And hast given their wives for a prey, and their daughters to be captives, and all their spoils to be divided among thy dear children; which were moved with thy zeal, and abhorred the pollution of their blood, and called upon thee for aid: O God, O my God, hear me also a widow.

5 For thou hast wrought not only those things, but also the things which fell out before, and which ensued after; thou hast thought upon the things which are now, and which are to come.

6 Yea, what things thou didst determine were ready at hand, and said, Lo, we are here: for all thy ways are prepared, and thy judgments are in thy foreknowledge.

7 For, behold, the Assyrians are multiplied in their power; they are exalted with horse and man; they glory in the strength of their footmen; they trust in shield, and spear, and bow, and sling; and know not that thou art the Lord that breakest the battles: the Lord is thy name.

8 Throw down their strength in thy power, and bring down their force in thy wrath: for they have purposed to defile thy sanctuary, and to pollute the tabernacle where thy glorious name resteth, and to cast down with sword the horn of thy altar.

9 Behold their pride, and send thy wrath upon their heads: give into mine hand, which am a widow, the power that I have conceived.

33. — with my waitingwoman:] The word in the original signifies rather a companion, a lady of honour, than a servant. Calmet. In the Greek, the same word is applied to the women that attended both Pharaoh's daughter, Exod. ii. 5, and queen Esther, Esth. iv. 4. Stackhouse.

Chap. IX. ver. 1. — and uncovered the sackcloth] The Syriack version explains the meaning of this expression: "She tore her upper garments so as to uncover the sackcloth underneath." Calmet.

2. O Lord God of my father Simeon, to whom &c.] She alludes to the vengeance taken on the Shechemites by Simeon and Levi, for the defilement of their sister Dinah. See Gen. xxxiv, and the notes there. By the expression "to whom Thou gavest a sword," we are not to understand it to be implied that God approved the action which they committed. He gave them a sword in the same sense as He gives it to tyrants and robbers, permitting them to execute their purposes, and using them as instruments of His justice, and as means to carry into effect the ends of His moral government. Calmet.

5. For thou hast wrought &c.] Meaning, As Thou wast the author of all the miracles done in our forefathers' days, so Thou art no less the author of those that are now to come to pass, and shall hereafter: all events succeed one another by the ordering of Thy wise providence, which has so disposed them according to Thy eternal counsel. Arnald.

10. Smite by the deceit of my lips &c.] That is, Grant success to the stratagem which I am meditating, to lead the enemy into an errour by my words, and to inspire their chief with love for me, in such a manner as may prove a snare for his destruction. It may well be asked, How could Judith beseech God to favour her in such a design, which was contrary to the laws of God, however it might be deemed fair and allowable in the opinions of those times? Certainly we cannot approve either the prayer or the action of Judith; we may commend her good intentions, and may allow that the uprightness of her design might abate much of her crime. Yet no excuse of this kind can avail to justify her. A falsehood told with so much solemnity, and carried on through her whole conversation with Holofernes, is indefensible; nor can the employment of her beauty to inflame his passion, and thereby to expose her person to his attack, admit of any justification. Calmet.

11. — thy power standeth not in multitude,] Meaning, Thou givest victory whenever Thou art pleased, without regard to the number of the combatants. Calmet.

thou art a God of the afflicted, an helper of the oppressed, an upholder of the weak, a protector of the forlorn, a saviour of them that are without hope.

12 I pray thee, I pray thee, O God of my father, and God of the inheritance of Israel, Lord of the heavens and earth, Creator of the waters, King of every creature, hear thou my prayer:

13 And make my speech and deceit to be their wound and stripe, who have purposed cruel things against thy covenant, and thy hallowed house, and against the top of Sion, and against the house of the possession of thy children.

14 And make every nation and tribe to acknowledge that thou art the God of all power and might, and that there is none other that protecteth the people of Israel but thou.

CHAP. X.

3 Judith doth set forth herself. 10 She and her maid go forth into the camp. 17 The watch take and conduct her to Holofernes.

NOW after that she had ceased to cry unto the God of Israel, and had made an end of all these words,

2 She rose where she had fallen down, and called her maid, and went down into the house, in the which she abode in the sabbath days, and in her feast days,

3 And pulled off the sackcloth which she had on, and put off the garments of her widowhood, and washed her body all over with water, and anointed herself with precious ointment, and braided the hair of her
† Gr. mitre. head, and put on a †tire upon it, and put on her garments of gladness, wherewith she was clad during the life of Manasses her husband.

4 And she took sandals upon her feet, and put about her her bracelets, and her chains, and her rings, and her earrings, and all her ornaments, and decked herself bravely, to allure the eyes of all men that should see her.

5 Then she gave her maid a bottle of wine, and a cruse of oil, and filled a bag with parched corn, and lumps of figs, and
‖ Or, wrapped, or, packed. with fine bread; so she ‖folded all these things together, and laid them upon her.

6 Thus they went forth to the gate of the city of Bethulia, and found standing there Ozias, and the ancients of the city, Chabris and Charmis.

7 And when they saw her, that her countenance was altered, and her apparel was changed, they wondered at her beauty very greatly, and said unto her,

8 The God, the God of our fathers, give thee favour, and accomplish thine enterprizes to the glory of the children of Israel, and to the exaltation of Jerusalem. Then they worshipped God.

9 And she said unto them, Command the gates of the city to be opened unto me, that I may go forth to accomplish the things whereof ye have spoken with me. So they commanded the young men to open unto her, as she had spoken.

10 And when they had done so, Judith went out, she, and her maid with her; and the men of the city looked after her, until she was gone down the mountain, and till she had passed the valley, and could see her no more.

11 Thus they went straight forth in the valley: and the first watch of the Assyrians met her,

12 And took her, and asked her, Of what people art thou? and whence comest thou? and whither goest thou? And she said, I am a woman of the Hebrews, and am fled from them: for they shall be given you to be consumed:

13 And I am coming before Holofernes the chief captain of your army, to declare words of truth; and I will shew him a way, whereby he shall go, and win all the hill country, without losing the body or life of any one of his men.

14 Now when the men heard her words, and beheld her countenance, they wondered greatly at her beauty, and said unto her,

15 Thou hast saved thy life, in that thou hast hasted to come down to the presence of our lord: now therefore come to his tent, and some of us shall conduct thee, until they have delivered thee to his hands.

16 And when thou standest before him,

Chap. X. ver. 2. — went down into the house,] She had probably been praying in "the tent upon the top of her house," mentioned at chap. viii. 5.

3. — washed her body, — and anointed herself] Such was the custom of the Jews, first to wash and then to anoint themselves. So Naomi says to Ruth, "Wash and anoint thyself," Ruth iii. 3: so also David, after the death of his child, 2 Sam. xii. 20. The anointing was applied to the head, especially on festivals and other solemnities. Of this, instances occur very frequently in Scripture. See, among other passages, Eccles. ix. 8; Luke vii. 46. Arnald.

5. — with parched corn,] See note at 2 Sam. xvii. 28.

— with fine bread;] The words in the original properly mean "pure bread;" that is, perhaps, bread unfermented and free from leaven. She seems to have taken her provisions with her, that she might not be obliged to partake of the food of the Gentiles, which the law taught her to regard as polluted and defiled. See chap. xii. 2. Arnald.

18. — to declare words of truth;] See note at chap. ix. 10.

be not afraid in thine heart, but shew unto him according to thy word; and he will entreat thee well.

17 Then they chose out of them an hundred men ‖ to accompany her and her maid; and they brought her to the tent of Holofernes.

‖ Or, and they prepared a chariot for her.

18 Then was there a concourse throughout all the camp: for her coming was noised among the tents, and they came about her, as she stood without the tent of Holofernes, till they told him of her.

19 And they wondered at her beauty, and admired the children of Israel because of her, and every one said to his neighbour, Who would despise this people, that have among them such women? surely it is not good that one man of them be left, who being let go might deceive the whole earth.

20 And they that lay near Holofernes went out, and all his servants, and they brought her into the tent.

21 Now Holofernes rested upon his bed under a canopy, which was woven with purple, and gold, and emeralds, and precious stones.

22 So they shewed him of her; and he came out before his tent with silver lamps going before him.

23 And when Judith was come before him and his servants, they all marvelled at the beauty of her countenance; and she fell down upon her face, and did reverence unto him: and his servants took her up.

CHAP. XI.

3 Holofernes asketh Judith the cause of her coming. 6 She telleth him how and when he may prevail. 20 He is much pleased with her wisdom and beauty.

THEN said Holofernes unto her, Woman, be of good comfort, fear not in thine heart: for I never hurt any that was willing to serve Nabuchodonosor, the king of all the earth.

2 Now therefore, if thy people that dwelleth in the mountains had not set light by me, I would not have lifted up my spear against them: but they have done these things to themselves.

3 But now tell me wherefore thou art fled from them, and art come unto us: for thou art come for safeguard; be of good comfort, thou shalt live this night, and hereafter:

4 For none shall hurt thee, but entreat thee well, as they do the servants of king Nabuchodonosor my lord.

5 Then Judith said unto him, Receive the words of thy servant, and suffer thine handmaid to speak in thy presence, and I will declare no lie to my lord this night.

6 And if thou wilt follow the words of thine handmaid, God will bring the thing perfectly to pass by thee; and my lord shall not fail of his purposes.

7 As Nabuchodonosor king of all the earth liveth, and as his power liveth, who hath sent thee for the upholding of every living thing: for not only men shall serve him by thee, but also the beasts of the field, and the cattle, and the fowls of the air, shall live by thy power under Nabuchodonosor and all his house.

8 For we have heard of thy wisdom and thy policies, and it is reported in all the earth, that thou only art ‖ excellent in all the kingdom, and mighty in knowledge, and wonderful in feats of war.

9 Now as concerning the matter, which Achior did speak in thy council, we have heard his words; for the men of Bethulia ‖ saved him, and he declared unto them all that he had spoken unto thee.

‖ Or, got him.

10 Therefore, O lord and governor, reject not his word; but lay it up in thine heart, for it is true: for our nation shall not be punished, neither can the sword prevail against them, except they sin against their God.

---

21. — rested upon his bed under a canopy.] We observe here an instance of the effeminate manners of warriours in the East; this description being more suited to the softness of an Eastern monarch, than to a soldier. Arnald.

22. — came out before his tent with silver lamps &c.] Their tents generally consisted of an inner apartment, and an antichamber; and by his coming out before his tent, it is probably meant that he came out into his antichamber to receive Judith. The silver lamps were carried before him, either because it was always customary to carry fire before him, as it was before the kings of Persia; or rather, because the light of the lamps was wanted, in consequence of the darkness of the inner tent. Calmet.

23. — she fell down upon her face,] This act of pretended reverence was an artifice to work upon his vanity, for the purpose of recommending herself to his favour, and thereby drawing him into her snare. Arnald.

Chap. XI. ver. 6. — God will bring the thing perfectly to pass] That is, God will execute what He has decreed and purposed, and will grant a complete victory. The expression seems to be equivocal. Holofernes probably understood her to speak of a victory to himself over the Israelites, while Judith meant that the victory should be obtained over him. Arnald.

7. As Nabuchodonosor — liveth,] This custom of swearing by the life of their kings, or of some person of high rank and dignity, was usual amongst Eastern nations. Thus Joseph swears by the life of Pharaoh, Gen. xlii. 15; Abner by the life of Saul, 1 Sam. xvii. 55. Calmet.

10. — our nation shall not be punished, — except &c.] This was

11 And now, that my lord be not defeated and frustrate of his purpose, even death is now fallen upon them, and their sin hath overtaken them, wherewith they will provoke their God to anger, whensoever they shall do that which is not fit to be done:

12 For their victuals fail them, and all their water is scant, and they have determined to lay hands upon their cattle, and purposed to consume all those things, that God hath forbidden them to eat by his laws:

13 And are resolved to spend the firstfruits of the corn, and the tenths of wine and oil, which they had sanctified, and reserved for the priests that serve in Jerusalem before the face of our God; the which things it is not lawful for any of the people so much as to touch with their hands.

14 For they have sent some to Jerusalem, because they also that dwell there have done the like, to bring them a licence from the senate.

15 Now when they shall bring them word, they will forthwith do it, and they shall be given thee to be destroyed the same day.

16 Wherefore I thine handmaid, knowing all this, am fled from their presence; and God hath sent me to work things with thee, whereat all the earth shall be astonished, and whosoever shall hear it.

17 For thy servant is religious, and serveth the God of heaven day and night: now therefore, my lord, I will remain with thee, and thy servant will go out by night into the valley, and I will pray unto God, and he will tell me when they have committed their sins:

18 And I will come and shew it unto thee: then thou shalt go forth with all thine army, and there shall be none of them that shall resist thee.

19 And I will lead thee through the midst of Judea, until thou come before Jerusalem; and I will set thy throne in the midst thereof; and thou shalt drive them as sheep that have no shepherd, and a dog shall not so much as ‖ open his mouth at thee: for ‖ these things were told me according to my foreknowledge, and they were declared unto me, and I am sent to tell thee.

‖ Or, to bark.

‖ Or, I have told them

20 Then her words pleased Holofernes and all his servants; and they marvelled at her wisdom, and said,

21 There is not such a woman from one end of the earth to the other, both for beauty of face, and wisdom of words.

22 Likewise Holofernes said unto her, God hath done well to send thee before the people, that strength might be in our hands, and destruction upon them that lightly regard my lord.

23 And now thou art both beautiful in thy countenance, and witty in thy words: surely if thou do as thou hast spoken, thy God shall be my God, and thou shalt dwell in the house of king Nabuchodonosor, and shall be renowned through the whole earth.

CHAP. XII.

2 Judith will not eat of Holofernes' meat. 7 She tarried three days in the camp, and every night went forth to pray. 13 Bagoas doth move her to be merry with Holofernes, 20 who for joy of her company drunk much.

THEN he commanded to bring her in where his plate was set; and bade that they should prepare for her of his own meats, and that she should drink of his own wine.

an observation, the truth of which the Jews experienced in every stage of their state, from their first becoming a nation to their ceasing to be so, by the captivity of the twelve tribes; their obedience or disobedience respectively ruined or saved them. Arnald.

11. — even death is now fallen upon them, &c.] There is some obscurity in this and the following verses, as they stand in our translation. The drift of Judith's speech is to the following effect: The elders of Bethulia have judged it already allowable, and in case of necessity lawful, to eat what at other times is forbidden by the law; for form's sake indeed they have sent deputies to Jerusalem for a dispensation from the Jewish Sanhedrim, of which from their own practice in a similar case they are assured. But even now the inhabitants of Bethulia are guilty, and will suffer as such for their guilty intention. Judith's design was without doubt to impose on Holofernes, as is plain from chap. ix. 10. 13; and her story was framed to agree with what Achior had before told him, that if the Hebrews had sinned, or should sin against their God, he might easily overcome them. She now shews that there was such sin in their hearts, as would stir up the anger of their God the moment they should commit it; that the execution of it waited only the return of the messengers with the license instantly expected; that they would then be immediately given up to destruction, and even Jerusalem itself and all Judea, as the sin would hereby become general, be a prey and spoil unto him. Arnald.

19. — I will lead thee through the midst of Judea,] Her reserved meaning is, that the head of Holofernes should be carried in triumph through Judea, while he understands her to signify, that he himself was to go thither in triumph. Arnald.

—— a dog shall not so much as &c.] A proverbial expression, taken from Exod. xi. 7. Calmet.

23. — thy God shall be my God.] Probably Holofernes was not in earnest in saying this, but only intended to flatter Judith, perceiving that she was a woman of piety, and attached to her religion; and he hoped in this manner to gain her affections. Calmet.

Chap. XII. ver. 2. — I will not eat thereof, lest there be an offence:] That is, lest I draw upon me the indignation of God; shall be made for me of the things that I have brought.

3 Then Holofernes said unto her, If thy provision should fail, how should we give thee the like? for there be none with us of thy nation.

4 Then said Judith unto him, As thy soul liveth, my lord, thine handmaid shall not spend those things that I have, before the Lord work by mine hand the things that he hath determined.

5 Then the servants of Holofernes brought her into the tent, and she slept till midnight, and she arose when it was toward the morning watch,

6 And sent to Holofernes, saying, Let my lord now command that thine handmaid may go forth unto prayer.

7 Then Holofernes commanded his guard that they should not stay her: thus she abode in the camp three days, and went out in the night into the valley of Bethulia, and washed herself in a fountain of water by the camp.

8 And when she came out, she besought the Lord God of Israel to direct her way to the raising up of the children of her people.

9 So she came in clean, and remained in the tent, until she did eat her meat at evening.

10 And in the fourth day Holofernes made a feast to his own servants only, and called none of the officers to the banquet.

11 Then said he to Bagoas the eunuch, who had charge over all that he had, Go now, and persuade this Hebrew woman which is with thee, that she come unto us, and eat and drink with us.

12 For, lo, it will be a shame for our person, if we shall let such a woman go, not having had her company; for if we draw her not unto us, she will laugh us to scorn.

13 Then went Bagoas from the presence of Holofernes, and came to her, and he said, Let not this fair damsel fear to come to my lord, and to be honoured in his presence, and drink wine, and be merry with us, and be made this day as one of the daughters of the Assyrians, which serve in the house of Nabuchodonosor.

14 Then said Judith unto him, Who am I now, that I should gainsay my lord? surely whatsoever pleaseth him I will do speedily, and it shall be my joy unto the day of my death.

15 So she arose, and decked herself with her apparel and all her woman's attire, and her maid went and laid soft skins on the ground for her over against Holofernes, which she had received of Bagoas for her daily use, that she might sit and eat upon them.

16 Now when Judith came in and sat down, Holofernes his heart was ravished with her, and his mind was moved, and he desired greatly her company; for he waited a time to deceive her, from the day that he had seen her.

lest I incur guilt and blame by slighting the institutions of my forefathers. The Divine law had not forbidden them the use of every thing belonging to Gentiles; but she seems to have used the caution here related on the present occasion, either in consequence of prohibitions imposed by the traditions of the Jews, or from some peculiar scrupulousness of mind, or from the fear of giving offence to others, or from the circumstance of idolatrous invocations and prayers having been offered up over the meats which were served up to Holofernes. Daniel is similarly scrupulous, Dan. i. 8, 12; and also Tobit, chap. i. 11. See also 2 Macc. vi. 21—23. Calmet.

6. — may go forth unto prayer.] It was customary to retire apart for prayer, in order that it might be performed with greater earnestness and without interruption; but the true reason of Judith's proceeding on this occasion seems to have been founded on artifice. By this pretext she induced Holofernes to think, that what was contrived for his ruin was most advantageous to his designs; and under the appearance of praying for victory to him in his undertaking, she opened a way to triumph more securely over the great enemy of her country. Arnald.

7. — washed herself in a fountain of water] Purification, or washing the hands and body before prayers and sacrifices offered to the Deity, was a very ancient religious ceremony, as well among the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans, as among the Jews. The Jews even to this day wash their hands before they enter into the synagogue to pray; and it appears from Mark vii. 2—4, that, when they returned from the market, or other publick place, they performed this ceremony with great exactness, to purify themselves from any defilement which they might have contracted among strangers. With the same view, it is probable, Judith, remaining all day in the camp of the Assyrians, took the opportunity of the night to wash herself, that she might be purified from any defilement which she might have contracted by mixing amongst the heathens. Arnald.

9. — until she did eat her meat at evening.] Thus she fasted during the whole day, for the purpose of giving effect to her prayers, by conciliating the favour of God. Calmet.

10. — and called none of the officers] In order that he might be more at liberty, and might have no persons to witness his intemperate conduct. Calmet.

11. — Bagoas the eunuch,] The name of "Bagoas" was very common, as applied generally to an eunuch. Pliny mentions, that at Babylon eunuchs were generally called by this name: Quintus Curtius calls Alexander's eunuch by the same: Josephus mentions, that Herod had one called by the same title; and indeed it often signified generally a chief officer in the prince's court. Calmet, Arnald.

15. — laid soft skins on the ground]. It was the custom to spread skins or carpets on the ground, to prevent injury from the damp, when they sat or lay down. The modern Arabs sit in this manner on carpets in their tents. Sir J. Chardin says, that it is now common in Persia to lay first on the ground a covering of felt or skin, and then, over that, to place a rich carpet. Harmer.

—— that she might sit] The Greek word properly means, "that she might recline or lie down." Arnald. See note at Tobit ii. 1.

17 Then said Holofernes unto her, Drink now, and be merry with us.

18 So Judith said, I will drink now, my lord, because my life is magnified in me this day more than all the days since I was born.

19 Then she took and ate and drank before him what her maid had prepared.

20 And Holofernes took great delight in her, and drank much more wine than he had drunk at any time in one day since he was born.

CHAP. XIII.

2 Judith is left alone with Holofernes in his tent. 4 She prayeth God to give her strength. 8 She cut off his head while he slept, 10 and returned with it to Bethulia. 17 They saw it, and commend her.

NOW when the evening was come, his servants made haste to depart, and Bagoas shut his tent without, and dismissed the waiters from the presence of his lord; and they went to their beds: for they were all weary, because the feast had been long.

2 And Judith was left alone in the tent, and Holofernes lying along upon his bed: for he was filled with [a] wine.

[a] Eccl^us. 31. 20, 25.

3 Now Judith had commanded her maid to stand without her bedchamber, and to wait for her coming forth, as she did daily: for she said she would go forth to her prayers, and she spake to Bagoas according to the same purpose.

4 So all went forth, and none was left in the bedchamber, neither little nor great. Then Judith, standing by his bed, said in her heart, O Lord God of all power, look at this present upon the works of mine hands for the exaltation of Jerusalem.

5 For now is the time to help thine inheritance, and to execute mine enterprizes to the destruction of the enemies which are risen against us.

6 Then she came to the pillar of the bed, which was at Holofernes' head, and took down his fauchion from thence,

7 And approached to his bed, and took hold of the hair of his head, and said, Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, this day.

8 And she smote twice upon his neck with all her might, and she took away his head from him,

9 And tumbled his body down from the bed, and pulled down the canopy from the pillars; and anon after she went forth, and gave Holofernes his head to her maid;

10 And she put it in her bag of meat: so they twain went together according to their custom unto prayer: and when they passed the camp, they compassed the valley, and went up the mountain of Bethulia, and came to the gates thereof.

11 Then said Judith afar off to the watchmen at the gate, Open, open now the gate: God, even our God, is with us, to shew his power yet in Jerusalem, and his forces against the enemy, as he hath even done this day.

12 Now when the men of her city heard her voice, they made haste to go down to the gate of their city, and they called the elders of the city.

13 And then they ran all together, both small and great, for it was strange unto them that she was come: so they opened the gate, and received them, and made a fire for a light, and stood round about them.

14 Then she said to them with a loud voice, Praise, praise God, praise God, I say, for he hath not taken away his mercy from the house of Israel, but hath destroyed our enemies by mine hands this night.

15 So she took the head out of the bag, and shewed it, and said unto them, Behold the head of Holofernes, the chief captain of the army of Assur, and behold the canopy, wherein he did lie in his drunkenness; and the Lord hath smitten him by the hand of a woman.

16 As the Lord liveth, who hath kept me in my way that I went, my countenance hath deceived him to his destruction, and yet hath he not committed sin with me, to defile and shame me.

17 Then all the people were wonderfully astonished, and bowed themselves, and worshipped God, and said with one accord, Blessed be thou, O our God, which hast

Chap. XIII. ver. 3. — and to wait for her coming forth,] It seems that her attendant was waiting at her tent door, in order to attend her out of the camp to prayers, as on former nights: for it does not appear from the whole history that Judith had communicated her design to her woman, but rather that she had taken on herself the whole risk. Calmet.

this day brought to nought the enemies of thy people.

18 Then said Ozias unto her, O daughter, blessed art thou of the most high God above all the women upon the earth; and blessed be the Lord God, which hath created the heavens and the earth, which hath directed thee to the cutting off of the head of the chief of our enemies.

19 For this thy confidence shall not depart from the heart of men, which remember the power of God for ever.

20 And God turn these things to thee for a perpetual praise, to visit thee in good things, because thou hast not spared thy life for the affliction of our nation, but hast revenged our ruin, walking a straight way before our God. And all the people said, So be it, so be it.

CHAP. XIV.

Achior heareth Judith shew what she had done, and is circumcised. 11 The head of Holofernes is hanged up. 15 He is found dead, and much lamented.

THEN said Judith unto them, Hear me now, my brethren, and take this * head, and hang it upon the highest place of your walls. * 2 Mac. 15. 34.

2 And so soon as the morning shall appear, and the sun shall come forth upon the earth, take ye every one his weapons, and go forth every valiant man out of the city, and set ye a captain over them, as though ye would go down into the field toward the watch of the Assyrians; but go not down.

3 Then they shall take their armour, and shall go into their camp, and raise up the captains of the army of Assur, and they shall run to the tent of Holofernes, but shall not find him: then fear shall fall upon them, and they shall flee before your face.

4 So ye, and all that inhabit the coast of Israel, shall pursue them, and overthrow them as they go.

5 But before ye do these things, call me Achior the Ammonite, that he may see and know him that despised the house of Israel, and that sent him to us, as it were to his death.

6 Then they called Achior out of the house of Ozias; and when he was come, and saw the head of Holofernes in a man's hand in the assembly of the people, he fell down on his face, and his spirit failed.

7 But when they had recovered him, he fell at Judith's feet, and reverenced her, and said, Blessed art thou in all the tabernacle of Juda, and in all nations, which hearing thy name shall be astonished.

8 Now therefore tell me all the things that thou hast done in these days. Then Judith declared unto him in the midst of the people all that she had done, from the day that she went forth until that hour she spake unto them.

9 And when she had left off speaking, the people shouted with a loud voice, and made a joyful noise in their city.

10 And when Achior had seen all that the God of Israel had done, he believed in God greatly, and circumcised the flesh of his foreskin, and was joined unto the house of Israel unto this day.

11 And as soon as the morning arose, they hanged the head of Holofernes upon the wall, and every man took his weapons, and they went forth by bands unto the ‖ straits of the mountain. ‖ Or, ascents.

12 But when the Assyrians saw them, they sent to their leaders, which came to their captains and tribunes, and to every one of their rulers.

13 So they came to Holofernes' tent, and said to him that had the charge of all his things, Waken now our lord: for the slaves have been bold to come down against us to battle, that they may be utterly destroyed.

14 Then went in Bagoas, and knocked at the door of the tent; for he thought that he had slept with Judith.

15 But because none answered, he opened it, and went into the bedchamber, and found him cast upon the floor dead, and his head was taken from him.

16 ‖ Therefore he cried with a loud voice, with weeping, and sighing, and a mighty cry, and rent his garments. ‖ Then.

17 After he went into the tent where Judith lodged: and when he found her not, he leaped out to the people, and cried,

19. For this thy confidence shall not depart &c.] That is, As long as mention shall be made of God's omnipotence, so long and often shall they instance it in this single act, the deliverance of His people by one single woman, effected through the mighty prevalence of her faith. Arnald.

Chap. XIV. ver. 10. — and circumcised the flesh &c.] Meaning, that he became a convert to the Jewish religion. Arnald.

18. — the slaves] They call them so, as an expression of contempt.

18 These slaves have dealt treacherously; one woman of the Hebrews hath brought shame upon the house of king Nabuchodonosor: for, behold, Holofernes lieth upon the ground without a head.

19 When the captains of the Assyrians' army heard these words, they rent their coats, and their minds were wonderfully troubled, and there was a cry and a very great noise throughout the camp.

CHAP. XV.

1 The Assyrians are chased and slain. 8 The high priest cometh to see Judith. 11 The stuff of Holofernes is given to Judith. 13 The women crown her with a garland.

AND when they that were in the tents heard, they were astonished at the thing that was done.

2 And fear and trembling fell upon them, so that there was no man that durst abide in the sight of his neighbour, but rushing out all together, they fled into every way of the plain, and of the hill country.

3 They also that had camped in the mountains round about Bethulia fled away. Then the children of Israel, every one that was a warrior among them, rushed out upon them.

4 Then sent Ozias to Betomasthem, and to Bebai, and Chobai, and Cola, and to all the coasts of Israel, such as should tell the things that were done, and that all should rush forth upon their enemies to destroy them.

5 Now when the children of Israel heard it, they all fell upon them with one consent, and slew them unto Chobai: likewise also they that came from Jerusalem, and from all the hill country, (for men had told them what things were done in the camp of their enemies,) and they that were in Galaad, and in Galilee, ‖ chased them with a great slaughter, until they were past Damascus and the borders thereof.

6 And the residue, that dwelt at Bethulia, fell upon the camp of Assur, and spoiled them, and were greatly enriched.

7 And the children of Israel that returned from the slaughter had that which remained; and the villages and the cities, that were in the mountains and in the plain, gat many spoils: for the multitude was very great.

8 Then Joacim the high priest, and the ancients of the children of Israel that dwelt in Jerusalem, came to behold the good things that God had shewed to Israel, and to see Judith, and to salute her.

9 And when they came unto her, they blessed her with one accord, and said unto her, Thou art the exaltation of Jerusalem, thou art the great glory of Israel, thou art the great rejoicing of our nation:

10 Thou hast done all these things by thine hand: thou hast done much good to Israel, and God is pleased therewith: blessed be thou of the Almighty Lord for evermore. And all the people said, So be it.

11 And the people spoiled the camp the space of thirty days: and they gave unto Judith Holofernes his tent, and all his plate, and beds, and vessels, and all his stuff: and she took it, and laid it on her mule; and made ready her carts, and laid them thereon.

12 Then all the women of Israel ran together to see her, and blessed her, and made a dance among them for her: and she took branches in her hand, and gave also to the women that were with her.

13 And they put a garland of olive upon her and her maid that was with her, and she went before all the people in the dance, leading all the women: and all the men of Israel followed in their armour with garlands, and with songs in their mouths.

CHAP. XVI.

1 The song of Judith. 19 She dedicateth the stuff of Holofernes. 23 She died at Bethulia a widow of great honour. 24 All Israel did lament her death.

THEN Judith began to sing this thanksgiving in all Israel, and all the people sang after her ‖ this song of praise.

2 And Judith said, Begin unto my God with timbrels, sing unto my Lord with cymbals: tune unto him a ‖ new psalm: ‡ exalt him, and call upon his name.

‡ Or, psalm and praise.

Chap. XV. ver. 4. — to Betomasthem,] Perhaps the same as Betsames or Bethshemeth. The other places here mentioned are wholly unknown to us. Calmet.

10. — blessed be thou &c.] In a similar manner to this, Deborah the prophetess called Jael "blessed above women" for accomplishing the destruction of Sisera, Judg. v. 24. Arnald.

11. — spoiled the camp the space of thirty days:] Perhaps, considering the largeness of the camp of the Assyrians, the many valuable things which might be concealed in their flight, the time it would cost the Bethulians to search diligently, and to bring the spoils home to be distributed equally amongst the people, and according to the prescription of the law, Numb. xxxi. 27, this space of thirty days may not be deemed more than sufficient. Calmet, Stockhouse.

13. — a garland of olive] As the olive was a tree in much esteem among the ancients, its boughs were used on certain festival occasions. It was deemed by them an emblem of peace, and as such, it was now very pertinently applied to distinguish and adorn her who was on this occasion the happy procurer of it to the Israelites. Arnald.

3 For God breaketh the battles: for among the camps in the midst of the people he hath delivered me out of the hands of them that persecuted me.

4 Assur came out of the mountains from the north, he came with ten thousands of his army, the [a] multitude whereof stopped the torrents, and their horsemen have covered the hills.

[a] Chap. 2. 19.

5 He bragged that he would burn up my borders, and kill my young men with the sword, and dash the sucking children against the ground, and make mine infants as a prey, and my virgins as a spoil.

6 But the Almighty Lord hath disappointed them by the hand of a woman.

7 For the mighty one did not fall by the young men, neither did the sons of the Titans smite him, nor high giants set upon him: but Judith the daughter of Merari weakened him with the beauty of her countenance.

8 For she put off the garment of her widowhood for the exaltation of those that were oppressed in Israel, and anointed her face with ointment, and bound her hair in a † tire, and took a linen garment to deceive him.

† Or, mitre.

9 Her sandals ravished his eyes, her beauty took his mind prisoner, and the fauchion passed through his neck.

10 The Persians quaked at her boldness, and the Medes were ‖ daunted at her hardiness.

11 Then my afflicted shouted for joy, and my weak ones cried aloud; but ‖ they were astonished: these lifted up their voices, but they were overthrown.

‖ the Assyrians.

12 The sons of the damsels have pierced them through, and wounded them as fugitives' children: they perished by the battle of the Lord.

‖ Or, a song of praise.

13 I will sing unto the Lord ‖ a new song: O Lord, thou art great and glorious, wonderful in strength, and invincible.

14 Let all creatures serve thee: for thou spakest, and they were made, thou didst send forth thy spirit, and it created them, and there is none that can resist thy voice.

15 For the mountains shall be moved from their foundations with the waters, the rocks shall melt as wax at thy presence: yet thou art merciful to them that fear thee.

16 For all sacrifice is too little for a sweet savour unto thee, and all the fat is not sufficient for thy burnt offering: but he that feareth the Lord is great at all times.

17 Woe to the nations that rise up against my kindred! the Lord Almighty will take vengeance of them in the day of judgment, in putting fire and worms in their flesh; and they shall feel them, and weep for ever.

18 Now as soon as they entered into Jerusalem, they worshipped the Lord; and as soon as the people were purified, they offered their burnt offerings, and their free offerings, and their gifts.

19 Judith also dedicated all the stuff of Holofernes, which the people had given her, and gave the canopy, which she had taken out of his bedchamber, for a gift unto the Lord.

20 So the people continued feasting in Jerusalem before the sanctuary for the space of three months, and Judith remained with them.

21 After this time every one returned to his own inheritance, and Judith went to Bethulia, and remained in her own possession, and was in her time honourable in all the country.

22 And many desired her, but none knew her all the days of her life, after that

Chap. XVI. ver. 4. — came out of the mountains from the north,] Though Assyria, and the other provinces beyond the Euphrates, were not directly north of Judea, yet the Prophets usually describe their armies as coming from the north; the reason of which seems to have been, that they entered Judea by the defiles of the mountains of Libanus and Hermon, which lay north of Judea. Arnald.

—— the multitude whereof stopped the torrents,] The Hebrews express torrents and vallies by the same word; so that the sense here may be, that the Assyrian armies covered all the vallies. Calmet.

7. — neither did the sons of the Titans] The Titans were famous giants in the mythological fables of antiquity. The person who translated this book of Judith into Greek was probably familiar with this name, as a common name of giants, and used it in this passage accordingly. Calmet.

9. Her sandals ravished his eyes,] The beauty of the feet was discovered by the shape and size of the ancient sandals, which were made extremely rich, and adorned with jewels. See Isa. iii. 18; Cant. vii. 1. Arnald.

10. The Persians — the Medes] It hence appears, that there were some of both these nations in the army of Holofernes. Perhaps these had become subject to Nabuchodonosor after his victory over king Arphaxad, or Phraortes, chap. i. 13. Calmet.

17. — in putting fire and worms in their flesh;] The general meaning is, they shall be a lasting monument of God's justice, like Sodom, set forth for an example of the Divine vengeance, and of that eternal fire which is prepared for the ungodly: see Mark ix. 44; Ecclus. vii. 17. We meet with an expression of the like import at Is. lxvi. 24. Arnald.

19. — dedicated all the stuff — unto the Lord.] As an acknowledgment that the victory proceeded from Him. We have frequent instances in Scripture of the spoils of the enemy being dedicated to God. See 1 Sam. xxi. 9; 2 Sam. viii. 12, &c. Arnald.

Manasses her husband was dead, and was gathered to his people.

23 But she increased more and more in honour, and waxed old in her husband's house, being an hundred and five years old, and made her maid free; so she died in Bethulia: and they buried her in the ‖ cave of her husband Manasses.

24 And the house of Israel lamented her [b] seven days: and before she died, she did distribute her goods to all them that were nearest of kindred to Manasses her husband, and to them that were the nearest of her kindred.

[b] Gen. 50. 10.

25 And there was none that made the children of Israel any more afraid in the days of Judith, nor a long time after her death.

24. — seven days:] The accustomed time of mourning for the dead. See Ecclus. xxii. 12; Gen. l. 10; 1 Sam. xxxi. 13.

25. — none that made — Israel — afraid &c.] It seems probable that we should not understand this in a literal sense, but consider it as a general description of the effects of Judith's heroism; for there was no period of uninterrupted peace in the Jewish history, of so long continuance as that here described. Dr. Grey.

The history represents Judith as a woman of great courage, but it no where intimates that she was without faults. The manner of her preparation for her enterprise, and the success which attended it, may make us presume that its design was originally from God; but then the continued train of falsehood and dissimulation, with which it was carried on, must needs persuade us, that the means of conducting it were left to the woman, who has given on this occasion a remarkable specimen of sagacity and artifice. Stackhouse.

THE REST OF THE CHAPTERS

OF THE

BOOK OF ESTHER,

WHICH ARE FOUND NEITHER IN THE HEBREW, NOR IN THE CHALDEE.

INTRODUCTION.

THE chapters entitled "The rest of the chapters of the Book of Esther" are not extant in the Hebrew nor in the Chaldee language, but only in the Greek and Latin copies. It is at least very doubtful whether they ever existed in the Hebrew language; it is certain, that they never were admitted into the canon of the Hebrew Scriptures. They appear to have been additions subsequently made in various parts of the Greek copies of the canonical book of Esther, by some person who was desirous of giving embellishment to the history, and who inserted in the body of the work such traditionary circumstances as his inquiry could furnish. It is manifest, on considering the canonical book, that it is a complete and perfect work; and these Apocryphal parts, which are introduced into the Greek copies, will appear to those who take the pains to examine them, to be superfluous and cumbrous additions. They are written in a different style from that of the authentick chapters, and in part consist of particulars contained in them. The first chapter, which in the Greek copies is annexed to the tenth of the canonical chapters, consists of an interpretation of a pretended dream of Mordecai, which contains some fanciful conceits, and was furnished probably by the same person that fabricated the dream in the following chapter. The intimation contained in the first verse of the second or eleventh chapter, was possibly written by some Jew of Alexandria; it was not in the ancient Italick version. The dream which is related in this eleventh chapter, and which in the Greek is placed before the canonical part, is evidently the reverie of some inventive writer; and was afterwards prefixed to the work. It does not form a proper introduction to the book; besides, in the fifth verse of the second canonical chapter, Mordecai is introduced as a person not before mentioned; his genealogy and other particulars respecting him are described in that and the succeeding verse, with a minuteness which must have been quite redundant, if the second verse of the eleventh chapter had been authentick. The account of the devices, and of the discovery of the two eunuchs who conspired against the life of Artaxerxes, is a repetition, with some alterations, of what is related in the second chapter of the authentick part, Esther ii. 21—23, and could not properly be prefixed (as it is in the Greek) to the canonical book, which opens the history as if nothing had been previously communicated. The sixth or fifteenth chapter contains a description of Esther's appearance before the king, and reception by him, which is borrowed from the fifth chapter of the genuine history, and embellished with some extraneous particulars. So likewise the prayers of Mordecai and Esther, contained in the thirteenth and fourteenth chapters, as well as the letter in the thirteenth chapter, and that in the sixteenth, which concludes the Apocryphal book, are all obviously fictitious inventions designed by some rhetorical writer to decorate and complete the history. Our Church judiciously adheres to the chapters which are contained in the Hebrew: which are indisputably authentick, and furnish an entire and valuable history. The adventitious parts are however suffered to continue in our Bibles as profitable in a subordinate degree. They deserve not to be incorporated with the genuine history, though they illustrate the characters, and dilate on the virtues displayed for our instruction by the sacred writer. Dr. Gray.

Part of the Tenth Chapter after the Greek.

5 Mardocheus remembereth and expoundeth his dream of the river and the two dragons.

THEN Mardocheus said, God hath done these things.

5 For I remember a dream which I saw concerning these matters, and nothing thereof hath failed.

6 A little fountain became a river, and there was light, and the sun, and much water: this river is Esther, whom the king married, and made queen:

7 And the two dragons are I and Aman.

8 And the nations were those that were assembled to destroy the name of the Jews:

9 And my nation is this Israel, which cried to God, and were saved: for the Lord hath saved his people, and the Lord hath delivered us from all those evils, and God hath wrought signs and great wonders, which have not been done among the Gentiles.

10 Therefore hath he made two lots,

Chap. X. ver. 4. — Mardocheus] This is the Greek mode of expressing the name of Mordecai, as it occurs in the genuine book of Esther.

7. — Aman.] Or Haman, as the name occurs in the genuine book of Esther.

one for the people of God, and another for all the Gentiles.

11 And these two lots came at the hour, and time, and day of judgment, before God among all nations.

12 So God remembered his people, and justified his inheritance.

13 Therefore those days shall be unto them in the month Adar, the fourteenth and fifteenth day of the same month, with an assembly, and joy, and with gladness before God, according to the generations for ever among his people.

CHAP. XI.

2 The stock and quality of Mardocheus. 6 He dreameth of two dragons coming forth to fight, 10 and of a little fountain, which became a great water.

IN the fourth year of the reign of Ptolemeus and Cleopatra, Dositheus, who said he was a priest and Levite, and Ptolemeus his son, brought this epistle of Phurim, which they said was the same, and that Lysimachus the son of Ptolemeus, that was in Jerusalem, had interpreted it.

2 In the second year of the reign of Artaxerxes the great, in the first day of the month Nisan, Mardocheus the son of Jairus, the son of Semei, the son of Cisai, of the tribe of Benjamin, had a dream;

3 Who was a Jew, and dwelt in the city of Susa, a great man, being a servitor in the king's court.

4 He was also one of the captives, which Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon carried from Jerusalem with Jechonias king of Judea; and this was his dream:

5 Behold a noise of a tumult, with thunder, and earthquakes, and uproar in the land:

6 And, behold, two great dragons came forth ready to fight, and their cry was great.

7 And at their cry all nations were prepared to battle, that they might fight against the righteous people.

8 And lo a day of darkness and obscurity, tribulation and anguish, affliction and great uproar, upon earth.

9 And the whole righteous nation was troubled, fearing their own evils, and were ready to perish.

10 Then they cried unto God, and upon their cry, as it were from a little fountain, was made a great flood, even much water.

11 The light and the sun rose up, and the lowly were exalted, and devoured the glorious.

12 Now when Mardocheus, who had seen this dream, and what God had determined to do, was awake, he bare this dream in mind, and until night by all means was desirous to know it.

CHAP. XII.

2 The conspiracy of the two eunuchs is discovered by Mardocheus, 5 for which he is entertained by the king, and rewarded.

AND Mardocheus took his rest in the court with Gabatha and Tharra, the two eunuchs of the king, and keepers of the palace.

2 [1] And he heard their devices, and searched out their purposes, and learned that they were about to lay hands upon Artaxerxes the king; and so he certified the king of them. [1] Esth. 21. & 6.

3 Then the king examined the two eunuchs, and after that they had confessed it, they were strangled.

4 And the king made a record of these things, and Mardocheus also wrote thereof.

5 So the king commanded Mardocheus to serve in the court, and for this he rewarded him.

6 Howbeit Aman the son of Amadathus the Agagite, who was in great honour with the king, sought to molest Mardocheus and his people because of the eunuchs of the king.

12. — and justified his inheritance.] In the Latin copies, "and had compassion on His inheritance." Calmet.

Chap. XI. ver. 1. — of the reign of Ptolemeus and Cleopatra,— this epistle of Phurim,] By the epistle of Phurim or Purim, seems clearly to be meant the book of Esther, which gives the history and the occasion of the feast of Purim or lots, Esth. ix. It has been doubted, who is the Ptolemy here mentioned. Some suppose to be meant Ptolemy Philometor, who shewed peculiar regard to the Jews, as also did Cleopatra his queen, on which account she may be mentioned here, contrary to the custom of the Hebrews, who seldom mention the names of females in assigning dates. But this Ptolemy did not live till some time after the Greek translation of the Scriptures, called the Septuagint, was completed. Others conceive that Ptolemy Philadelphus is meant in the seventh year of whose reign it is supposed that the Septuagint version was executed. Huetius thinks, that the translation by Lysimachus, here mentioned, was executed before the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus, and that the seventy-two translators adopted his work into their translation of the Scriptures. Calmet. Dr. Gray.

—— Lysimachus] He was possibly an Hellenistical Jew residing at Jerusalem. Dr. Gray.

2. — of Artaxerxes the great,] Called Ahasuerus at Esth. i. 1. See the preface to the canonical book of Esther.

3. — in the city of Susa,] See note at Nehem. i. 1.

Chap. XII. ver. 1. — Gabatha and Tharra,] Their names are given Bigthan or Bigthana and Teresh, at Esth. ii. 21; vi. 2.

CHAP. XIII.

1 The copy of the king's letters to destroy the Jews.
6 The prayer of Mardocheus for them.

Joseph. Antiq. lib. 11. cap. 6.

THE copy of the letters was this: The great king Artaxerxes writeth these things to the princes and governors that are under him from India unto Ethiopia, in an hundred and seven and twenty provinces.

2 After that I became lord over many nations, and had dominion over the whole world, not lifted up with presumption of my authority, but carrying myself alway with equity and mildness, I purposed to settle my subjects continually in a quiet
‖ Or, mild. life, and making my kingdom ‖ peaceable, and open for passage to the utmost coasts, to renew peace, which is desired of all men.

3 Now when I asked my counsellers how this might be brought to pass, Aman, that excelled in wisdom among us, and was approved for his constant good will and stedfast fidelity, and had the honour of the second place in the kingdom,

4 Declared unto us, that in all nations throughout the world there was scattered a certain malicious people, that had laws contrary to all nations, and continually despised the commandments of kings, so as the uniting of our kingdoms, honourably
‖ Or, be settled. intended by us, cannot ‖ go forward.

5 Seeing then we understand that this people alone is continually in opposition unto all men, differing in the strange manner of their laws, and evil affected to our state, working all the mischief they can, that our kingdom may not be firmly established:

6 Therefore have we commanded, that all they that are signified in writing unto you by Aman, who is ordained over the
‖ Or, second from us. affairs, and is ‖ next unto us, shall all, with their wives and children, be utterly destroyed by the sword of their enemies, without all mercy and pity, the fourteenth day of the twelfth month Adar of this present year:

7 That they, who of old and now also are malicious, may in one day with violence go into the grave, and so ever hereafter cause our affairs to be well settled, and without trouble.

8 Then Mardocheus thought upon all the works of the Lord, and made his prayer unto him,

9 Saying, O Lord, Lord, the King Almighty: for the whole world is in thy power, and if thou hast appointed to save Israel, there is no man that can gainsay thee:

10 For thou hast made heaven and earth, and all the wondrous things under the heaven.

11 Thou art Lord of all things, and there is no man that can resist thee, which art the Lord.

12 Thou knowest all things, and thou knowest, Lord, that it was neither in contempt nor pride, nor for any desire of glory, that I did not bow down to proud Aman.

13 For I could have been content with good will for the salvation of Israel to kiss the soles of his feet.

14 But I did this, that I might not prefer the glory of man above the glory of God: neither will I worship any but thee, O God, neither will I do it in pride.

15 And now, O Lord God and King, spare thy people: for their eyes are upon us to bring us to nought; yea, they desire to destroy the inheritance, that hath been thine from the beginning.

16 Despise not the portion, which thou hast delivered out of Egypt for thine own self.

17 Hear my prayer, and be merciful unto thine inheritance: turn our sorrow into joy, that we may live, O Lord, and praise thy name: and ‖ destroy not the mouths of ‖ Or, shut, or, stop not. them that praise thee, O Lord.

18 All Israel in like manner cried most † Gr. mightily. † earnestly unto the Lord, because their death was before their eyes.

CHAP. XIV.

The prayer of queen Esther for herself and her people.

QUEEN Esther also, being in fear of death, resorted unto the Lord:

2 And laid away her glorious apparel, and put on the garments of anguish and mourning: and instead of precious ointments, she covered her head with ashes and dung, and she humbled her body greatly, and all the places of her joy she filled with her torn hair.

Chap. XIII. ver. 6. — the fourteenth day of the twelfth month Adar] The thirteenth day is mentioned at Esth. iii. 12; viii. 12; ix. 1. We must either suppose an errour to have been made in this Apocryphal book, or else both the thirteenth and the fourteenth to have been fixed upon for the days of the slaughter. Calmet.

Chap. XIV. ver. 2. — all the places of her joy] In the Latin copies, "all the places in which she was wont to delight." Calmet.

3 And she prayed unto the Lord God of Israel, saying, O my Lord, thou only art our King: help me, desolate woman, which have no helper but thee:

[a] 1 Sam. 28. 21. Job 13. 14. Psal. 119. 109.

5 From my youth up I have heard in the tribe of my family, that thou, O Lord, tookest Israel from among all people, and our fathers from all their predecessors, for a perpetual inheritance, and thou hast performed whatsoever thou didst promise them.

6 And now we have sinned before thee: therefore hast thou given us into the hands of our enemies,

7 Because we worshipped their gods: O Lord, thou art righteous.

8 Nevertheless it satisfieth them not, that we are in bitter captivity: but they have stricken hands with their idols,

9 That they will abolish the thing that thou with thy mouth hast ordained, and destroy thine inheritance, and stop the mouth of them that praise thee, and quench the glory of thy house, and of thine altar,

10 And open the mouths of the heathen to set forth the praises of the †idols, and to magnify a fleshly king for ever.

† Gr. vain things.

11 O Lord, give not thy sceptre unto them that † be nothing, and let them not laugh at our fall; but turn their device upon themselves, and make him an example, that hath begun this against us.

† Gr. be not.

12 Remember, O Lord, make thyself known in time of our affliction, and give me boldness, O King of the ‖ nations, and Lord of all power.

‖ Or, gods.

13 Give me eloquent speech in my mouth before the lion: turn his heart to hate him that fighteth against us, that there may be an end of him, and of all that are like-minded to him:

14 But deliver us with thine hand, and help me that am desolate, and which have no other help but thee.

15 Thou knowest all things, O Lord; thou knowest that I hate the glory of the unrighteous, and abhor the bed of the uncircumcised, and of † all the heathen.

† Gr. every stranger.

16 Thou knowest my necessity: for I abhor the sign of my † high estate, which is upon mine head in the days wherein I shew myself, and that I abhor it as a menstruous rag, and that I wear it not when I am † private by myself, † Gr. proud. † Gr. vain, or, private.

17 And that thine handmaid hath not eaten at Aman's table, and that I have not greatly esteemed the king's feast, nor drunk the wine of the drink offerings.

18 Neither had thine handmaid any joy since the day † that I was brought hither to this present, but in thee, O Lord God of Abraham.

† Gr. of my change.

19 O thou mighty God above all, hear the voice of the forlorn, and deliver us out of the hands of the mischievous, and deliver me out of my fear.

CHAP. XV.

6 Esther cometh into the king's presence. 7 He looketh angrily, and she fainteth. 8 The king doth take her up, and comfort her.

AND upon the third day, when she had ended her prayer, she laid away her mourning garments, and put on her glorious apparel.

2 And being gloriously adorned, after she had called upon God, who is the beholder and saviour of all things, she took two maids with her:

3 And upon the one she leaned, as carrying herself ‖ daintily;

‖ Or, delicately.

4 And the other followed, bearing up her train.

5 And she was ‖ ruddy through the perfection of her beauty, and her countenance was chearful and ‖ very amiable: but her heart was in anguish for fear.

6 Then having passed through all the doors, she stood before the king, who sat upon his royal throne, and was clothed with all his robes of majesty, all glittering with gold and precious stones; and he was very dreadful.

7 Then lifting up his countenance that shone with majesty, he looked very fiercely upon her: and the queen fell down, and was pale, and fainted, and bowed herself upon the head of the maid that went ‖ before her.

‖ Or, was low or, by her.

4. For my danger is in mine hand.] For the danger to which I am exposed presses close upon me. See similar expressions at the places referred to in the margin.

8. — they have stricken hands with their idols.] Meaning, They have entered into a covenant with, they have formed an alliance with, their idols.

11. — unto them that be nothing.] That is, to idols which are mere vanities. See Jer. ii. 13. Calmet.

13. — before the lion:] Before the king Ahasuerus. The Hebrews often speak in this manner. See Ps. vii. 2; x. 9; xvii. 12.

16. — I abhor the sign of my high estate.] Meaning the royal diadem. The sentiments here uttered by queen Esther convey a high idea of the greatness of her mind, inasmuch as she did not forget herself amidst the splendour of a prosperous fortune, and was not elevated above herself, even by royalty. Calmet.

8 Then God changed the spirit of the king into mildness, who † in a fear leaped from his throne, and took her in his arms, till she came to herself again, and comforted her with loving words, and said unto her,

† Gr. in anagony.

9 Esther, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheer:

10 Thou shalt not die, though our commandment be ‖ general: come near.

‖ Or, as well thine as mine.

11 And so he held up his golden sceptre, and laid it upon her neck,

12 And embraced her, and said, Speak unto me.

13 Then said she unto him, I saw thee, my lord, as an angel of God, and my heart was troubled for fear of thy majesty.

14 For wonderful art thou, lord, and thy countenance is full of grace.

‖ Or, she fell in a swoon.

15 And as she was speaking, ‖ she fell down for faintness.

16 Then the king was troubled, and all his servants comforted her.

Jos. Antiq. l. 11. c. 6.

THE great king Artaxerxes unto the princes and governors of an hundred and seven and twenty provinces from India unto Ethiopia, and unto all ‖ our faithful subjects, greeting.

‖ Or, well affected to our state.

2 Many, the more often they are honoured with the great bounty of † their gracious princes, the more proud they are waxen, † Gr. their benefactors.

3 And endeavour to hurt not our subjects only, but not being able to bear abundance, do take in hand to practise also against those that do them good:

4 And take not only thankfulness away from among men, but also lifted up with the glorious words of ‖ lewd persons, ‖ that were never good, they think to escape the justice of God, that seeth all things, and hateth evil.

‖ Or, naughty.

‖ Or, that never used prosperity.

5 Oftentimes also fair speech ‖ of those, that are put in trust to manage their friends' affairs, hath caused many that are in authority to be partakers of innocent blood, and hath enwrapped them in remediless calamities:

‖ Or, of our friends, put in trust to manage the affairs

6 Beguiling with the falsehood and deceit of their lewd disposition the innocency and goodness of princes.

7 Now ye may see this, as we have declared, not so much by ancient histories, as ye may, if ye search what hath been wickedly done of late through the pestilent behaviour of them that are unworthily placed in authority.

8 And we must take care for the time to come, that our kingdom may be quiet and peaceable for all men,

9 Both by changing our purposes, and always judging things that are evident with more equal proceeding.

10 For Aman, a Macedonian, the son of Amadatha, being indeed a stranger from the Persian blood, and far distant from our goodness, and as a stranger received of us,

11 Had so far forth obtained the favour that we shew toward every nation, as that he was called our father, and was continually honoured of all men, as the next person unto the king.

12 But he, not bearing his great dignity, went about to deprive us of our kingdom and life:

13 Having by manifold and cunning deceits sought of us the destruction, as well of Mardocheus, who saved our life, and continually procured our good, as also of blameless Esther, partaker of our kingdom, with their whole nation.

14 For by these means he thought, finding us destitute of friends, to have translated the kingdom of the Persians to the Macedonians.

15 But we find that the Jews, whom this wicked wretch hath delivered to utter destruction, are no evildoers, but live by most just laws:

Chap. XV. ver. 9. — I am thy brother,] An expression of kindness and affection.

13. — I saw thee, — as an angel of God,] Meaning, that the majesty of his countenance appeared to her like that of an angel. We find similar expressions at 1 Sam. xxix. 9; 2 Sam. xiv. 17. Calmet.

Chap. XVI. ver. 4. — with the glorious words] With the proud boastful words.

10. — Aman, a Macedonian,] At Esth. iii. 1, and in this Apocryphal book, chap. xii. 6, he is called Haman the Agagite. Josephus thinks, that instead of "Macedonian" in this passage, we ought to read "Amalekite," which corresponds with the term Agagite. Or perhaps the term "Macedonian" may be here used generally for a stranger or foreigner, since this Apocryphal book of Esther may probably have been written at a time when all Asia was filled with the name and fame of the Macedonian nation. Calmet.

Certainly, the expression at ver. 14, of Aman's desire of transferring the kingdom of the Persians to the Macedonians, is adapted to the sentiments and circumstances of a later period of history than the time of Esther, as it seems to refer to the periods when the Persians and Macedonians were at war. Dr. Gray.

16 And that they be children of the most high and most mighty living God, who hath ‖ ordered the kingdom both unto us and to our progenitors in the most excellent manner.

‖ Or, prospered.

17 Wherefore ye shall do well not to put in execution the letters sent unto you by Aman the son of Amadatha.

18 For he, that was the worker of these things, is hanged at the gates of Susa with all his family: God, who ruleth all things, speedily rendering vengeance to him according to his deserts.

19 Therefore ye shall publish the copy of this letter in all places, that the Jews may freely live after their own laws.

20 And ye shall aid them, that even the same day, being the thirteenth day of the twelfth month Adar, they may be avenged on them, who in the time of their affliction shall set upon them.

21 For Almighty God hath turned to joy unto them the day, wherein the chosen people should have perished.

22 Ye shall therefore among your solemn feasts keep it an high day with all feasting:

23 That both now and hereafter there may be safety to us, and the well affected Persians; but to those which do conspire against us a memorial of destruction.

24 Therefore every city and country whatsoever, which shall not do according to these things, shall be destroyed without mercy with fire and sword, and shall be made not only unpassable for men, but also most hateful to wild beasts and fowls for ever.

---

24. — not only unpassable for men, but &c.] Expressions similar to this frequently occur in the Prophets to denote a total destruction, a desolation without hope of reestablishment, Jer. ix. 10; xii. 4; xxxii. 43; Ezek. xiv. 18; xxv. 13, &c. Calmet.

THE WISDOM OF SOLOMON.

INTRODUCTION.

THE works of Solomon in general were emphatically styled the Books of Wisdom, and were so cited by the Fathers; and in the ecclesiastical language the Book of Wisdom comprehends not only all the authentick books of Solomon, but also Ecclesiasticus, and this which is called "the Book of Wisdom," or according to the Greek "the Wisdom of Solomon." The author of this book assumes the title, and speaks in the character, of that monarch; but though the book may perhaps contain some sentiments selected from his works, and others ascribed to him by tradition, it cannot be received as an inspired book, and it was certainly composed long after the time of Solomon.

The copy, which has the highest pretensions to be considered as the original, is in Greek prose. But in whatever language the book was written, it has always been esteemed as a treasure of wisdom. It was composed in imitation of the style of Solomon; though perhaps designed not to pass for his work, but to communicate such instructions as might be consistent with this assumed character. The antiquity and high importance of the book appear to have excited great reverence in the ancient church: but the Fathers in general, however they might be dazzled by particular passages, or might consider them as fragments of inspired writings, represent this book as inferiour to the canonical books; they esteem it as a work of admirable tendency, and as of a scriptural character, but not as absolutely derived from the suggestions of the Holy Spirit.

The book was probably written by an Hellenistical Jew; but, whether before or after Christ, has been disputed. Grotius is of opinion that it was originally written in Hebrew by a Jew, who lived at some time intermediate between Ezra and Simon the Just; and that it was translated by a Christian with some freedom and with additions of evangelical doctrine. But the style, as St. Jerome has observed, indicates rather the artificial contexture of Grecian eloquence, than the terseness and compressive simplicity of the Hebrew language. The book is also replete with allusions to Greek mythology, and with imitations of Grecian writers; with whose works, and especially with those of Plato, the author appears to have been intimately acquainted. Upon the whole, there is reason to believe that the work was written previously to the birth of Christ. It is probable that, since it professes to be the production of Solomon, it was published under the Jewish dispensation, as indeed by the generality of writers it was thought to be. And the supposed resemblances between passages in this book, and others in the New Testament, may be thought on examination to be either imitations of similar passages in the sacred books of the Old Testament; or such casual coincidences of sentiments or expressions, as may be found between all works treating of the same subject.

Though this work be not derived from that infallible Spirit, of which the stamp and character are to be found only in the sacred books, it was evidently the production of a pious and enlightened mind; of one, who by application to revealed wisdom had acquired some portion of its excellence, and learned to imitate its language. And except in some few passages, where we are tempted to suspect a taint of false philosophy, chap. viii. 20; or some fictitious additions to the accounts of sacred history, chap. xvi. 17—19; xvii. 3—6; there is nothing in the book inconsistent with the accounts, or unfavourable to the designs, of revelation: it offers much sublime admonition to the princes and leaders of mankind; it paints in very eloquent description the folly and consequences of idolatry; it overthrows many pernicious errours, and delivers just information concerning a future life and judgment. The six first chapters, which form as it were a preface to the book, are a kind of paraphrase of the nine first chapters of the book of Proverbs; in the seventh and eighth chapters the author proposes himself as an example under the name of Solomon; the ninth chapter is a paraphrase of the prayer which Solomon made to the Lord at the beginning of his reign; and from the tenth chapter to the end is a continuation of the same prayer dilated; which, though extended to a considerable length by the intermixture of nice disquisitions and extraneous discourse, is still apparently imperfect. The style of the book is various; although sometimes turgid, it is not seldom elegant and sublime; it abounds in epithets and poetical imagery. The author often imitates the sententious periods of Solomon, but with less success, says Bishop Lowth, than the author of the succeeding book. Dr. Gray.

CHAP. I.

2 To whom God sheweth himself, 4 and wisdom herself.
6 An evil speaker cannot lie hid. 12 We procure our own destruction: 13 for God created not death.

[a] 1 Kings 3. 2. Isai. 56. 1.

[a] LOVE righteousness, ye that be judges of the earth: think of the Lord with a good (heart,) and in simplicity of heart seek him.

2 For he will be found of them that tempt him not; and sheweth himself unto [b] such as do not [b] distrust him.

[b] Deut. 4. 29. 2 Chron. 15. 4.

3 For froward thoughts separate from

Chap I. ver. 1. — in simplicity of heart.] With sincerity and singleness of heart, as Coverdale renders it, in opposition to double-mindedness, which the Scripture so frequently condemns. Arnald.

2. — that tempt him not;] Those are here said to "tempt God," who do not trust in Him. Grotius. Or rather "tempting God" may be understood, most agreeably with the context, of every instance of hypocrisy and disguise. Arnald.

3. For froward thoughts &c.] The sense of the whole verse seems to be to this effect: Guileful thoughts set us at a distance from God and His truth; He is too great and powerful a Being to be treated with art or craft; and when men presume so to act towards Him, they are sure to suffer for their folly. Arnald.

God: and his power, when it is tried, ‖ reproveth the unwise.

‖ Or, maketh manifest.

4 For into a malicious soul wisdom shall not enter; nor dwell in the body that is subject unto sin.

[c] Jer. 4. 22.

5 [c] For the holy spirit of discipline will flee deceit, and remove from thoughts that are without understanding, and ‖ will not abide when unrighteousness cometh in.

‖ Or, is vanished, or, sheweth itself.

6 For wisdom is a [a] loving spirit; and will not acquit a blasphemer of his ‖ words: for God is witness of his reins, and a true beholder of his heart, and a hearer of his tongue.

[a] Gal. 5. 22.

‖ Or, lips.

7 For the Spirit of the Lord filleth the world: and that which ‖ containeth all things hath knowledge of the voice.

‖ Or, upholdeth.

8 Therefore he that speaketh unrighteous things cannot be hid: neither shall vengeance, when it punisheth, pass by him.

9 For inquisition shall be made into the counsels of the ungodly: and the sound of his words shall come unto the Lord for the ‖ manifestation of his wicked deeds.

‖ Or, reproving.

10 For the ear of jealousy heareth all things: and the noise of murmurings is not hid.

11 Therefore beware of murmuring, which is unprofitable; and refrain your tongue from backbiting: for there is no word so secret, that shall go for nought: and the mouth that ‖ belieth slayeth the soul.

‖ Or, slandereth.

12 Seek not death in the error of your life: and pull not upon yourselves [c] destruction with the works of your hands.

[c] Deut. 4. 20.

13 For God made not death: neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the living.

14 For he created all things, that they might have their being: and the generations of the world were healthful; and there is no poison of destruction in them, nor the kingdom of death upon the earth:

15 (For righteousness is immortal:)

16 But ungodly men with their works and words called it to them: for when they thought to have it their friend, they consumed to nought, and made a covenant with it, because they are worthy to take part with it.

CHAP. II.

1 The wicked think this life short, 5 and of no other after this: 6 therefore they will take their pleasure in this, 10 and conspire against the just. 21 What that is which doth blind them.

FOR the ungodly said, reasoning with themselves, but not aright, [a] Our life is short and tedious, [b] and in the death of a man there is no remedy: neither was there any man known to have returned from the grave.

[a] Job 7. 1.

[b] Matth. 20. 28. 1 Cor. 15. 32.

2 For we are born at all adventure: and we shall be hereafter as though we had never been: for the breath in our nostrils is as smoke, and a little spark in the moving of our heart:

3 Which being extinguished, our body shall be turned into ashes, and our spirit shall vanish as the ‖ soft air,

‖ Or, moist.

4 And our name shall be forgotten in time, and no man shall have our works in remembrance, and our life shall pass away as the trace of a cloud, and shall be dis-

6. For wisdom is a loving spirit;] That is, is benevolent to mankind, and therefore will not suffer a blasphemer to escape with impunity, for that would be an injury to mankind in general. Clarius.

7. — hath knowledge of the voice.] Namely, of the voices of all men, and is acquainted with all things that can be uttered by the tongue. Clarius. See Ps. cxxxix. 4.

10. For the ear of jealousy heareth all things:] That is, God overheareth every thing; especially complaints against the dispensations of His providence cannot be kept secret from Him, who is "jealous" of His own honour. Arnald.

11. — which is unprofitable;] That is, very mischievous and hurtful. Compare Prov. xx. 23; Rom. i. 28. Arnald.

12. Seek not death in the error of your life:] Do not commit sin, and so bring death upon yourself. Castellio.

13. For God made not death: &c.] Man in his state of innocence had the pleasing prospect of immortality; and if he had continued upright, his obedience would have been crowned with it. Arnald.

14. For he created all things, that they might have their being:] And not that they might perish; He created all things originally perfect and good. Calmet.

—— and the generations of the world were healthful;] The world at the beginning was so created that there was no evil in it. For "God saw every thing that He had made, and, behold, it was very good." Budwell.

—— and there is no poison of destruction in them,] As the author is speaking of the original state of the creation, the sense would be better if we were to read, "there was no poison;" namely, when God created them. Arnald, Calmet.

16. — called it to them:] Namely, death. What follows about the wicked making a covenant with death, is an allusion to Isaiah, chap. xxviii. 14, 15. The words as they now stand are intricate, and seem to have suffered a transposition. The following alteration would make the construction clear: "Ungodly men with their words and works called it to them; and looking upon it as their friend, they made a covenant with it, and consumed away, because they deserved to share in it." Arnald.

Chap. II. ver. 1. — Our life is short and tedious.] Rather, "short and painful," as the original signifies. Compare Gen. xlvii. 9; Job xiv. 1. Arnald.

2. For we are born at all adventure:] That is, by mere fortune and chance, without any providence and design of God. Budwell. This language is very natural, and adapted to the character of the speakers; namely, materialists and infidels. Arnald.

‖ Or, filthy.

10 Let us oppress the poor righteous man, let us not spare the widow, nor reverence the ancient gray hairs of the aged.

11 Let our strength be the law of justice: for that which is feeble is found to be nothing worth.

12 Therefore let us lie in wait for the righteous; because he is not for our turn, and he is clean contrary to our doings: he upbraideth us with our offending the law, and objecteth to our infamy the transgressings of our education.

13 He professeth to have the knowledge of God: and he calleth himself the child of the Lord.

14 He was made [e] to reprove our thoughts.

15 [f] He is grievous unto us even to behold: for his life is not like other men's, his ways are of another fashion.

[f] Isaiah 53. 3.

16 We are esteemed of him as ‖ counterfeits: he abstaineth from our ways as from filthiness: he pronounceth the end of the just to be blessed, and maketh his boast that God is his father.

‖ Or, false coin.

17 Let us see if his words be true: and let us prove what shall happen in the end of him.

18 For if the just man be the [g] son of God, he will help him, and deliver him from the hand of his enemies.

19 Let us [h] examine him with despiteful- ness and torture, that we may know his meekness, and prove his patience.

20 Let us condemn him with a shameful death: for by his own saying he shall be respected.

21 Such things they did imagine, and were deceived: for their own wickedness hath blinded them.

5. —for it is fast sealed,] A metaphor taken from the practice of sealing things for the purpose of greater security. Thus Darius sealed the stone upon the mouth of the lions' den, Dan. vi. 17. In the same manner death is here said to be sealed, so that there can be no return to life. Budwell.

6. — speedily] Eagerly, bestowing our whole care and desire upon the enjoyment. Budwell. See the margin.

—— like as in youth.] Let us live when we are old, as we lived while we were young. Grotius.

8. Let us crown ourselves with rosebuds.] At the feasts of the ancients, not only the guests, but the waiters and even the drinking bowls, were crowned with flowers, and the rooms were strewed with them. Arnald.

11. Let our strength be the law of justice:] So that we may esteem just whatever we are able to do; and may measure "the law of justice," not by the equity of the case, but by our own power. Clarius.

14. He was made to reprove our thoughts.] Rather, "He is a reprover of our schemes and designs." Arnald.

16. — as counterfeits:] As adulterated coin; that is, spurious children, aliens from the communion of the children of God. Budwell. See the margin.

18. For if the just man be the son of God, he will help him, &c.] The expressions from ver. 16 to 21 very much resemble those of the Psalmist, Ps. xxii. 8. Compare likewise Matt. xxvii. 43; where the insulting language used by the Jews to our Saviour on the cross much resembles the expressions here. Some of the Fathers of the Church understood the passage as a prophecy of Christ's passion: but without regarding it as a direct prophecy, we may apply it by way of accommodation to our Saviour, who in Scripture is called "the Just One," by way of eminence, and in a very particular and appropriate manner calls God "His Father." Arnald.

20. — for by his own saying he shall be respected.] Rather, "for his trial shall be according to his own words," alluding to ver. 16. Arnald. It shall appear, whether he be patient and blessed at the last, as he boasteth. Castellio.

21. Such things they did imagine,] That is, "Thus did they reason," with reference to ver. 1, where the same word is used in the Greek. Arnald.

—— their own wickedness hath blinded them.] Not unlike what St. Paul says of the wicked, 2 Cor. iv. 4. It is very observable, that a course of sin and a state of darkness are reciprocal terms in Scripture. Arnald.

24. — they that do hold of his side do find it.] They, who having forsaken God follow the devil, by experience find death to be the consequence. Budwell. It appears from the whole tenour of these chapters, that the death which wicked men "covenant with," and at last "take part with," is all along to be understood of death or misery eternal. And if such as "hold of the devil's side," that is, imitate and copy after him, shall have part in this "second death," Rev. xxi. 8, let the libertine and free-thinker, who are equally the subject of this chapter, beware and tremble. Arnald.

CHAP. III.

1 The godly are happy in their death, 5 and in their troubles: 10 the wicked are not, nor their children: 15 but they that are pure are happy, though they have no children: 16 for the adulterer and his seed shall perish.

9 They that put their trust in him shall understand the truth: ‖ and such as be faithful in love shall abide with him: for grace and mercy is to his saints, and he hath care for his elect.

‖ Or, and such as be faithful shall remain with him in love.

10 But the [g] ungodly shall be punished according to their own imaginations, which have neglected the righteous, and forsaken the Lord.

[g] Matt. 25. 41.

11 For whoso despiseth wisdom and nurture, he is miserable, and their hope is vain, their labours unfruitful, and their works unprofitable:

12 Their wives are ‖ foolish, and their children wicked: ‖ Or, without understanding.

13 Their offspring is cursed. Wherefore blessed is the barren that is undefiled, which hath not known the sinful bed: she [h] shall have fruit in the visitation of souls. [h] Isa. 54. 1.

14 And blessed is the [i] eunuch, which with his hands hath wrought no iniquity, nor imagined wicked things against God: for unto him shall be given † the special gift of faith, and an inheritance ‖ in the temple of the Lord more acceptable to his mind. [i] Or, chamberlain. † Gr. the choice gift. ‖ Or, lot.

15 For glorious is the fruit of good labours: and the root of wisdom shall never fall away.

16 As for the children of adulterers, they shall not ‖ come to their perfection, and the seed of an unrighteous bed shall be rooted out. ‖ Or, have no increase.

17 For though they live long, yet shall they be nothing regarded: and their last age shall be without honour.

18 Or, if they die quickly, they have no hope, neither comfort in the day of ‖ trial. ‖ Or, answer.

19 For horrible is the end of the unrighteous generation.

CHAP. IV.

1 The chaste man shall be crowned. 3 Bastard slips shall not thrive. 6 They shall witness against their parents. 7 The just die young, and are happy. 19 The miserable end of the wicked.

BETTER it is to have no children, and to have virtue: for the memorial thereof is immortal: because it is ‖ known with God, and with men. ‖ Or, approved.

Chap. III. ver. 5. — having been a little chastised,] "A little," in comparison with the magnitude of the rewards which await them. See Hom. viii. 18; 2 Cor. iv. 17. Badwell.

— worthy for himself.] Not absolutely so, but according to the bountiful and gracious judgment of God. See Acts xiii. 46; Rev. iii. 4; xvi. 6. Grotius.

7. — and run to and fro like sparks among the stubble.] And run their course, like sparks catching among the stubble. Calmet.

8. They shall judge the nations,] They shall exercise authority, as judges.

13. — Wherefore blessed is the barren that is undefiled, &c.] This is to be understood of the barren wife, that is chaste and free from adultery, whose great commendation in Scripture is "the bed undefiled," Heb. xiii. 4. No reflection is here intended against marriage, nor any preference given to a continual celibacy: the comparison is between married persons only; namely, a barren wife, and a fruitful adulteress. Arnald.

— she shall have fruit in the visitation of souls.] She shall have a reward better than offspring in the day of judgment. Grotius.

14. And blessed is the eunuch, &c.] See Is. lvi. 3; and the note there.

16. — they shall not come to their perfection,] God often den any offspring, or grants an unhappy one to adulterers. Gro According to the marginal reading, the sense is the same as Deut. xxiii. 2. Arnald.

19. For horrible is the end of the unrighteous generation.] Wh is said in this and the following chapter, of the sad prospect a miserable fate of the children of adulterers, is to be understoo spoken, not absolutely, but of such as being abandoned and d bauched themselves, follow the vicious courses of their pare And indeed there is often an hereditary taint in wicked and bauched families, and some particular sins run as it were in blood, the seeds of future wickedness. Hence holy Job, speak of such wicked parents, says in very strong and significant ter that they lay or treasure up iniquity for their children, Job xxi. 19. Calmet, Arnald.

2 When it is present, men take example at it; and when it is gone, they desire it: it weareth a crown, and triumpheth for ever, having gotten the victory, striving for undefiled rewards.

3 But the multiplying brood of the ungodly shall not thrive, nor take deep rooting from bastard slips, nor lay any fast foundation.

4 For though they flourish in branches for a time; [a] yet standing not fast, they shall be shaken with the wind, and through the force of winds they shall be rooted out.

[a] Matt. 7. 19.

5 The imperfect branches shall be broken off, their fruit unprofitable, not ripe to eat, yea, meet for nothing.

6 For children begotten of unlawful [†] beds are witnesses of wickedness against their parents in their trial.

7 But though the righteous be prevented with death, yet shall he be in rest.

8 For honourable age is not that which standeth in length of time, nor that is measured by number of years.

9 But wisdom is the gray hair unto men, and an unspotted life is old age.

14 For his soul pleased the Lord: therefore hasted he to take him away from among the wicked.

15 This the people saw, and understood it not, neither laid they up this in their minds, That his grace and mercy is with his saints, and that he hath respect unto his chosen.

16 Thus the righteous that is dead shall condemn the ungodly which are living; and youth that is soon perfected the many years and old age of the unrighteous.

17 For they shall see the end of the wise, and shall not understand what God in his counsel hath decreed of him, and to what end the Lord hath set him in safety.

18 They shall see him, and despise him; but God shall laugh them to scorn: and they shall hereafter be a vile carcase, and a reproach among the dead for evermore.

19 For he shall rend them, and cast them down headlong, that they shall be speechless; and he shall shake them from the foundation; and they shall be utterly laid waste, and be in sorrow; and their memorial shall perish.

20 And [‖] when they cast up the accounts of their sins, they shall come with fear: and their own iniquities shall convince them to their face.

‖ Or, to the casting up of the account.

CHAP. V.

1 The wicked shall wonder at the godly, 4 and confess their error, 5 and the vanity of their lives. 15 God will reward the just, 17 and war against the wicked.

THEN shall the righteous man stand in great boldness before the face of such as have afflicted him, and made no account of his labours.

2 When they see it, they shall be troubled with terrible fear, and shall be amazed at the strangeness of his salvation, so far beyond all that they looked for.

3 And they repenting and groaning for anguish of spirit shall say within themselves, This was he, whom we had sometimes in derision, and a [‖] proverb of reproach:

‖ Or, parable.

4 [a] We fools accounted his life madness, and his end to be without honour:

Chap. IV. ver. 7. — though the righteous be prevented with death,] Though he be surprised, quickly carried off, by death. Calmet.

— shall he be in rest.] His death should not be considered as an evil, but God will convey him to a place of rest. Calmet.

10. He pleased God, &c.] This passage is undoubtedly to be understood of Enoch, whom, being the first example of eminent sanctity, God was pleased to translate, as He had condemned the first instance of transgression, to shew His great detestation of sin. Arnald.

13. He, being made perfect &c.] Measuring his life, not by the number of his years, but by the perfection of his goodness, by his consummate virtue and extraordinary sanctity; in the corrupt age in which he lived, he may be allowed, to all useful purposes of living, to have fulfilled an honourable age. Arnald.

16. Thus the righteous — shall condemn the ungodly] By leaving without excuse the wicked that outlive him, and grow old in their wickedness. Arnald. As the men of Nineveh, Matt. xii. 41. Grotius.

Chap. V. ver. 2. When they see it, they shall be troubled with terrible fear,] The wicked shall be confounded at the sight of him whom they so much abused, and shall behold with amazement the sudden and wonderful turn of Providence in favour of the righteous, beyond what they expected or thought of; and from the happiness conferred on the righteous, shall anticipate their own misery. To give the more lively impression of this, the author represents them both as standing together before the judgment seat of God. Arnald.

dren of God, and his lot is among the saints!

6 Therefore have we erred from the way of truth, and the light of righteousness hath not shined unto us, and the sun of righteousness rose not upon us.

‖ Or, filled ourselves, or, satisfied.

7 We ‖ wearied ourselves in the way of wickedness and destruction: yea, we have gone through deserts, where there lay no way: but as for the way of the Lord, we have not known it.

8 What hath pride profited us? or what good hath riches with our vaunting brought us?

[b] 1 Chron. 29. 15. Chap. 2. 5.

9 All those things are [b] passed away like a shadow, and as a post that hasted by;

[c] Prov. 30. 19. ‖ Or, flieth.

11 [c] Or as when a bird ‖ hath flown through the air, there is no token of her way to be found, but the light air being beaten with the stroke of her wings, and parted with the violent noise and motion of them, is passed through, and therein afterwards no sign where she went is to be found;

12 Or like as when an arrow is shot at a mark, it parteth the air, which immediately cometh together again, so that a man cannot know where it went through:

13 Even so we in like manner, as soon as we were born, began to draw to our end, and had no sign of virtue to shew; but were consumed in our own wickedness.

15 But the righteous live for evermore; their reward also is with the Lord, and the care of them is with the most High.

16 Therefore shall they receive a glorious ‖ kingdom, and a beautiful crown † Or, the crown of beauty from the Lord's hand: for with his right hand shall he cover them, and with his arm shall he protect them.

17 He shall take to him his jealousy for complete armour, and make the creature his weapon for the revenge of his enemies.

18 He shall put on [f] righteousness as a breastplate, and true judgment instead of an helmet.

[f] Isa. 59. 17.

19 He shall take ‖ holiness for an invincible shield.

‖ Or, equity.

20 His severe wrath shall he sharpen for a sword, and the world shall fight with him against the unwise.

21 Then shall the right aiming thunderbolts go abroad; and from the clouds, as from a well drawn bow, shall they fly to the mark.

22 And hailstones full of wrath shall be cast as out of a stone bow, and the water of the sea shall rage against them, and the floods shall cruelly drown them.

23 Yea, a mighty wind shall stand up against them, and like a storm shall blow them away: thus iniquity shall lay waste the whole earth, and ill dealing shall overthrow the thrones of the mighty.

CHAP. VI.

1 Kings must give ear. 3 They have their power from God, 5 who will not spare them. 12 Wisdom is soon found. 21 Princes must seek for it: 24 for a wise prince is the stay of his people.

HEAR therefore, O ye kings, and understand; learn, ye that be judges of the ends of the earth.

2 Give ear, ye that rule the people, and glory in the multitude of nations.

[a] Rom. 13. 1, 2.

3 For [a] power is given you of the Lord, and sovereignty from the Highest, who shall try your works, and search out your counsels.

4 Because, being ministers of his kingdom, ye have not judged aright, nor kept the law, nor walked after the counsel of God;

9, 10, 11, 12.] We meet with several of these comparisons with respect to the shortness of his life and its enjoyments, in Job ix. 25, 26; and among the memorable sayings of Agur, Prov. xxx. 19, "The way of an eagle in the air, and the way of a ship in the midst of the sea," are noticed as so obscure and uncertain as to leave no traces behind them. The images are very natural, and placed in different lights to be more affecting: they seem compassionately designed to warn others, "lest they also come into that place of torment." Arnald.

17. He shall take to him his jealousy &c.] Having finished his discourse concerning the righteous, the author returns to describe the punishments which God shall inflict upon the wicked in the universal judgment: these punishments are described by figures taken from earthly things, as being more level to our understandings. Grotius.

20. — the world shall fight with him against the unwise.] The same in effect with that sentence in the 17th verse, "He shall make the creature," that is, the creation, "His weapon for the revenge of His enemies." It is observed in the book of Job that all the works of nature are prepared by God to be His instruments, either for judgment or for mercy, chap. xxxvii. 12, 13 xxxviii. 23. Arnald.

22. — a stone bow,] A machine for throwing stones, called by the Romans balista. Arnald. See the notes on 2 Chron. xxvi. 15

5 Horribly and speedily shall he come upon you: for a sharp judgment shall be to them that be in high places.

6 For mercy will soon pardon the meanest: but mighty men shall be mightily tormented.

7 For he which is Lord over all shall fear no [b] man's person, neither shall he stand in awe of any man's greatness: for he hath made the small and great, and careth for all alike.

8 But a sore trial shall come upon the mighty.

9 Unto you therefore, O kings, do I speak, that ye may learn wisdom, and not fall away.

10 For they that keep holiness holily shall be ‖judged holy: and they that have learned such things shall find ‖ what to answer.

11 Wherefore set your affection upon my words; desire them, and ye shall be instructed.

12 Wisdom is glorious, and never fadeth away: yea, she is easily seen of them that love her, and found of such as seek her.

13 She preventeth them that desire her, in making herself first known unto them.

14 Whoso seeketh her early shall have no great travail: for he shall find her sitting at his doors.

15 To think therefore upon her is perfection of wisdom: and whoso watcheth for her shall quickly be without care.

16 For she goeth about seeking such as are worthy of her, sheweth herself favourably unto them in the ways, and meeteth them in every thought.

17 For the very true beginning of her is the desire of ‖discipline; and the care of discipline is love;

18 And love is the keeping of her laws; and the giving heed unto her laws is the assurance of incorruption;

19 And incorruption maketh us near unto God:

20 Therefore the desire of wisdom bringeth to a kingdom.

21 If your delight be then in thrones and sceptres, O ye kings of the people, honour wisdom, that ye may reign for evermore.

22 As for wisdom, what she is, and how she came up, I will tell you, and will not hide mysteries from you: but will seek her out from the beginning of her nativity, and bring the knowledge of her into light, and will not pass over the truth.

23 Neither will I go with consuming envy; for such a man shall have no fellowship with wisdom.

24 But the multitude of the wise is the welfare of the world: and a wise king is the upholding of the people.

25 Receive therefore instruction through my words, and it shall do you good.

CHAP. VII.

1 All men have their beginning and end alike. 6 He preferred wisdom before all things etc. 8 God gave him all the knowledge which he had. 22 The praise of wisdom.

I MYSELF also am a mortal man, like to all, and the offspring of him that was first made of the earth,

2 And in my mother's womb was fashioned to be flesh in the time of ten months, [a] being compacted in blood, of the [a] Job 10. 10. seed of man, and the pleasure that came with sleep.

3 And when I was born, I drew in the common air, and fell upon the earth, which is of like nature, and the first voice which I uttered was crying, as all others do.

4 I was nursed in swaddling clothes, and that with cares.

5 For there is no king that had any other beginning of birth.

Chap. VI. ver. 5. — for a sharp judgment shall be to them that be in high places.] The meaning is, that, if kings and princes pervert the design of their institution, and violate the rules of justice, they will be punished in a greater degree, in proportion to their superiour station, and to the importance of their trust. Arnald.

6. — mighty men shall be mightily tormented.] For to whom much has been given, of him shall be required the more. Badwell.

13. She preventeth them] She anticipates them.

17. For the very true beginning of her &c.] The several degrees are here set down, by which a person well disposed towards wisdom may rise to the perfection of it. The first step is the desire of discipline or instruction: which proceeds from the good opinion that a man entertains of it, and the love that he bears to it. And this love is the cause of his perseverance and willing obedience: and obedience will produce the reward of happiness, which consists in incorruption, that is, in a state of immortality, and "a crown of glory that fadeth not away," 1 Pet. v. 4. Arnald.

22. — I will tell you,] Namely, in the two following chapters. Grotius.

Chap. VII. ver. 1. I myself also] Solomon is here personated, as speaking of himself. Dr. Isham.

6. — and the like going out.] The meaning is plain, that all are born, and all must die; not that all depart by the same means or in the same manner, as our version seems to intimate. Arnald.

ing was given me: I called upon God, and the spirit of wisdom came to me.

8 I preferred her before sceptres and thrones, and esteemed riches nothing in comparison of her.

9 Neither compared I unto her any † Gr. stone of unreturnable price. † precious stone, because all gold in respect of her is as a little sand, and silver shall be counted as clay before her.

10 I loved her above health and beauty, and chose to have her instead of light: for the light that cometh from her never goeth out.

[c] 1 Kings 3. 13. Matt. 6. 33. 11 [c] All good things together came to me with her, and innumerable riches in her hands.

12 And I rejoiced in them all, because wisdom goeth before them: and I knew not that she was the mother of them.

† Gr. without envie. † Gr. without envy. 13 I learned † diligently, and do communicate her † liberally: I do not hide her riches.

14 For she is a treasure unto men that ‖ Or. enter Friendship with God. never faileth: which they that use ‖ become the friends of God, being commended for the gifts that come from learning.

‖ Or. God grant. ‖ Or. are to be spoken of. 15 ‖ God hath granted me to speak as I would, and to conceive as is meet for the things that ‖ are given me: because it is he that leadeth unto wisdom, and directeth the wise.

16 For in his hand are both we and our words; all wisdom also, and knowledge of workmanship.

17 For he hath given me certain knowledge of the things that are, namely, to know how the world was made, and the operation of the elements:

18 The beginning, ending, and midst of the times: the alterations of the turning of the sun, and the change of seasons:

19 The circuits of years, and the positions of stars:

20 The natures of living creatures, and the furies of wild beasts: the violence of winds, and the reasonings of men: the diversities of plants, and the virtues of roots:

21 And all such things as are either secret or manifest, them I know.

22 For wisdom, which is the worker of all things, taught me: for in her is an understanding spirit, holy, † one only, manifold, subtil, lively, clear, undefiled, plain, not subject to hurt, loving the thing that is good, quick, which cannot be letted, ready to do good, † Gr. only begotten.

23 Kind to man, stedfast, sure, free from care, having all power, overseeing all things, and going through all understanding, pure, and most subtil, spirits.

24 For wisdom is more moving than any motion: she passeth and goeth through all things by reason of her pureness.

25 For she is the ‖ breath of the power of God, and a pure ‖ influence flowing from the glory of the Almighty: therefore can no defiled thing fall into her. ‖ Or. vapour. ‖ Or. stream.

26 For she is the [d] brightness of the everlasting light, the unspotted mirror of the power of God, and the image of his goodness. [d] Heb. 1. 3.

27 And being but one, she can do all things: and remaining in herself, she ‖ maketh all things new: and in all ages entering into holy souls, she maketh them friends of God, and prophets. ‖ Or. renewed.

28 For God loveth none but him that dwelleth with wisdom.

29 For she is more beautiful than the sun, and above all the order of stars: being compared with the light, she is found before it.

---

12. — because wisdom goeth before them:] That is, wisdom not only brings them with her, but conducts them, like their leader and commander. Arnald.

—— I knew not that she was the mother of them.] I had neither expected nor hoped for such great blessings from her. Grotius.

15. — to speak as I would,] With such facility and propriety of language, as may best express the thoughts and conceptions of the mind. Badwell.

17. — to know how the world was made, &c.] Divine wisdom, imparted by God and contained in sacred history, teaches us in few words these great truths; that the world was the work of God's power, that it was made in time, that He made it out of nothing, that His providence continues it in being, and that His infinite wisdom is no less displayed in the beauty, symmetry, and contrivance of the world, than His omnipotence in the act of creation. Arnald. The author designed by this eulogium to set forth the superiority of Divine wisdom, and to advance it above the theology or philosophy of the heathens. Calmet.

18. The beginning, ending, and midst of the times:] That is, of the seasons; their beginning, continuance, and ending, and their successive and regular returns. Grotius, Arnald.

22. For wisdom, which is the worker of all things, taught me:] What is said in this book concerning wisdom is to be understood, sometimes of uncreated wisdom, and sometimes of wisdom created and inspired into man. Calmet. This distinction is very necessary for the right understanding of the present chapter. Arnald.

—— manifold,] In the distribution of gifts and graces. Dr. Isham.

—— which cannot be letted,] Which cannot be impeded in its operation. Calmet.

23. — going through all understanding, — spirits.] That is, intellectual "spirits." Wisdom, as a Divine attribute, penetrates, not only into things corporeal, but into things spiritual and intellectual. Arnald.

24. — is more moving than any motion:] Is nimbler than any thing else. Dr. Isham.

25. — therefore can no defiled thing fall into her.] From the excellent purity of her nature, she is totally exempt from all manner of earthly pollution. Grotius.

30 For after this cometh night: but vice shall not prevail against wisdom.

CHAP. VIII.

2 He is in love with wisdom: 4 for he that hath it hath every good thing. 21 It cannot be had but from God.

‖ Or, profitably.

WISDOM reacheth from one end to another mightily: and ‖ sweetly doth she order all things.

2 I loved her, and sought her out from my youth, I desired ‖ to make her my spouse, and I was a lover of her beauty.

§ Or, to marry her to myself.

3 In that she is conversant with God, she magnifieth her nobility: yea, the Lord of all things himself loved her.

‖ Or, teacher. § Or, chooser.

4 For she is ‖ privy to the mysteries of the knowledge of God, and a ‖ lover of his works.

5 If riches be a possession to be desired in this life; what is richer than wisdom, that worketh all things?

[a] Exod. 31. 3. 6.

6 And if [a] prudence work; who of all that are is a more cunning workman than she?

7 And if a man love righteousness, her labours are virtues: for she teacheth temperance and prudence, justice and fortitude: which are such things, as men can have nothing more profitable in their life.

8 If a man desire much experience, she knoweth things of old, and conjectureth aright what is to come: she knoweth the subtilties of speeches, and can expound dark sentences: she foreseeth signs and wonders, and the events of seasons and times.

† Gr. will.

9 Therefore I purposed to take her to me to live with me, knowing that she † would be a counseller of good things, and a comfort in cares and grief.

10 For her sake I shall have estimation among the multitude, and honour with the elders, though I be young.

11 I shall be found of a quick conceit in judgment, and shall be admired in the sight of great men.

[b] Job 29. 8, 9, 10, 11.

12 [b] When I hold my tongue, they shall bide my leisure, and when I speak, they shall give good ear unto me: if I talk much, they shall lay their hands upon their mouth.

13 Moreover by the means of her I shall obtain immortality, and leave behind me an everlasting memorial to them that come after me.

‖ Or, govern.

14 I shall ‖ set the people in order, and the nations shall be subject unto me.

‖ Or, appear.

15 Horrible tyrants shall be afraid, when they do but hear of me; I shall ‖ be found good among the multitude, and valiant in war.

‖ Or, Break open into mine house.

16 ‖ After I am come into mine house, I will repose myself with her: for her conversation hath no bitterness; and to live with her hath no sorrow, but mirth and joy.

[c] Prov. 7. 3.

17 Now when I considered these things in myself, and [c] pondered them in my heart, how that to be allied unto wisdom is immortality;

18 And great pleasure it is to have her friendship; and in the works of her hands are infinite riches; and in the exercise of conference with her, prudence; and in talking with her, a ‖ good report; I went ¶ Or, about seeking how to ‖ take her to me.

‖ Or, marry her.

19 For I was a witty child, and had a good spirit.

20 Yea rather, being good, I came into a body undefiled.

21 Nevertheless, when I perceived that I could not otherwise obtain her, except God gave her me; and that was a point of wisdom also to know whose gift she was; I ‖ prayed unto the Lord, and besought him, and with my whole heart I said,

‖ Or, went.

CHAP. IX.

1 A prayer unto God for his wisdom, 6 without which the best man is nothing worth, 13 neither can he tell how to please God.

O GOD of my fathers, and Lord of mercy, who hast made all things with thy word,

2 And ordained man through thy wisdom, that he should [a] have dominion over the creatures which thou hast made,

[a] Gen. 1. 28.

30. For after this cometh night: &c.] Night constantly succeeds the day, and therefore the light is as constantly interrupted by darkness. But Divine wisdom admits of no such privation or inequalities; it has no mixture of light and darkness, of good and evil; but is always the same, "yesterday, and to day, and for ever," Heb. xiii. 8. Arnald.

Chap. VIII. ver. 1. — reacheth from one end to another] That is, governs the whole course of actions. Dr. Isham.

8. — foreseeth signs and wonders.] This seems to refer to astronomy and the heavenly appearances. Dr. Isham.

19. — I was a witty child.] That is, naturally well disposed towards wisdom, and of a good capacity for receiving her instructions. Arnald.

20. Yea rather, being good, I came into a body undefiled.] This sentence seems agreeable to the opinion, that souls of men pre-existed and descended into suitable bodies; which was a notion of the Pythagoreans and Platonists, and of the Jewish doctors and rabbinical writers. Arnald. It appears from John ix. 2, that many of the Hebrews had imbibed it. Grotius.

8 And order the world according to equity and righteousness, and execute judgment with an upright heart:

a 1 Kings 3. 9. 4 Give [a] me wisdom, that sitteth by thy throne; and reject me not from among thy children:

Psal. 116. 16. 5 For I [b] thy servant and son of thine handmaid am a feeble person, and of a short time, and too young for the understanding of judgment and laws.

6 For though a man be never so perfect among the children of men, yet if thy wisdom be not with him, he shall be nothing regarded.

a 1 Chron. 29. 5. 2 Chron. 1. 9 7 Thou hast chosen me to be a [a] king of thy people, and a judge of thy sons and daughters:

8 Thou hast commanded me to build a temple upon thy holy mount, and an altar in the city wherein thou dwellest, a resemblance of the holy tabernacle, which thou hast prepared from the beginning.

c Prov. 8. 22. John 1. 1, 2, 3, 10. 9 And [c] wisdom was with thee: which knoweth thy works, and was present when thou madest the world, and knew what was acceptable in thy sight, and right in thy commandments.

10 O send her out of thy holy heavens, and from the throne of thy glory, that being present she may labour with me, that I may know what is pleasing unto thee.

11 For she knoweth and understandeth all things, and she shall lead me soberly in my doings, and preserve me ‖ in her power.

‖ Or, by her power, or, glory. 12 So shall my works be acceptable, and then shall I judge thy people righteously, and be worthy to sit in my father's seat.

f Jos. 40. 19. Rom. 11. 34. 1 Cor. 2. 16. 13 For [f] what man is he that can know the counsel of God? or who can think what the will of the Lord is?

14 For the thoughts of mortal men are

‖ Or, fearful. ‖ miserable, and our devices are but uncertain.

15 For the corruptible body presseth down the soul, and the earthy tabernacle weigheth down the mind that museth upon many things.

16 And hardly do we guess aright at things that are upon earth, and with labour do we find the things that are † before us: but the things that are in heaven who hath searched out?

17 And thy counsel who hath known, except thou give wisdom, and send thy Holy Spirit from above?

18 For so the ways of them which lived on the earth were reformed, and men were taught the things that are pleasing unto thee, and were saved through wisdom.

16. — the things that are in heaven who hath searched out?] The writer here argues very justly from our ignorance of natural things, which we every day see and experience, to our imperfect views and conjectures of things spiritual and invisible. "If I have told you earthly things," saith our blessed Saviour, "and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?" John iii. 12. It is a very just observation, therefore, of Lord Bacon, that "he laboureth in vain, who shall endeavour to draw down heavenly mysteries to human reason: it rather becomes us to bring our reason to the adorable throne of Divine truth." If this observation were but well weighed, the great advocates for the all-sufficiency of reason would surely be more modest and humble, nor would the credibility of mysteries be so obstinately disputed. Arnald.

the waste land that smoketh is a testimony, and plants bearing fruit that never come to ripeness: and a standing pillar of salt is a monument of an unbelieving soul.

8 For regarding not wisdom, they got not only this hurt, that they knew not the things which were good; but also left behind them to the world a memorial of their foolishness: so that in the things wherein they offended they could not so much as be hid.

9 But wisdom delivered from pain those that attended upon her.

10 When the righteous fled from his brother's wrath, she guided him in right paths, shewed him the kingdom of God, and gave him knowledge of holy things, made him rich in his travels, and multiplied the fruit of his labours.

11 In the covetousness of such as oppressed him she stood by him, and made him rich.

12 She defended him from his enemies, and kept him safe from those that lay in wait, and in a sore conflict she gave him the victory; that he might know that godliness is stronger than all.

[z] Gen. 37. 28. & 39. 7. Acts 7. 10.

13 [z] When the righteous was sold, she forsook him not, but delivered him from sin: she went down with him into the pit,

14 And left him not in bonds, till she brought him the sceptre of the kingdom, and ‖ power against those that oppressed him; as for them that had accused him, she shewed them to be liars, and gave him perpetual glory.

‖ Or, the power of them that ruled over him.

15 [a] She delivered the ‖ righteous people and blameless seed from the nation that oppressed them.

16 She entered into the soul of the servant of the Lord, and [b] withstood dreadful kings in wonders and signs;

18 [c] Brought them through the Red sea, and led them through much water:

19 But she drowned their enemies, and cast them up out of the bottom of the deep.

20 Therefore the righteous spoiled the ungodly, and [d] praised thy holy name, O Lord, and magnified with one accord thine hand, that fought for them.

[d] Exod. 15. 1.

21 For wisdom opened the mouth of the dumb, and made the tongues of them that cannot speak eloquent.

CHAP. XI.

5 The Egyptians were punished, and the Israelites reserved in the same thing. 15 They were plagued by the same things wherein they sinned. 20 God could have destroyed them otherwise, 23 but he is merciful to all.

SHE prospered their works in the hand of the holy prophet.

2 [e] They went through the wilderness that was not inhabited, and pitched tents in places where there lay no way.

[e] Exod. 16. 1.

3 [f] They stood against their enemies, and were avenged of their adversaries.

[f] Exod. 17 10, 11.

4 When they were thirsty, they called upon thee, and water was given them out of the flinty rock, and their thirst was quenched out of the hard stone.

5 For by what things their enemies were punished, by the same they in their need were benefited.

6 For instead of a fountain of a perpetual running river troubled with foul blood,

7 For a manifest reproof of that commandment, whereby the infants were slain, thou gavest unto them abundance of water by a means which they hoped not for:

8 Declaring by that thirst then [g] how thou hadst punished their adversaries.

[g] Exod. 7. 20.

9 For when they were tried, albeit but in mercy chastised, they knew how the ungodly were judged in wrath and tormented, thirsting in another manner than the just.

10 For these thou didst admonish and try, as a father: but the other, as a severe king, thou didst condemn and punish.

11 Whether they were absent or present, they were vexed alike.

When they were in Egypt, the Egyptians were visited with ten different plagues on their account; and were envious and uneasy at their prosperity, after their departure. Arnald.

12 For a double grief came upon them, and a groaning for the remembrance of things past.

13 For when they heard by their own punishments the other to be benefited,

‖ Or, perceived. they ‖ had some feeling of the Lord.

14 For whom they rejected with scorn, when he was long before thrown out at the casting forth of the infants, him in the end, when they saw what came to pass, they admired.

15 But for the foolish devices of their wickedness, wherewith being deceived they worshipped serpents void of reason, and vile beasts, thou didst send a multitude of unreasonable beasts upon them for vengeance;

16 That they might know, that wherewithal a man sinneth, by the same also shall he be punished.

17 For thy Almighty hand, that made the world of matter without form, wanted not means to send among them a multitude of bears, or fierce lions,

18 Or unknown wild beasts, full of rage, newly created, breathing out either a fiery vapour, or filthy scents of scattered smoke, or shooting horrible sparkles out of their eyes:

19 Whereof not only the harm might dispatch them at once, but also the terrible sight utterly destroy them.

20 Yea, and without these might they have fallen down with one blast, being persecuted of vengeance, and scattered abroad through the breath of thy power: but thou hast ordered all things in measure and number and weight.

21 For thou canst shew thy great strength at all times when thou wilt; and who may withstand the power of thine arm?

22 For the whole world before thee is 24 For thou lovest all the things that are, and abhorrest nothing which thou hast made: for never wouldest thou have made any thing, if thou hadst hated it.

25 And how could any thing have endured, if it had not been thy will? or been preserved, if not called by thee?

26 But thou sparest all: for they are thine, O Lord, thou lover of souls.

the ungodly under the hand of the righteous in battle, or to destroy them at once with cruel beasts, or with one rough word:

10 But executing thy judgments upon them by little and little, thou gavest them place of repentance, not being ignorant that they were a naughty generation, and that their malice was bred in them, and that their cogitation would never be changed.

[b] Gen. 9. 25. 11 For it was a [b] cursed seed from the beginning; neither didst thou for fear of any man give them pardon for those things wherein they sinned.

[c] Rom. 9. 20. 12 For who shall say, [c] What hast thou done? or who shall withstand thy judgment? or who shall accuse thee for the nations that perish, whom thou hast made? or who shall come to stand ‖ against thee, to be ‖ revenged for the unrighteous men?

‖ Or, in thy presence. ‖ Or, a revenger. [d] 1 Pet. 5. 7. 13 For neither is there any God but thou that [d] careth for all, to whom thou mightest shew that thy judgment is not unright.

14 Neither shall king or tyrant be able to set his face against thee for any whom thou hast punished.

15 Forsomuch then as thou art righteous thyself, thou orderest all things righteously: [e] thinking it not agreeable with thy power to condemn him that hath not deserved to be punished.

[e] Job 10. 2.

16 For thy power is the beginning of righteousness, and because thou art the Lord of all, it maketh thee to be gracious unto all.

17 For when men will not believe that thou art of a ‖ full power, thou shewest thy strength, and among them that know it thou makest their boldness manifest.

‖ Or, perfect.

18 But thou, mastering thy power, judgest with equity, and orderest us with great favour: for thou mayest use power when thou wilt.

19 But by such works hast thou taught thy people that the just man should be merciful, and hast made thy children to be of a good hope that thou givest repentance for sins.

20 For if thou didst punish the enemies of thy children, and the condemned to death, with such deliberation, giving them time and place, whereby they might be delivered from their malice:

21 With how great circumspection didst thou judge thine own sons, unto whose fathers thou hast sworn, and made covenants of good promises?

22 Therefore, whereas thou dost chasten us, thou scourgest our enemies a thousand times more, to the intent that, when we judge, we should carefully think of thy goodness, and when we ourselves are judged, we should look for mercy.

23 Wherefore, whereas men have lived dissolutely and unrighteously, thou hast tormented them with their own ‖ abominations.

‖ Or, abominable idols.

[f] Chap. 11. 15.; Rom. 1. 23. 24 [f] For they went astray very far in the ways of error, and held them for gods, which even among the beasts of their enemies were despised, being deceived, as children of no understanding.

25 Therefore unto them, as to children without the use of reason, thou didst send a judgment to mock them.

26 But they that would not be reformed by that correction, wherein he dallied with them, shall feel a judgment worthy of God.

27 For, look, for what things they grudged, when they were punished, that is, for them whom they thought to be gods; [now] being punished in them, when they saw it, they acknowledged him to be the true God, whom before they denied to know; and therefore came extreme damnation upon them.

CHAP. XIII.

1 They were not excused that worshipped any of God's works. 10 But most wretched are they that worship the works of men's hands.

---

16. For thy power is the beginning of righteousness, &c.] Among men, supreme power is very commonly united with the greatest severity: but Thy supreme authority is tempered with supreme lenity and compassion; so that in proportion as Thou art more powerful, Thou behavest with more gentleness and clemency towards Thy creatures. Budwell.

17. — among them that know it] And yet act in defiance of it. Arnald.

21. With how great circumspection didst thou judge] Rather, as some versions render, "wilt Thou judge?" With how much more wariness and caution wilt Thou punish Thine own people the Jews, with whose fathers Thou didst enter into covenant, and didst make to them therein goodly and precious promises? Arnald.

24. — held them for gods, which even among the beasts of their enemies were despised,] The words "of their enemies" are superfluous: the sense is complete without them: "esteemed as gods creatures that are vile even amongst beasts." Arnald.

26. But they that would not be reformed &c.] Intimating, that those who will not be reformed by those gentler methods wherein God may be said only to dally with them, shall afterwards feel a heavier and much sorer vengeance. Arnald.

27. For, look, for what things &c.] The sense seems to be, For whereas, when corrected only, they were displeased and angry, seeing themselves yet more severely dealt with, and punished on account of those whom they thought to be gods, they acknowledged the true God, whom before they denied: and "therefore," or to the end that they might acknowledge Him, "came extreme damnation upon them," that is, they were cut off by an utter destruction. Arnald.

4 But if they were astonished at their power and virtue, let them understand by them, how much mightier he is that made them.

5 For by the greatness and beauty of the creatures proportionably the maker of them is seen.

6 But yet for this they are the less to be blamed: for they peradventure err, seeking God, and desirous to find him.

9 For if they were able to know so much, that they could aim at the world; how did they not sooner find out the Lord thereof?

10 But miserable are they, and in dead things is their hope, who called them gods, which are the works of men's hands, gold and silver, to shew art in, and resemblances of beasts, or a stone good for nothing, the work of an ancient hand.

14 Or made it like some vile beast, laying it over with vermilion, and with paint colouring it red, and covering every spot therein;

15 And when he had made a convenient room for it, set it in a wall, and made it fast with iron:

16 For he provided for it that it might not fall, knowing that it was unable to help itself; for it is an image, and hath need of help:

10. — the work of an ancient hand.] The antiquity of the idol was thought of great importance: its venerable rust added not a little to its divinity. Even a stone badly cut has had veneration paid to it, merely because it was ancient. Whole nations, says Calmet, have adored for a succession of ages an ancient block of marble badly finished, or a figure in wood, rotten and worm-eaten. Arnald.

14. — colouring it red,] The custom of painting idols of a red colour seems to have been extensive among the heathens, and to have prevailed in the East in later times. Niebuhr mentions having found, in a pagode on the Malabar coast, two figures, which were the objects of worship, rubbed with a red colouring. Harmer.

18. For health he calleth upon that &c.] Many primitive writers of the Christian Church have exposed at large the folly and absurdity of idol worship; yet by none is this so happily executed as by the author of this book, in the whole of this passage, and especially in the two concluding verses. In these the contrast is so beautiful, and the contraries are so happily and justly placed to illustrate each other, that a person of taste cannot fail immediately to discern and admire the justness and elegance of the description. Arnald.

13 For neither were they from the be-

14 For by the vain glory of men they they come shortly to an end.

this their forwardness they might flatter

18 Also the singular diligence of the ar-

to more superstition.
19 For he, peradventure willing to please one in authority, forced all his skill to make them, that they erred in the knowledge of God; but whereas they lived in the great

BUT thou, O God, art gracious and true, longsuffering, and in mercy ordering all things.

2 For if we sin, we are thine, knowing thy power: but we will not sin, knowing that we are counted thine.

3 For to know thee is perfect righteousness: yea, to know thy power is the root of immortality.

4 For neither did the mischievous invention of men deceive us, nor an image spotted with divers colours, the painter's fruitless labour;

‖ Or, turneth a reproach to the foolish.

5 The sight whereof ‖ enticeth fools to lust after it, and so they desire the form of a dead image, that hath no breath.

6 Both they that make them, they that desire them, and they that worship them, are lovers of evil things, and are worthy to have such things to trust upon.

[a] Rom. 9. 21.

7 For the [a] potter, tempering soft earth, fashioneth every vessel with much labour for our service: yea, of the same clay he maketh both the vessels that serve for clean uses, and likewise also all such as serve to the contrary: but what is the use of either sort, the potter himself is the judge.

8 And employing his labours lewdly, he maketh a vain god of the same clay, even he which a little before was made of earth himself, and within a little while after returneth to the same, out of the which he was taken, when his [b] life which was lent him shall be demanded.

10 His heart is ashes, his hope is more vile than earth, and his life of less value than clay:

18 Yea, they worshipped those beasts also that are most hateful: for being compared together, some are worse than others.

31. For it is not the power of them by whom they swear: &c.] Our version is somewhat obscure: the meaning is, that idolaters and false swearers shall certainly be punished, yet not by any act or power of their idols, who can take no cognizance of perjury or falsehood; but by the just vengeance of Almighty God, the revenger of injustice, and of idolatry and false worship. Arnald.

Chap. XV. ver. 2. — if we sin, we are thine, &c.] The meaning he expresses is this: If we sin, we are in the hand of God, and under the power of His vengeance; if we sin not, we are also in His hand, to receive a recompense from Him. Arnold.

as to be desired in respect of beasts: but they went without the praise of God and his blessing.

CHAP. XVI.

2 God gave strange meat to his people, to stir up their appetite, and vile beasts to their enemies, to take it from them. 5 He stung with his serpents, 12 but soon healed them by his word only. 17 The creatures altered their nature to pleasure God's people, and to offend their enemies.

THEREFORE by the like were they punished worthily, and by the multitude of beasts [a] tormented.

[a] Numb. 21. 6. chap. 11. 15, 16.

2 Instead of which punishment, dealing graciously with thine own people, thou preparedst for them meat of a strange taste, even [b] quails to stir up their appetite:

[b] Numb. 11. 31.

3 To the end that they, desiring food, might for the ugly sight of the beasts sent among them lothe even that, which they must needs desire; but these, suffering penury for a short space, might be made partakers of a strange taste.

4 For it was requisite, that upon them exercising tyranny should come penury, which they could not avoid: but to these it should only be shewed how their enemies were tormented.

5 For when the horrible fierceness of beasts came upon ‖ these, and they perished with the [c] stings of crooked serpents, thy wrath endured not for ever:

‖ Or, thy people.
[c] Numb. 21. 6. 1 Cor. 10. 9.

6 But they were troubled for a small season, that they might be admonished, having a [d] sign of salvation, to put them in remembrance of the commandment of thy law.

[d] Numb. 21. 9.

7 For he that turned himself toward it was not saved by the thing that he saw, but by thee, that art the Saviour of all.

8 And in this thou madest thine enemies confess, that it is thou who deliverest from all evil:

9 For [e] them the bitings of grasshoppers and flies killed, neither was there found any remedy for their life: for they were worthy to be punished by such.

[e] Exod. 8. 24. & 10. 4. Rev. 9. 3. &c.

10 But thy sons not the very teeth of venomous dragons overcame: for thy mercy was ever by them, and healed them.

11 For they were † pricked, that they should remember thy words; and were quickly saved, that not falling into deep forgetfulness, they might be ‖ continually mindful of thy goodness.

† Gr. stung.
‖ Or, never drawn from.

12 For it was neither herb, nor mollifying plaister, that restored them to health: but thy word, O Lord, which healeth all things.

13 For thou hast power of life and death: thou [f] leadest to the gates of hell, and bringest up again.

[f] Psal. 105. Deut. 32. 39. 1 Sam. 2. 6.

14 A man indeed killeth through his malice: and the spirit, when it is gone forth, returneth not; neither the soul received up cometh again.

15 But it is not possible to escape thine hand.

16 [g] For the ungodly, that denied to know thee, were scourged by the strength of thine arm: with strange rains, hails, and showers, were they persecuted, that they could not avoid, and through fire were they consumed.

[g] Exod. 9. 23.

17 For, which is most to be wondered at, the fire had more force in the water, that quencheth all things: for the world [h] fighteth for the righteous.

[h] Judges 5. 20.

19. — in respect of beasts:] That is, of other beasts. Arnald. Almost all beasts are preferable in point of beauty to serpents and crocodiles, which the Egyptians held in such great veneration. Calmet.

—— but they went without the praise of God and his blessing.] That is, says Calmet, they are not of the number of those whom God praised and blessed: they have, by being perverted to idolatry, lost in some measure God's benediction, and withal that original goodness and beauty, of which they were possessed in common with other creatures, when they first came out of the hand of their Creator, Gen. I. 31. Or the sense may be, All created beings, animate and inanimate, praise God in their beauty, and derive it from His hand as a blessing; but odious and deformed objects, such as for their ugliness are called monsters, proclaim not their Maker's praise, as not having received from His bounty those amiable and good qualities, which are to be esteemed blessings. Arnald.

Chap. XVI. ver. 2. — meat of a strange taste,] Meat to which they had not been accustomed. Dr. Isham.

3. To the end that they,] Meaning the Egyptians.

—— lothe even that, which they must needs desire;] Through the disagreeableness of the animals sent among them, particularly the frogs, which tainted and spoiled their meat, the Egyptians loathed the thoughts and the desire even of necessary food and refreshment. Arnald.

—— but these, suffering] The Israelites suffering.

6. — having a sign of salvation,] Namely, the brasen serpent. See John iii. 14. Dr. Isham.

7. For he that turned himself toward it &c.] Meaning, that the brasen serpent had no natural power to effect a cure in those who beheld it, but that the power of God gave this supernatural effect in recompense for their faith and obedience. Calmet.

15. — to escape thine hand.] To be out of the reach of Thy power either in body or soul. Dr. Isham.

17. — the fire had more force in the water, that quencheth all things:] The fire, sent from heaven to punish the Egyptians, continued burning though mixed with rain and hail; and instead of being quenched by the water, became the more violent for it. Arnald.

—— the world fighteth for the righteous.] See the note on chap. v. 20.

18 For sometime the flame was mitigated, that it might not burn up the beasts that were sent against the ungodly; but themselves might see and perceive that they were persecuted with the judgment of God.

19 And at another time it burneth even in the midst of water above the power of fire, that it might destroy the fruits of an unjust land.

[i] Exod. 16. 14. Numb. 11. 7. Psal. 78: 25. John 6. 31.

20 [i] Instead whereof thou feddest thine own people with angels' food, and didst send them from heaven bread prepared without their labour, able to content every man's delight, and agreeing to every taste.

[k] Judges 6. 4.

21 For thy [k] ‖ sustenance declared thy sweetness unto thy children, and serving to the appetite of the eater, ‖ tempered itself to every man's liking.

‖ Or, manna.

‖ Or, was tempered.

[l] Chap. 19. 20.

22 [l] But snow and ice endured the fire, and melted not, that they might know that fire burning in the hail, and sparkling in the rain, did destroy the fruits of the enemies.

23 But this again did even forget his own strength, that the righteous might be nourished.

24 For the creature that serveth thee, who art the Maker, increaseth his strength against the unrighteous for their punishment, and abateth his strength for the benefit of such as put their trust in thee.

25 Therefore even then was it altered into all ‖ fashions, and was obedient to thy grace, that nourisheth all things, according to the desire ‖ of them that had need:

‖ Or, things.

‖ Or, of them that prayed.

[m] Deut 8.3. Matt. 4. 4.

26 That thy children, O Lord, whom thou lovest, might know, that [m] it is not the growing of fruits that nourisheth man: but that it is thy word, which preserveth them that put their trust in thee.

27 For that which was not destroyed of the fire, being warmed with a little sunbeam, soon melted away:

28 That it might be known, that we must prevent the sun to give thee thanks, and at the dayspring pray unto thee.

29 For the hope of the unthankful shall melt away as the winter's hoar frost, and shall run away as unprofitable water.

CHAP. XVII.

1 Why the Egyptians were punished with darkness. 4 The terrors of that darkness. 12 The terrors of an ill conscience.

FOR great are thy judgments, and cannot be expressed: therefore ‖ unnurtured souls have erred.

‖ Or, souls that will not be reformed.

2 For when unrighteous men thought to oppress the holy nation; they being shut up ‖ in their houses, the prisoners of darkness, and fettered with the bonds of a long night, lay [there] ‖ exiled from the eternal providence.

‖ Or, under their roofs.

‖ Or, fugitives.

3 For while they supposed to lie hid in their secret sins, they were scattered ‖ under a dark veil of forgetfulness, being horribly astonished, and troubled with [strange] ‖ apparitions.

‖ Or, is.

‖ Or, sights.

4 For neither might the corner that held them keep them from fear: but noises [as of waters] falling down sounded about them, and sad visions appeared unto them with heavy countenances.

5 No power of the fire might give them light: neither could the bright flames of the stars endure to lighten that horrible night.

6 Only there appeared unto them a fire kindled of itself, very dreadful: for being much terrified, they thought the things which they saw to be worse than the sight they saw not.

7 [a] As for the illusions of art magick,

[a] Exod. 7. 12. & 8. 7, 19.

18. — that it might not burn up the beasts] The frogs, lice, and other vermin, mentioned in Exod. viii. Grotius.

21. For thy sustenance declared thy sweetness] That is, the manna, the sustenance sent by Thee to Thy people, sweet in its flavour, was both an instance and an emblem of Thy tender love and kindness to them. Arnald.

22. But snow and ice endured the fire, &c.] A comparison is carried on here between the effect of the lightning mixed with hail upon the fruits of the Egyptians, and that of the fire upon the manna of the Israelites; expressing that as the former burnt intensely and unusually for the destruction of their trees and plants, so the latter lost, or, as the author expresses it, "forgot its own strength," for the preservation and nourishment of the Israelites. Arnald.

24. For the creature that serveth thee, &c.] He speaks of the element of fire, which was fiercer and more powerful amidst the water, when it was ordered to afflict the Egyptians, but abated its fury to contribute to the good and advantage of the Israelites. Arnald.

28. That it might be known, that &c.] That, as it was necessary to collect the manna before sunrise, that it might not be melted, so those who wish for the blessings and favour of God, should rise with the sun to pray to Him and to bless His name. Calmet.

Chap. XVII. ver. 1. — therefore] That is, for want of considering these judgments. Dr. Isham.

2. — exiled from the eternal providence.] From the common blessings of God's providence, light, heat, and the sight of the heavens. Calmet.

3. For while they supposed &c.] The true rendering seems to be, While they thought or flattered themselves that they lay hid in their secret sins, under a dark veil of forgetfulness, they themselves were darkened, or overtaken by this plague of darkness. Arnald.

7. As for the illusions of art magick, &c.] The magicians themselves were not able to assist them, nor to remove this plague of darkness. Arnald.

they were put down, and their vaunting in wisdom was reproved with disgrace.

8 For they, that promised to drive away terrors and troubles from a sick soul, were sick themselves of fear, worthy to be laughed at.

9 For though no terrible thing did fear them; yet being scared with beasts that passed by, and hissing of serpents,

‖ Or, refusing to look upon. 10 They died for fear, ‖ denying that they saw the air, which could of no side be avoided.

11 For wickedness, condemned by her own witness, is very timorous, and being pressed with conscience, always forecasteth grievous things.

12 For fear is nothing else but a betraying of the succours which reason offereth.

13 And the expectation from within, being less, counteth the ignorance more than the cause which bringeth the torment.

14 But they sleeping the same sleep that

‖ Or, wherein they could do nothing. night, ‖ which was indeed intolerable, and which came upon them out of the bottoms of inevitable hell,

15 Were partly vexed with monstrous apparitions, and partly fainted, their heart failing them: for a sudden fear, and not looked for, came upon them.

16 So then whosoever there fell down was straitly kept, shut up in a prison without iron bars.

17 For whether he were husbandman, or

¶ Or, desert. shepherd, or a labourer in the ‖ field, he was overtaken, and endured that necessity, which could not be avoided: for they were all bound with one chain of darkness.

18 Whether it were a whistling wind, or a melodious noise of birds among the spreading branches, or a pleasing fall of water running violently,

‖ Or, hideous. 19 Or a ‖ terrible sound of stones cast down, or a running that could not be seen of skipping beasts, or a roaring voice of most savage wild beasts, or a rebounding echo from the hollow mountains; these things made them to swoon for fear.

20 For the whole world shined with clear light, and none were hindered in their labour:

21 Over them only was spread an heavy night, an image of that darkness which should afterward receive them: but yet were they unto themselves more grievous than the darkness.

CHAP. XVIII.

4 Why Egypt was punished with darkness, 5 and with the death of their children. 18 They themselves saw the cause thereof. 20 God also plagued his own people. 21 By what means that plague was stayed.

NEVERTHELESS thy saints had a very great [a] light, whose voice they hearing, and not seeing their shape, because they also had not suffered the same things, they counted them happy. [a] Exod. 10. 23.

2 But for that they did not hurt them now, of whom they had been wronged before, they thanked them, and besought them pardon for that they had been enemies.

3 [b] Instead whereof thou gavest them a burning pillar of fire, both to be a guide of the unknown journey, and an harmless sun to entertain them honourably. [b] Exod. 13. 21. & 14. 24. Psal. 78. 14. & 105. 39.

4 For they were worthy to be deprived of light, and imprisoned in darkness, who had kept thy sons shut up, by whom the ‖ uncorrupt light of the law was to be given unto the world. ‖ Or, incorruptible.

5 [c] And when they had determined to slay the babes of the saints, one child being cast forth, and saved, to reprove them, thou tookest away the multitude of their children, and destroyedst them altogether in a mighty water. [c] Exod. 1. 16.

6 [d] Of that night were our fathers certified afore, that assuredly knowing unto what oaths they had given credence, they might afterwards be of good cheer. [d] Exod. 11. 4.

10. — denying that they saw the air, &c.] Rather, as in the margin, "refusing to look upon" the air. They closed their eyes, and durst not look up to the darkness, which could not escape their notice, as it enveloped them on every side. Grotius, Arnald.

13. And the expectation from within, being less, &c.] This verse, both in the original and in the translation, is unintelligible. By a slight alteration it may be rendered thus: "And the expectation of lesser evil, when it is from within;" that is, when it cometh from the mind or the imagination, "looketh upon it as greater, through ignorance of the cause which occasioneth the torment." Arnald.

18. Whether it were a whistling wind, &c.] Here is a description of the panick of the Egyptians under the miraculous darkness, which was so great that nothing could stir without causing alarm to them. Arnald.

21. — an image of that darkness &c.] Of that darkness which is reserved for them hereafter; alluding to the future punishment which awaited the Egyptians. Calmet.

—— were they unto themselves more grievous] By reason of the terrours and darkness of their minds. Dr. Isham.

Chap. XVIII. ver. 1. — thy saints] Meaning the Israelites.

—— whose voice they hearing, &c.] The preferable sense seems to be, The Israelites heard the cries of the Egyptians without seeing their shape; and returned thanks to God that they themselves were not involved in the same darkness and misery. Calmet.

2. But for that they did not hurt them &c.] The sentence is obscure. The sense seems to be, that the Egyptians thanked the Israelites for not revenging themselves upon them in their state of darkness, who had provocations enough, and had been so long oppressed by them. Arnald.

7 So of thy people was accepted both the salvation of the righteous, and destruction of the enemies.

8 For wherewith thou didst punish our adversaries, by the same thou didst glorify us, whom thou hadst called.

[e] Exod. 12. 21—28.

9 [e] For the righteous children of good men did sacrifice secretly, and with one consent made ‖ a holy law, that the saints should be like partakers of the same good and evil, the fathers now singing out the songs of praise.

‖ Or, a covenant of God, or, league: See Psalm 50. 5.

10 But on the other side there sounded an ill according cry of the enemies, and a lamentable noise was carried abroad for children that were bewailed.

[f] Exod. 11. 5. & 12. 29.

11 [f] The master and the servant were punished after one manner; and like as the king, so suffered the common person.

12 So they altogether had innumerable dead with one kind of death; neither were the living sufficient to bury them: for in one moment the noblest offspring of them was destroyed.

13 For whereas they would not believe any thing by reason of the enchantments; upon the destruction of the firstborn, they acknowledged this people to be the sons of God.

14 For while all things were in quiet silence, and that night was in the midst of her swift course,

15 Thine Almighty word leaped down from heaven out of thy royal throne, as a fierce man of war into the midst of a land of destruction,

16 And brought thine unfeigned commandment as a sharp sword, and standing up filled all things with death; and it touched the heaven, but it stood upon the earth.

‖ Or, imaginations.

17 Then suddenly ‖ visions of horrible dreams troubled them sore, and terrors came upon them unlooked for.

18 And one thrown here, and another there, half dead, shewed the cause of his death.

19 For the dreams that troubled them did foreshew this, lest they should perish, and not know why they were afflicted.

20 Yea, the tasting of death touched the righteous also, and there was a destruction of the [g] multitude in the wilderness: but the wrath endured not long.

[g] Num. 16. 46.

21 For then the blameless man made haste, and stood forth to defend them; and bringing the shield of his proper ministry, even prayer, and the propitiation of incense, set himself against the wrath, and so brought the calamity to an end, declaring that he was thy servant.

22 So he overcame the destroyer, not with strength of body, nor force of arms, but with a word subdued he him that punished, alledging the oaths and covenants made with the fathers.

23 For when the dead were now fallen down by heaps one upon another, standing between, he stayed the wrath, and ‖ parted the way to the living.

‖ Or, cut off.

24 [h] For in the long garment was the whole world, and in the four rows of the stones was the glory of the fathers graven, and thy Majesty upon the diadem of his head.

[h] Exod. 28. 6, 9.

25 Unto these the destroyer gave place, and was afraid of them: for it was enough that they only tasted of the wrath.

CHAP. XIX.

1 Why God shewed no mercy to the Egyptians, 5 and how wonderfully he dealt with his people. 14 The Egyptians were worse than the Sodomites. 18 The wonderful agreement of the creatures to serve God's people.

AS for the ungodly, wrath came upon them without mercy unto the end: for he knew before what they would do;

2 How that having given them leave to depart, and sent them hastily away, they would repent and pursue them.

3 For whilst they were yet mourning and making lamentation at the graves of the dead, they added another foolish device, and pursued them as fugitives, whom they had ‖ intreated to be gone.

‖ Or, cast out by intreaty.

4 For the destiny, whereof they were worthy, drew them unto this end, and made them forget the things that had already happened, that they might fulfil the

---

20. Yea, the tasting of death touched the righteous also,] From the destruction of the Egyptian firstborn, the author takes occasion to mention the overthrow of the Israelites in the wilderness; and, by a comparison of God's dealings with the Egyptians, and with His own people, it appears, that the former were punished without mercy, but that no sooner does Aaron appear in favour of the offending Israelites, than through his intercession the wrath of God is stayed. Arnald.

punishment which was wanting to their torments:

5 And that thy people might pass a wonderful way: but they might find a strange death.

6 For the whole creature in his proper kind was fashioned again anew, serving the peculiar commandments that were given unto them, that thy children might be kept without hurt:

7 As namely, a cloud shadowing the camp; and where water stood before, dry land appeared; and out of the Red sea a way without impediment; and out of the violent stream a green field:

8 Wherethrough all the people went that were defended with thy hand, seeing thy marvellous strange wonders.

9 For they went at large like horses, and leaped like lambs, praising thee, O Lord, who hadst delivered them.

10 For they were yet mindful of the things that were done while they sojourned in the strange land, how the ground

‖ Or, lice. brought forth ‖ flies instead of cattle, and how the river cast up a multitude of frogs instead of fishes.

11 But afterwards they saw a new generation of fowls, when, being led with their appetite, they asked delicate meats.

12 For quails came up unto them from

‡ Or, comfort. the sea for their ‡ contentment.

13 And punishments came upon the sinners not without former signs by the force of thunders: for they suffered justly according to their own wickedness, insomuch as they used a more hard and hateful behaviour toward strangers.

14 For the Sodomites did not receive those, whom they knew not when they came: but these brought friends into bondage, that had well deserved of them.

15 And not only so, but peradventure some respect shall be had of those, because they used strangers not friendly:

16 But these very grievously afflicted them, whom they had received with feastings, and were already made partakers of the same laws with them.

17 Therefore even with blindness were these stricken, as those were at the doors of the righteous man: when, being compassed about with horrible great darkness, every one sought the passage of his own doors.

18 For the elements were changed † in † Gr. by themselves. themselves by a kind of harmony, like as in a psaltery notes change the name of the tune, and yet are always sounds; which may well be perceived by the sight of the things that have been done.

19 For earthly things were turned into watery, and the things, that before swam in the water, now went upon the ground.

20 The fire had power in the water, forgetting his own virtue: and the water forgat his own quenching nature.

21 On the other side, the flames wasted not the flesh of the corruptible living things, though they walked therein; neither melted they the icy kind of heavenly meat, that was of nature apt to melt.

22 For in all things, O Lord, thou didst magnify thy people, and glorify them, neither didst thou lightly regard them: but didst assist them in every time and place.

---

6. For the whole creature &c.] The sense of the passage is, that the elements were so altered in their operations, and diversified in their effects through the power of God, that there seemed to be, as it were, a new creation; for there was nothing but miracle, either when God would punish His enemies, or protect His chosen. Arnald.

14. — but these brought friends into bondage,] These (the Egyptians) made slaves of strangers (the Israelites) who had before been benefactors to them. Arnald.

17. — with blindness] That is, with darkness. Dr. Isham.

18. For the elements were changed &c.] They were changed by God from their constant course, as easily as a musician can change tunes on instruments. Dr. Isham.

19. — earthly things were turned into watery,] Alluding to the passage of the Red sea.

It is the opinion of many, that this book was originally continued beyond its present conclusion, and that part of it is now lost. Grotius, Calmet.

THE WISDOM OF JESUS THE SON OF SIRACH,

OR

ECCLESIASTICUS.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS book, like the preceding, has sometimes been considered as the production of Solomon, from its resemblance to the inspired work of that writer. In the Latin church it was esteemed the last of the five books attributed to him. It is cited as the work of that enlightened king by several of the Fathers; was joined with his books in most of the copies; and like them is written with a kind of metrical arrangement in the Alexandrian manuscript, being supposed to have been composed originally in metre. Still however it must have been written long after the time of Solomon, who with the succeeding Prophets that flourished before and after the captivity is here mentioned, chap. xlvii. 13, &c; since also the high priest Simon, who lived a little before the Maccabees, is spoken of, chap. l. 1—21; since the words of Malachi are cited, chap. xlviii. 10. from Mal. iv. 6; and since the author describes himself in circumstances that could not have occurred to Solomon, chap. xxxiv. 11, 12; li. 6. The book can only be supposed to contain some scattered sentiments of Solomon, industriously collected with other materials for the work, by an Hebrew writer styled Jesus; who professes himself the author, chap. l. 27, and who is represented to have so been by his grandson; but who indeed imitates the didactick style of Solomon, and like him assumes the character of a preacher. Jesus was, as we learn from the same authority, a man who had travelled much in the pursuit of knowledge; who was very conversant with the Scriptures, and desirous of producing, in imitation of the sacred writers, some useful work for the instruction of mankind; and who having collected together many valuable sentences from the Prophets, and other writers their successors, compiled them into one work, with some original additions of his own production. What this Jesus produced in the Syriack or vulgar Hebrew of his time, his grandson translated into Greek for the benefit of his countrymen in Egypt, who by long disuse had forgotten the Hebrew tongue.

To this grandson we are indebted for the possession of a valuable work, of which the original is now lost; though St. Jerome professes to have seen it. It has been a subject of some dispute, whether the grandfather or grandson be the person who should be described as the Son of Siracb. However, as the book is entitled "The Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Siracb," this title must be supposed to apply rather to the author than to the translator. The author likewise describes himself as the Son of Siracb in the 51st chapter, which appears to be the work of the same author. The translator, who is usually called Jesus, is likewise styled the Son of Siracb by Epiphanius and by the author of the anonymous prologue which is supposed to have been written by Athanasius; and it is not improbable that the younger Jesus may likewise have been a Son of Siracb, as names were often so entailed in families. The author of this book is by Calmet and others supposed to have flourished so late as under the pontificate of Onias the third, and to have fled into Egypt on account of the afflictions brought on his country by Antiochus Epiphanes, about 171 years before Christ, to whose persecution they conceive that some parts of the book refer, chap. xxxvi; xxxiv. 12; xxxv; and li. The translator professes to have found the book after he had continued some time in Egypt, where it might have been deposited by his grandfather; it was called Ecclesiasticus by the Latins, a title nearly synonymous with that of Ecclesiastes, or "the Preacher." In Greek it is called the Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Siracb. It is much to be admired for the excellency of its precepts; and none of the Apocryphal books furnish such admirable instruction as this. But it has no title to be considered as an inspired work: though it contains many passages derived from the sacred writings, and especially from those of Solomon; and some which have a slight resemblance to parts of the New Testament, by accidental coincidence of thought and expression; or by concurrent imitation of the early writers of the Old Testament. The book never was in the Hebrew canon; nor was it received by the primitive church of Christ, since it is not in the most ancient and authentick catalogues, and is expressly represented as an uncanonical book by many ancient writers. It is however cited with great reverence by the Fathers of the Greek and Latin churches, many of whom endeavoured to strengthen their religious opinions by the sentiments contained in a book so deservedly and so generally approved. It is cited as Scripture, in a general sense of the word, by many provincial synods and received as in a lower degree canonical by some councils after the fourth century. It was however universally considered as inferiour to the books derived from the Hebrew canon, till received as of equal authority by the unadvised and undiscriminating decree of the council of Trent.

The work begins with an eulogium on Wisdom; and many important instructions are delivered to the twenty-fourth chapter, when Wisdom herself is introduced, and is supposed to continue to speak, to the fifteenth verse of the forty-second chapter. Here the collection of wise sayings, which are obviously written in imitation of the Proverbs of Solomon, concludes; and the author solemnly enters upon a pious hymn, in which he celebrates God's wisdom, in a strain highly rapturous and sublime: and finishes his work with a panegyrick on the illustrious characters of his own nation, and with a prayer of thanksgiving for some deliverance which the author had personally experienced. The book contains a fine system of moral, political, and theological precepts; arranged in a less desultory manner than the Proverbs of Solomon; and distributed under certain heads, which seem to have been formerly classed under different titles; many of which are still extant in some of the Greek copies. Some learned men have pretended to discover in the book the more secret and abstruse wisdom applied to Solomon, and taught in the schools of the Jewish Doctors. But it is chiefly valuable for the familiar lessons which it affords for the direction of manners, in every circumstance and condition, and for the general precepts which it communicates towards the daily regulation of life. Its maxims are explained by much variety of illustration, and occasionally exemplified in the description of characters. The ancient writers considered it as a complete compendium of moral virtues; and perhaps no uninspired production ever displayed a morality more comprehensive, or more captivating and consistent with the revealed laws of God. The book furnishes also an instructive detail of the sentiments and opinions that prevailed in the time of the author: it shews the impatience which then prevailed for the appearance of the expected Messiah, chap. xxxvi. 1—17; and the firm confidence in the hope of a future life and judgment, which had been built upon the assurances of the Law and the Prophets. It serves likewise to prove, that as the Gospel dispensation approached, the Jews were prepared for its reception, by being more enlightened to understand the spiritual import, and the figurative character of the Law. Dr. Gray.

The excellent morality of this book, and the justness of its observations, which have stood the test, and gained the approbation, of so many successive ages, have deservedly recommended it to general esteem. A celebrated Metropolitan in particular, one of the early lights of the reformation, (Abp. Whitgift,) had such a high opinion of its worth, and of the great usefulness of its being thoroughly understood, that he purposely engaged the learned Drusius to undertake an illustration of it, under his patronage and encouragement. Arnald

A Prologue made by an uncertain author.

Some refer this Prologue to Athanasius, because it is found in his Synopsis.

THIS Jesus was the son of Sirach, and grandchild to Jesus of the same name with him: this man therefore lived in the latter times, after the people had been led away captive, and called home again, and almost after all the prophets. Now his grandfather Jesus, as he himself witnesseth, was a man of great diligence and wisdom among the Hebrews, who did not only gather the grave and short sentences of wise men, that had been before him, but himself also uttered some of his own, full of much understanding and wisdom. When as therefore the first Jesus died, leaving this book almost ‖ perfected, Sirach his son receiving it after him left it to his own son Jesus, who, having gotten it into his hands, compiled it all orderly into one volume, and called it Wisdom, intituling it both by his own name, his father's name, and his grandfather's; alluring the hearer by the very name of Wisdom to have a greater love to the study of this book. It containeth therefore wise sayings, dark sentences, and parables, and certain particular ancient godly stories of men that pleased God; also his prayer and song; moreover, what benefits God had vouchsafed his people, and what plagues he had heaped upon their enemies. This Jesus did imitate Solomon, and was no less famous for wisdom and learning, both being indeed a man of great learning, and so reputed also.

The Prologue of the Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Sirach.

WHEREAS many and great things have been delivered unto us by the law and the prophets, and by others that have followed their steps, for the which things Israel ought to be commended for learning and wisdom; and whereof not only the readers must needs become skilful themselves, but also they that desire to learn be able to profit them which are ‖ without, both by speaking and writing: my grandfather Jesus, when he had much given himself to the reading of the law, and the prophets, and other books of our fathers, and had gotten therein good judgment, was drawn on also himself to write something pertaining to learning and wisdom; to the intent that those which are desirous to learn, and are addicted to these things, might profit much more in living according to the law. Wherefore let me intreat you to read it with favour and attention, and to pardon us, wherein we may seem to come short of some words, which we have laboured to interpret. For the same things uttered in Hebrew, and translated into another tongue, have not the same force in them: and not only these things, but the law itself, and the † prophets, and the rest of the books, have no small ‖ difference, when they are spoken in their own language. For in the eight and thirtieth year coming into Egypt, when Euergetes was king, and continuing there some time, I found a ‖ book of no small learning: therefore I thought it most necessary for me to bestow some diligence and travail to interpret it; using great watchfulness and skill in that space to bring the book to an end, and set it forth for them also, which in a strange country are willing to learn, being prepared before in manners to live after the law.

Before CHRIST about 200.

ALL [a] wisdom cometh from the Lord, and is with him for ever.

[a] 1 Kings 3, 9.

A Prologue made by an uncertain author.] Supposed, as the margin states, to be written by Athanasius; but this is thought by many to have been not the great Athanasius, but another of that name, who was bishop of Alexandria, and flourished between the years 458 and 490 of the Christian era: since therefore he lived at so late a period, he cannot be regarded as of much authority in any historical or chronological point. Arnald.

— and almost after all the prophets.] The Son of Sirach certainly lived after Malachi, who was the last of the regular Hebrew Prophets. See the Preface. The author may perhaps mean here by "the Prophets," some holy men who lived in the interval between the ceasing of prophecy and the advent of Christ, to whom Josephus gives the name of Prophets. Arnald.

— in the eight and thirtieth year — when Euergetes was king.] There have been considerable doubts among learned men, to what this thirty-eighth year refers; but it probably means the thirty-eighth year of the reign of Ptolemy Physcon, the second of the Ptolemies who received the surname of Euergetes or the Benefactor. The thirty-eighth year of his reign comes about to the date given here in the margin. Abp. Usher, Calmet.

— I found a book of no small learning:] Rather, according to some copies, "I found a copy (that is, of this book of Ecclesiasticus) which contained important instructions." Calmet.

— for them also, which in a strange country &c.] Meaning, for the Jews living out of Judea, and principally those in Egypt, who did not understand Hebrew. They had already the books of Wisdom and Proverbs translated into Greek; and consequently the translator thought he should perform a considerable service by giving a Greek edition also of this book of Ecclesiasticus. Calmet.

Chap. I. ver. 1. All wisdom cometh from the Lord,] Compare Prov. ii. 6; iii. 19; viii. 22; Wisd. vii. 25; viii. 3; ix. 3. "Wisdom," in this book, as in those of Proverbs and Wisdom, sometimes means the Eternal Wisdom of God, and sometimes religious wis-

8 There is one wise and greatly to be feared, the Lord sitting upon his throne.

9 He created her, and saw her, and numbered her, and poured her out upon all his works.

10 She is with all flesh according to his gift, and he hath given her to them that love him.

11 The fear of the Lord is honour, and glory, and gladness, and a crown of rejoicing.

12 The fear of the Lord maketh a merry heart, and giveth joy, and gladness, and a long life.

19 Wisdom raineth down skill and knowledge of understanding, and exalteth them to honour that hold her fast.

20 The root of wisdom is to fear the Lord, and the branches thereof are long life.

dom, which God by His infinite goodness enables men to attain. Calmet.

3. Who can find out the height &c.] In the former verse, Eternal Wisdom is compared to three things that cannot be numbered; so in this it is compared to three things that cannot be measured. Compare Job xi. 7—9. Arnald.

5. — and her ways are everlasting commandments.] Meaning, that the ways to arrive at her are the everlasting commandments of God. Junius.

6. To whom hath the root of wisdom been revealed?] Meaning, Who can fathom the depth of Infinite Wisdom, and the secrets of God's judgments? The seventh verse is omitted in many Greek copies, and by the Arabick and Syriack translators. It seems only to be an explanation of this, and to have crept accidentally into the text from the margin. Arnald.

10. She is with all flesh.] That is, The wisdom of God is displayed in all His works, and especially in the animated creation, the most perfect of His works. Calmet.

12. — and a long life.] See notes at Prov. iii. 2, 18.

14. — and it was created with the faithful in the womb.] Meaning that the faithful often have from their earliest infancy the fear and dread of God. Arnald.

15. She hath built an everlasting foundation with men,] Alluding especially to righteous men. The fear of God takes deep root in their hearts, and in those of their children; the good impressions which they have received in infancy are never effaced. Calmet.

22. — cannot be justified;] More is intended than is here expressed; it is meant that he is highly criminal, that he shall not "escape punishment," as the margin renders it. The expression in the Greek, translated "the sway of his fury," is a metaphor taken from the balance, and means literally, that the excess or preponderancy of passion shall overturn a man. Arnald.

23. — afterward joy shall spring up unto him.] Either in this life he will receive the reward of his patience; (Arnald.) or, after death, he will receive abundant joy and glory. Calmet.

28. Distrust not the fear of the Lord.] By "the fear of the Lord" is meant religion. The precept is, Follow the dictates of religion, being assured of a final reward.

—— come not unto him with a double heart.] That is, with affections divided between God and the world. Or else, Do not offer thy devotions with a doubting spirit, James i. 6, 7. Arnald.

5 Whoso honoureth his father shall have joy of his own children; and when he maketh his prayer, he shall be heard.

6 He that honoureth his father shall have a long life; and he that is obedient unto the Lord shall be a comfort to his mother.

7 He that feareth the Lord will honour his father, and will do service unto his parents, as to his masters.

30. — and so God discover thy secrets,] God discover the hypocrisy of thy heart, and expose thee to publick shame. The expression, "cast thee down in the midst of the congregation," refers to the custom of bringing criminals to a publick hearing, and openly punishing them for their faults, Ecclus. xxiii. 24; Prov. v. 14; xxvi. 26. Arnald.

Chap. II. ver. 2. — and make not haste in time of trouble.] The sense is, When tribulation and anguish are upon thee, patiently depend upon God, wait till He graciously vouchsafes the time of deliverance, and do not, through distrust of His mercy, betake thyself to any unlawful means of extricating thyself. Arnald.

3. — that thou mayest be increased at thy last end.] That thou mayest receive at thy latter end the just recompense of thy patience. Calmet.

7. — go not aside,] Have not recourse to any unlawful means for succour. Arnald.

12. — the sinner that goeth two ways!] See chap. i. 28. The sinner that is insincere and hypocritical. Arnald. The man who is unstable in his ways, impelled here and there by doubt and distrust. Junius.

14. — when the Lord shall visit you?] Shall visit you in His anger, and judge you according to your works. Calmet.

18. — We will fall into the hands of the Lord, &c.] The author evidently makes allusion to the words of David when he was "in a great strait," 2 Sam. xxiv. 14. Calmet.

Chap. III. ver. 2. — hath given the father honour over the children,] Hath enjoined honour to be paid to the father by his children; has expressed His will that he should receive from them reverence and obedience. Arnald.

3. — maketh an atonement for his sins:] Many copies give the words "shall expiate his sins;" shall obtain remission and forgiveness of his sins when he prayeth. Arnald.

7. — will do service unto his parents, as to his masters.] That is, will behave himself towards them with the obedience of a servant, as well as the reverence of a child. See Luke xv. 29. Arnald.

CHAP. IV.

1 We may not despise the poor or fatherless, 11 but seek for wisdom, 20 and not be ashamed of some things, nor gainsay the truth, 30 nor be as lions in our houses.

---

13. — if his understanding fail,] Implying, that no infirmities attendant on old age can justify children in treating a parent with contempt, and in withholding from him that respect which is due to his sacred character. Calmet.

14. — instead of sins it shall be added to build thee up.] This passage has been variously interpreted. The sense seems to be similar to that of ver. 10. "In opposition to sin, (that is, to the effects of sin,) thy house shall be built up." Junius. In Scripture, the building of a man's house is a well known metaphor for raising up children, Gen. xvi. 2; Exod. i. 21, &c. Arnald.

17. — so shalt thou be beloved of him that is approved.] That is, by all worthy and good men, such as are themselves for their excellent qualities approved by God and man. Arnald.

19. — mysteries are revealed unto the meek.] See an illustration of this at Matt. xi. 25, "Thou hast hid these things (that is, the mysteries of the Gospel) from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes;" where babes, or those who have humility of mind, are opposed to such as are selfsufficient and wise in their own conceit. See Ps. xxv. 9, 14. Of Moses it was particularly true, that, as none was more meek than he, so none received greater favours or more frequent communications from God. Arnald. In several copies and versions this verse is wholly wanting.

22. — for it is not needful for thee to see with thine eyes &c.] Implying, that there are many things which we cannot know or comprehend, and respecting which therefore it is the part of wisdom not to inquire. Calmet. The words, "to see with thine eyes," are not in the Greek copies, but are added from the Latin. The literal sense of the Greek is, "Hidden things are not necessary to thee." Arnald.

24. — an evil suspicion hath overthrown their judgment.] Meaning, that an evil suspicion, founded on men's vain opinion, has led them into many and great mistakes. Arnald.

25. Without eyes thou shalt want light:] "Not having eyes, thou shalt want light." A comparison is intended between blind men, and those who, from a vain presumption of mind, suppose themselves very clearsighted in matters of knowledge. Junius.

26. A stubborn heart] Alluding to that sort of stubbornness, which perseveres in a pursuit, without regard to decency and prudence.

—— he that loveth danger] The rash and foolhardy, who without reason exposes himself to danger. Calmet.

30. — and alms maketh &c.] There is a comparison; "So alms maketh an atonement for sins." Alms or true benevolence accompanied with sincere repentance. Arnald.

31. — shall find a stay.] Shall himself receive succour from others in the time of need. Arnald.

Others translate, "shall minister in the holy place." Calmet. In either sense, it affords an useful reflection, that none should minister to the Holy One in the sacred office, but such as are truly wise and strictly religious. Arnald.

15. — shall judge the nations:] Implying, that those who hearken unto wisdom are most fit to rule and judge. Arnald.

17. For at the first she will walk &c.] That is, the way that leads to wisdom is rough at first setting out, and has several difficulties and turnings to perplex and discourage the traveller.

CHAP. VI.

2 Do not extol thine own conceit, 7 but make choice of a friend. 18 Seek wisdom betimes. 20 It is grievous to some, 28 yet the fruits thereof are pleasant. 35 Be ready to hear wise men.

INSTEAD of a friend become not an enemy; for [thereby] thou shalt inherit an ill name, shame, and reproach: even so shall a sinner that hath a double tongue.

2 Extol not thyself in the counsel of thine own heart; that thy soul be not torn in pieces as a bull [straying alone.]

Chap. V. ver. 4. Say not, I have sinned, &c.] That is, If hitherto thou hast experienced the clemency of God, take not thence occasion to contemn His justice; He is waiting till thou hast filled up the measure of thy sins; if His wrath is slow, it is not the less to be dreaded. Calmet.

5. Concerning propitiation, &c.] Do not presume too much upon pardon, and thereby be induced to sin the more frequently in expectation of obtaining it. Arnald.

9. Winnow not with every wind,] That is, Be not inconstant and volatile in thy opinions and conduct; yield not to every one who would prejudice thee, and influence thy mind. Calmet. It seems to be a proverbial expression. See Eph. iv. 14. Arnald. Respecting the mode of winnowing in the East, see note at Ruth iii. 2, and Ps. i. 4.

10. — let thy word be the same.] "Let thy word be one," that is, let thy discourse be of a piece, consistent with itself. Grotius.

14. — for a foul shame is upon the thief, &c.] Implying, that the base and secret whisperer is worse than he who steals the property of others. Arnald.

15. Be not ignorant of any thing &c.] The meaning seems to be, Endeavour to get as much knowledge and insight into affairs as you can, whether they be matter of speculation or of practice. The learned Hooker's remark on this passage is, "that we should be diligent observers of circumstances, the little regard whereof is the nurse of vulgar folly: and Solomon's great attention thereto was what made him so eminent above others; for he gave good heed, and pierced every thing to the very bottom, and by those means gained more knowledge, and became the author of many parables." Arnald.

Chap. VI. ver. 1. Instead of a friend become not &c.] "After having been a friend, become not, &c." He forbids inconstancy and lightness in friendships. Calmet.

2. — as a bull [straying alone.] The words "straying alone" are not in the original, but are added by our translators, or may have crept accidentally into the text from the margin. The meaning of the sentence has been variously conjectured. Lest thy soul be distracted, pulled different ways, like a bull in toils. Arnald. Lest thy mind be hurried away by its passions and desires, like a wild and lustful bull. Badwell.

3. Thou shalt eat up thy leaves, &c.] A proper description of a man who is carried away and ruled by his lusts. The metaphor is taken from a tree, the loss of whose leaves either kills or starves the fruit. By "losing thy fruit" is meant, Thou shalt defeat thy ends, blast thy hopes, and fail of the success at which thou aimest. To become "a dry tree," is the natural consequence of the loss of fruit and leaves. Arnald.

6 Be in peace with many: nevertheless have but one counseller of a thousand.

‖ Or, get him in the time of trouble.

7 If thou wouldest get a friend, ‖ prove him first, and be not hasty to credit him.

10 [a] Again, some friend is a companion at the table, and will not continue in the day of thy affliction.

13 Separate thyself from thine enemies, and take heed of thy friends.

14 A faithful friend is a strong defence: and he that hath found such an one hath found a treasure.

15 Nothing doth countervail a faithful friend, and his excellency is invaluable.

16 A faithful friend is the medicine of life; and they that fear the Lord shall find him.

17 Whoso feareth the Lord shall direct his friendship aright: for as he is, so shall his neighbour be also.

18 My son, gather instruction from thy youth up: so shalt thou find wisdom till thine old age.

19. Come unto her as one that ploweth &c.] That is, Study the lessons of wisdom with diligence and patience, like that of the husbandman, and thou shalt reap the fruits of thy care in an abundant harvest of good. Calmet.

21. She will lie upon him as a mighty stone of trial;] This expression, as St. Jerome observes, is taken from an exercise kept up in Palestine in his time, when young men used to make trial of their strength by lifting up great stones as high as they could. So Zechariah, chap. xii. 3, in allusion to this custom, speaks of "a burdensome stone." In this exercise, if men attempted to lift up a stone too ponderous for their strength, they were in danger of its falling upon them and crushing them to death. Thus wisdom is here said to resemble one of these stones of trial. Many try to wield it, but few have strength sufficient; they fail after slender efforts, and sometimes retire from the pursuit without making any trial. Calmet.

22. — wisdom is according to her name,] Here seems to be an allusion to the original meaning of the word, by which wisdom is expressed in the language, whether Hebrew or Syriack, in which this book was written; but, as the book does not now exist in that original language, we are at a loss to discover what the particular allusion is. Calmet. Or perhaps the meaning may be, Wisdom belongs only to the wise, who are few in number. Junius.

Chap. VII. ver. 4. Seek not of the Lord preeminence,] The design of the author, in this and the two following verses, seems to be, to check the ambitious spirit of those who are forward to thrust themselves into places of power and authority, and perhaps are not able to fill them with sufficiency. Arnald.

5. Justify not thyself before the Lord;] Because, however plausible and holy a man may appear before others, he cannot think to impose upon God, who knows the imperfection of our best services. Arnald.

Chap. VIII. ver. 3. — and heap not wood upon his fire.] The meaning is, Quarrel not with an abusive person, lest thou irritate him the more.

4. Jest not with a rude man,] With a person who wants good breeding, for he will make the failings or misfortunes of thy family the subject of his coarse raillery. Arnald. The Latin copies give the sense. Keep not company with an ignorant unlearned person. Calmet.

10. Kindle not the coals of a sinner,] That is, Do not irritate and provoke a wicked man. Junius.

11. Rise not up [in anger] at the presence &c.] The words "in anger," are not in the original, but are added by our translators. The sense seems to be, Withstand not to his face a violent quarrelsome person, lest he endeavour to ensnare thee by thy words. Arnald, Calmet.

12. — count it but lost.] Thou wilt be in danger not only of losing thy debt, but of drawing on thyself a new and powerful enemy; for great men are sometimes offended when they are asked for what they owe. This and some following maxims are maxims of mere prudence. Calmet.

10 Forsake not an old friend; for the new is not comparable to him: a new friend is as new wine; when it is old, thou shalt drink it with pleasure.

Chap. X. ver. 5. — and upon the person of the scribe shall he lay his honour.] The title of scribe belonged literally to a copier of the law, but it extended also to those who were learned in explaining it, and answering difficulties respecting it. 23. — that hath understanding;] Meaning, a man that is just and good, according to the usual sense of the terms, "wisdom" and "understanding" in this book.

— neither is it convenient to magnify] Neither is it proper that a sinful man should be treated with honour. Junius. Many versions have "a sinful rich man," as opposed to "the poor man" in the former part of the verse. Arnald.

26. Be not overwise &c.] Be not conceited of thy work, nor boast of thy superiour skill in thy trade or profession; neither be slothful in the time of poverty, or ashamed to earn thy livelihood by labour. Arnald.

28. — glorify thy soul in meekness,] We should connect this with what precedes: If thou art in poverty, be not overwhelmed by it; preserve thy patience and equableness; and give to thy soul honour according to the dignity thereof; that is, preserve its firmness and dignity, and suffer it not to sink into abasement, which is unworthy of it. Calmet.

29. — him that sinneth against his own soul?] It seems to refer to the covetous man; him that is so niggardly and covetous, as to deny himself even common necessaries. Arnald.

nours, since such unexpected issues of fortune are brought about by the hand of Providence. Junius.

9. Strive not] Enter not into litigation; "and sit not in judgment with sinners." The sense may be, Sit not on the bench with corrupt judges. Or, applied to private life, Associate not, consult not, with sinners. The expression is similar at Ps. i. 1. Arnald.

16. Error and darkness &c.] "Errour and darkness" are the natural attendants on sin; God blinds the understanding of sinners.

20. Be stedfast in thy covenant,] In the covenant which thou hast made with God, and remain firm in thy reliance on His promises. Junius.

21. Marvel not at the works of sinners;] That is, If thou shouldest see a sinner prosperous in his fortunes, be not surprised, envy him not, desire not his happiness; for it will be of short duration, and God will interfere in His good time. Calmet.

30. Like as a partridge taken &c.] As a tame partridge kept in a cage by its arts decoys others of the like kind into the net spread for them, so the proud man watches for another's fall, and endeavours to ensnare him. By the proud man is here meant the deceitful man mentioned in the former verse, the false friend who intrudes upon private families with the mischievous design of injuring and exposing them. Pliny and Aristotle both take notice of the tame partridge, and of its cunning in enticing other. Arnald.

CHAP. XII.

2 Be not liberal to the ungodly. 10 Trust not thine enemy, nor the wicked.

WHEN thou wilt do good, know to whom thou doest it; so shalt thou be thanked for thy benefits.

2 Do good to the godly man, and thou shalt find a recompence; and if not from him, yet from the most High.

3 There can no good come to him that is always occupied in evil, nor to him that giveth no alms.

4 Give to the godly man, and help not a sinner.

5 Do well unto him that is lowly, but give not to the ungodly: hold back thy bread, and give it not unto him, lest he overmaster thee thereby: for [else] thou shalt receive twice as much evil for all the good thou shalt have done unto him.

6 For the most High hateth sinners, and will repay vengeance unto the ungodly, and keepeth them against the mighty day of their punishment.

7 Give unto the good, and help not the sinner.

8 A friend cannot be known in prosperity: and an enemy cannot be hidden in adversity.

9 In the prosperity of a man enemies will be grieved: but in his adversity even a friend will depart.

10 Never trust thine enemy: for like as ‖ iron rusteth, so is his wickedness.

‖ Or, brass.

11 Though he humble himself, and go crouching, yet take good heed and beware of him, and thou shalt be unto him as if thou hadst wiped a lookingglass, and thou shalt know that his rust hath not been altogether wiped away.

CHAP. XIII.

1 Keep not company with the proud, or a mightier than thyself. 15 Like will to like. 21 The difference between the rich and the poor. 25 A man's heart will change his countenance.

HE that toucheth pitch shall be defiled therewith; and [a] he that hath fellowship with a proud man shall be like unto him.

2 Burden not thyself above thy power while thou livest; and have no fellowship with one that is mightier and richer than thyself: for how agree the kettle and the earthen pot together? † for if the one be smitten against the other, it shall be broken.

† Or, this shall smite against it, and be broken.

Chap. XII. ver. 4. — and help not a sinner.] It seems intended here to inculcate, that in the distribution of our charity we should make a distinction of the persons on whom we bestow it, and give to the most deserving. Arnald.

5. — lest he overmaster thee thereby:] Lest he strengthen himself in wickedness and abuse thy kindness, and apply the means afforded him to thy prejudice and disadvantage. Arnald.

10. — like as iron rusteth, so is his wickedness.] As iron or brass, however it be rubbed and cleansed, still contracts rust, so does the illwill of an enemy always return: however he may appear to lay aside his malice, still it will not fail to shew itself again. Calmet.

11. — as if thou hadst wiped a lookingglass,] Or rather, a mirror made of polished metal, such as was anciently used. See the note on Exod. xxxviii. 8. When rust has once eaten into mirrors of this description, however carefully they may be wiped and cleaned, still it will be perpetually returning, so as at last to spoil the polish of the mirror, and render it useless. Such is the concealed hatred of a false friend, reconciled only in appearance; his resentment, which is firmly rivetted, will soon break out again, and all his former rancour will be again experienced. Arnald.

13. Who will pity a charmer &c.] The sense is, As no one pities those who pretend to charm serpents and are bitten by them; so no one pities the man who associates with sinners, when he is involved in the consequences of their sins. See the note on Jer. viii. 17.

—— wild beasts?] The word so translated includes serpents, vipers, and other such venomous creatures. Arnald.

18. — and clap his hands,] In token of his rejoicing at thy misfortunes: "and whisper much," or spread many false reports about thee secretly: "and change his countenance," be quite another person from what he appeared to be. Arnald. See Job xxvii. 23, and the note there.

6 If he have need of thee, he will deceive thee, and smile upon thee, and put thee in hope; he will speak thee fair, and say, What wantest thou?

7 And he will shame thee by his meats, until he have drawn thee dry twice or thrice, and at the last he will laugh thee to scorn: afterward, when he seeth thee, he will forsake thee, and shake his head at thee.

8 Beware that thou be not deceived, and brought down ‖ in thy jollity.

12 But cruelly he will lay up thy words, and will not spare to do thee hurt, and to put thee in prison.

13 Observe, and take good heed, for thou walkest in peril of thy overthrowing: when thou hearest these things, awake in thy sleep.

14 Love the Lord all thy life, and call upon him for thy salvation.

15 Every beast loveth his like, and every man loveth his neighbour.

16 All flesh consorteth according to kind, and a man will cleave to his like.

17 What fellowship hath the wolf with the lamb? so the sinner with the godly.

18 What agreement is there between the hyena and a dog? and what peace between the rich and the poor?

Before CHRIST about 200.

19 As the wild ass is the lion's prey in the wilderness: so the rich eat up the poor.

20 As the proud hate humility: so doth the rich abhor the poor.

21 A rich man beginning to fall is held up of his friends: but a poor man being down is thrust also away by his friends.

22 When a rich man is fallen, he hath many helpers: he speaketh things not to be spoken, and yet men justify him: the poor man slipped, and yet they rebuked him too; he spake wisely, and could have no place.

23 When a rich man speaketh, every man holdeth his tongue, and, look, what he saith, they extol it to the clouds: but if the poor man speak, they say, What fellow is this? and if he stumble, they will help to overthrow him.

24 Riches are good unto him that hath no sin, and poverty is evil in the mouth of the ungodly.

25 The heart of a man changeth his countenance, whether it be for good or evil: and a merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance.

26 A cheerful countenance is a token of a heart that is in prosperity; and the finding out of parables is a wearisome labour of the mind.

2 Wisdom embraceth those that fear God. 7 The wicked shall not get her. 11 We may not charge God with our faults: 14 for he made, and left us to ourselves.

7. — and at the last he will declare his wickedness.] The sense seems to be, that if such a person ever stumbles on a good action, some tincture of sordidness will discover itself, and spoil the grace of it. Arnald.

8. — hath a wicked eye;] See note at Prov. xxii. 9.

— and despiseth men.] That is, he overlooks the wants and miseries of other men. Arnald.

9. — is not satisfied with his portion;] Is like a dissatisfied guest at the table of another. Allusion seems to be made to the ancient custom of dividing out equal portions to the several guests on festival occasions. Calmet. See Gen. xliii. 34, and the notes there.

10. A wicked eye envieth [his] bread,] Grudges to himself and others the very bread at his table. Arnald.

11. — do good to thyself, and give &c.] Do not deny to thyself necessaries and conveniences by forbearing to use the good things which God hath given thee to enjoy, nor abstain from offering to God that portion of thy substance which is due. Arnald.

12. — that the covenant of the grave is not shewed unto thee.] That the appointed time of thy death is not shewed to thee. Grotius. Thou knowest not when thou shalt die.

14. Defraud not thyself] In the Latin copies, "Deprive not thyself of the blessings of a good day, and let not a portion of the good things which God bestows pass away from thee." By the expression "good day" the Hebrews mean a festival day. Calmet.

16. — and sanctify thy soul;] There is considerable difference as to this expression in the various copies. The meaning here seems to be, Use the good things of life in such a manner as God approves. Arnold.

18. As of the green leaves &c.] Homer has made a beautiful comparison of the race of men to the leaves of a tree, remarkably similar to this of the Son of Sirach. Grotius.

22. — as one that traceth,] As a hunter that tracketh the footsteps of his game. Implying, that wisdom should be pursued with all the eagerness and vigilance of a hunter. Calmet. In this verse, and those which follow, is an elegant personification of wisdom, as at Prov. ix. Junius.

23. He that prieth in at her windows] Allusion seems here to be made to the manner, in which it was the practice of assiduous lovers in ancient times to pay court to their mistresses. The sense of these verses is better given in the Latin version than in our translation. "He that prieth in at her windows and hearkens at her doors; he that lodgeth near her house,—he shall set his children in her shelter, &c." ver. 26. Calmet.

24. — fasten a pin in her walls.] An expression which implies the having a sure and constant abode with her. See notes at Ezra ix. 8; Is. xxii. 23. It is a metaphor taken from the fastening of tents with pins. Grotius.

19 The mountains also and foundations of the earth shall be shaken with trembling, when the Lord looketh upon them.

20 No heart can think upon these things worthily: and who is able to conceive his ways?

21 It is a tempest which no man can see: for the most part of his works are hid.

23 He that wanteth understanding will think upon vain things: and a foolish man erring imagineth follies.

24 My son, hearken unto me, and learn knowledge, and mark my words with thy heart.

9. — the people of perdition,] The people devoted to destruction, or fit to be destroyed. The Canaanites seem to be meant. Arnald.

10. — the six hundred thousand footmen,] He speaks of the Israelites who came out from Egypt, who afterwards, by their disobedient conduct in the wilderness, provoked the Lord to destroy them during their wanderings for forty years. Moses tells us, that those who bore arms were 600,000, besides women, old men, &c. Exod. xii. 37. Calmet.

14. Make way for every work of mercy:] The different copies and versions are here much at variance. Some copies give, "The Lord will assign a place (of respect and dignity) to every act of mercy: every one shall find according to his works." The general meaning seems to be, that God will take account of every good deed, and that nothing shall remain without its due recompense. Calmet.

15. The Lord hardened Pharaoh,] See notes at Exod. iv. 21; viii. 32; ix. 12.

16. — with an adamant.] That is, most firmly and powerfully: the adamant being the hardest of stones, it is used to express that which is most strong and not to be overcome. Junius. The meaning seems to be, that the ways, the decrees, the counsels, of God, are placed far above our comprehension, so that it is impossible to penetrate into His secrets; or that God dwells in a light to which no mortal can approach, 1 Tim. vi. 16. Calmet.

22. — his covenant is afar off;] Rather, His judgment is afar off. Grotius.

27. He garnished his works &c.] He garnished or beautifully prepared His works "for ever," or to last for ages.

—— the chief of them unto all generations:] The words may rather be rendered, "their principles in their generations," meaning the established and unalterable principles by which natural bodies are continued. Arnald.

only the latter part of it. Grotius supposes, that it has accidentally crept into the text from the margin. Some have thought that the five senses are meant by "the five operations." It is more probable however that those are meant, which are distinctly enumerated in the next verse.

8. He set his eye upon their hearts,] He filled them with light from Himself, that they might magnify and adore Him in the contemplation of His works. Calmet.

10. — the elect] Those to whom God has imparted this light, and, in particular, Israel, His elect and peculiar people. Arnald.

11. — the law of life] Meaning, a law which gives life to those who observe it, Lev. xviii. 5; Ezek. xx. 11. Calmet.

16. — fleshy hearts for stony.] An expression taken from Ezek. xxxvi. 26.

22. The alms of a man is as a signet with him,] By "alms" is here meant generally kindness towards our neighbours. The expression implies, that God preserves the remembrance of all charitable deeds, keeps it, as it were, sealed in His sacred treasures, in order to bestow a due recompense in His season. Calmet. The value God sets upon acts of mercy and kindness is here expressed by the apple (or pupil) of an eye, and the signet on the right hand; see Jer. xxii. 24; Hag. ii. 23; Cant. viii. 6; where the seal or signet denotes what is near and dear to man, and, as such, is always preserved near him, and under his immediate care. Arnald.

— and give repentance to his sons and daughters.] These words are not in the Latin copies. As they stand, it seems best to connect them with the following verse, "He will allow time for repentance to their sons, &c; but afterwards He will rise up and recompense them, &c." Calmet.

27. Who shall praise the most High &c.] That is, the living only can pay their devotions to God, and therefore repentance should not be deferred till the time of death, when it will be too late. Arnald.

30. — all things cannot be in men,] Men are compassed with follies and infirmities, and therefore they have the greater need of the compassion of God, mentioned in the preceding verse. Junius, Arnald.

31. — yet the light thereof faileth:] Rather, "yet even this suffers eclipse." The sense is, If even the sun, the brightest of God's works, has its defects, much less can human nature be accounted perfect. Arnald.

5 Who shall number the strength of his majesty? and who shall also tell out his mercies?

6 As for the wondrous works of the Lord, there may nothing be taken from them, neither may any thing be put unto them, neither can the ground of them be found out.

7 When a man hath done, then he beginneth; and when he leaveth off, then he shall be doubtful.

8 What is man, and whereto serveth he? what is his good, and what is his evil?

13 The mercy of man is toward his neighbour; but the mercy of the Lord is upon all flesh: he reproveth, and nurtureth, and teacheth, and bringeth again, as a shepherd his flock.

14 He hath mercy on them that receive discipline, and that diligently seek after his judgments.

15 [f] My son, blemish not thy good deeds, [f] Chap. 41. 22. neither use uncomfortable words when thou givest any thing.

16 Shall not the dew asswage the heat? so is a word better than a gift.

17 Lo, is not a word better than a gift? but both are with a gracious man.

18 A fool will upbraid churlishly, and a gift of the envious consumeth the eyes.

19 Learn before thou speak, and use physick or ever thou be sick.

20 Before judgment [g] examine thyself, [g] 1 Cor. 11. 28, 31. and in the day of visitation thou shalt find mercy.

21 Humble thyself before thou be sick, and in the time of sins shew repentance.

24 [h] Think upon the wrath that shall be [h] Chap. 7. 17, 36. at the end, and the time of vengeance, when he shall turn away his face.

25 When thou hast enough, remember the time of hunger: and when thou art rich, think upon poverty and need.

26 From the morning until the evening the time is changed, and all things are soon done before the Lord.

27 [i] A wise man will fear in every thing, [i] Prov. 28. 14. and in the day of sinning he will beware of offence: but a fool will not observe time.

28 Every man of understanding knoweth wisdom, and will give praise unto him that found her.

32. He vieweth the power &c.] The meaning is, The sun is exalted in the heavens, man is upon earth. If he then suffers eclipse, what wonder is it that man should partake of imperfections? Grotius.

Chap. XVIII. ver. 3. — dividing holy things — from profane.] Having separated the people of Israel, as a holy people to Himself, from other nations, and among them appointed some persons and things to be holy. Arnald.

7. — then he shall be doubtful.] Shall be lost in doubt and astonishment. The sentence refers to the contemplation of the Divine perfections, in which he who advances as far as his abilities can carry him, then only beginneth. Calmet.

11. Therefore is God patient with them,] As God knows the weakness of man, the shortness of his life, and the many evils which encompass him, therefore He does not proceed against him for every offence, but bears with him for a time, waits for his amendment, and shews His great tenderness towards him by giving him many gracious calls and seasonable warnings. Arnald.

16. Shall not the dew &c.] The sense seems to be, As the gentle dew, which is apparently of small efficacy, assuages the heat and allays the scorching wind, so a mild word (compared to the dew at Deut. xxxii. 2) produces a more powerful effect than a gift. Arnald.

20. Before judgment examine thyself.] Examine seriously the state of thy soul before the season of death and judgment. Calmet.

22. — to be justified.] To acquit thyself of thy vow. He alludes to Deut. xxiii. 21, 22. Calmet.

23. — be not as one that tempteth the Lord.] By approaching Him with dissipated thoughts, and in a disrespectful manner. Calmet.

24. Think upon the wrath that shall be] That is, if thou inconsiderately temptest the Lord. Junius.

2 Wine and women seduce wise men. 7 Say not all thou hearest. 17 Reprove thy friend without anger. 22 There is no wisdom in wickedness.

A LABOURING man that is given to drunkenness shall not be rich: and he that contemneth small things shall fall by little and little.

4 [a] He that is hasty to give credit is lightminded; and he that sinneth shall offend against his own soul.

5 Whoso taketh pleasure in wickedness shall be condemned: but he that resisteth pleasures crowneth his life.

6 He that can rule his tongue shall live without strife; and he that hateth babbling shall have less evil.

7 Rehearse not unto another that which is told unto thee, and thou shalt fare never the worse.

17 ‖ Admonish thy neighbour before thou threaten him; and not being angry, give place to the law of the most High. ‖ Or, Reprove.

18 The fear of the Lord is the first step ‖ to be accepted [of him,] and wisdom obtaineth his love. ‖ Or, of receiving him.

19 The knowledge of the commandments of the Lord is the doctrine of life: and they that do things that please him shall receive the fruit of the tree of immortality.

20 The fear of the Lord is all wisdom; and in all wisdom is the performance of the law, and the knowledge of his omnipotency.

21 If a servant say to his master, I will not do as it pleaseth thee; though afterward he do it, he angereth him that nourisheth him.

22 The knowledge of wickedness is not wisdom, neither at any time the counsel of sinners prudence.

23 There is a wickedness, and the same an abomination; and there is a fool wanting in wisdom.

29. They that were of understanding &c.] They that are conversant in the sayings of the wise, become wise themselves, and deliver parables for the instruction of others.

Chap. XIX. ver. 1. — he that contemneth small things &c.] This maxim, which is important in economy and politicks, is no less so in morality. A man should never be careless in any part of his conduct, but should avoid even the least faults from the fear of being led into greater. Arnald.

3. — a bold man] A man hardened in debaucheries.

4. He that is hasty to give credit] The author seems to speak of a person who gives himself up to debauched pleasures. "He that is easily led away by enticements." Calmet.

8. — talk not of other men's lives;] Be not forward in spreading unfavourable rumours of their lives and conduct.

9. For he heard — thee,] That is, the person of whom thou speakest, often hears, or may hear thee.

10. — be bold,] Be bold in suppressing it. Arnald.

12. As an arrow &c.] As an arrow sticking in a man's flesh frets and galls him till it is drawn forth, so "a fool" has no ease or quiet till he publishes what he has heard, and discharges his arrow at his neighbour.

13. Admonish a friend,] Have an explanation with a friend, give him a friendly admonition.

17. — and not being angry, give place &c.] Abstaining from all haste and anger, after due admonition, proceed with more severity against him, as the law of God directs, and make him sensible of his misconduct in a more publick manner. Arnald.

16 The fool saith, I have no friends, I have no thank for all my good deeds, and they that eat my bread speak evil of me.

17 How oft, and of how many shall he be laughed to scorn! for he knoweth not aright what it is to have; and it is all one unto him as if he had it not.

25. — and there is one that turneth aside] There is a great variety here among the different versions, and interpreters have been much at a loss respecting the sense. 10 The way of sinners is made plain with stones, but at the end thereof is the pit of hell.

11 He that keepeth the law of the Lord getteth the understanding thereof: and the perfection of the fear of the Lord is wisdom.

12 He that is not ‖ wise will not be taught: ‖ Or, witty.
[l] but there is a wisdom which multiplieth bitterness. [l] Eccles. 1. 18.

13 The ‖ knowledge of a wise man shall abound like a flood: and his counsel is like a pure fountain of life. ‖ Or, subtilly.

14 [m] The inner parts of a fool are like a broken vessel, and he will hold no knowledge as long as he liveth. [m] Chap. 32. 5.

15 If a skilful man hear a wise word, he will commend it, and [n] add unto it: but as soon as one of no understanding heareth it, it displeaseth him, and he casteth it behind his back. [n] Prov. 9. 8.

---

21. — through want:] Through want of means, opportunity, and power; and thus he escapes all remorse of conscience which might trouble his rest. Arnald.

22. There is that destroyeth &c.] There is that destroyeth his soul, being led into sin by false shame.

25. A thief is better &c.] For the thief only takes away the property of another; but the liar or calumniator steals his reputation and character, which is more valuable than riches. Calmet.

32. Necessary patience in seeking &c.] The sense seems to be, that it is far better for a man to live in a humble dependence upon God, and patient search to know His will, than to be guided by himself only, without any further help than the feeble light of his own reason. The Greek words, translated "that leadeth his life without a guide," seem properly to mean, "an uncontrolled director of his own life and actions, driving furiously and madly, without any check or restraint." Arnald.

Chap. XXI. ver. 7. — but a man of understanding knoweth when he slippeth.] A man of understanding, who coolly weighs the arguments of the eloquent man, is not to be imposed upon by artifice, but soon detects his misrepresentation, and the inconclusiveness of his reasoning. Arnald.

8. — is like one that gathereth himself stones &c.] That is, is heaping up ruin to himself. Arnald.

10. — is made plain with stones,] Is a broad and plain way, as if paved with stones.

12. — there is a wisdom which multiplieth bitterness.] That sort of wisdom, which displays itself in schemes of mischief, "multiplieth bitterness," and inherits misery and sorrow. Arnald.

14. The inner parts] The heart. Calmet.

Before CHRIST about 300.

16 The talking of a fool is like a burden in the way: but grace shall be found in the lips of the wise.

17 They enquire at the mouth of the wise man in the congregation, and they shall ponder his words in their heart.

18 As is a house that is destroyed, so is wisdom to a fool: and the knowledge of the unwise is as talk ‖ without sense.

‖ Or, not to be enquired after.

19 Doctrine unto fools is as fetters on the feet, and like manacles on the right hand.

[g] Chap. 19. 30.

20 [g] A fool lifteth up his voice with laughter; but a wise man doth scarce smile a little.

21 Learning is unto a wise man as an ornament of gold, and like a bracelet upon his right arm.

22 A foolish man's foot is soon in his [neighbour's] house: but a man of experience is ashamed of him.

23 A fool will peep in at the door into the house: but he that is well nurtured will stand without.

24 It is the rudeness of a man to hearken at the door: but a wise man will be grieved with the disgrace.

25 The lips of talkers will be telling such things as pertain not unto them: but the words of such as have understanding are weighed in the balance.

26 The heart of fools is in their mouth: but the mouth of the wise is in their heart.

27 When the ungodly curseth Satan, he curseth his own soul.

[h] Chap. 28. 13.

28 [h] A whisperer defileth his own soul, and is hated wheresoever he dwelleth.

CHAP. XXII.

1 Of the slothful man, 3 and a foolish daughter. 11 Weep rather for fools, than for the dead. 13 Meddle not with them. 16 The wise man's heart will not shrink. 20 What will lose a friend.

A SLOTHFUL man is compared to a filthy stone, and every one will hiss him out to his disgrace.

Before CHRIST about 300.

2 A slothful man is compared to the filth of a dunghil: every man that takes it up will shake his hand.

3 An evilnurtured son is the dishonour of his father that begat him: and a [foolish] daughter is born to his loss.

[i] Prov. 13. 22.

4 [i] A wise daughter ‖ shall bring an inheritance to her husband: but she that liveth dishonestly is her father's heaviness.

‖ Or, shall be the heir of her husband.

5 She that is bold dishonoureth both her father and her husband, but they both shall despise her.

6 A tale out of season [is as] musick in mourning: but stripes and correction of wisdom are never out of time.

7 Whoso teacheth a fool is as one that glueth a potsherd together, and as he that waketh one from a sound sleep.

8 He that telleth a tale to a fool speaketh to one in a slumber: when he hath told his tale, he will say, What is the matter?

9 If children live honestly, and have ‖ wherewithal, they shall cover the baseness of their parents.

‖ Or, an art.

10 But children, being haughty, through disdain and want of nurture do stain the nobility of their kindred.

[k] Chap. 38. 16.

11 [k] Weep for the dead, for he hath lost the light: and weep for the fool, for he wanteth understanding: make little weeping for the dead, for he is at rest: but the life of the fool is worse than death.

12 Seven days do men mourn for him that is dead; but for a fool and an ungodly man all the days of his life.

13 Talk not much with a fool, and go not to him that hath no understanding: [c] beware of him, lest thou have trouble, and thou shalt never be defiled ‖ with his fooleries: depart from him, and thou shalt find rest, and never be ‖ disquieted with madness.

[c] Chap. 12. 12.

‖ Or, when he shakes off his filth.

‖ Or, wearied.

14 What is heavier than lead? and what is the name thereof, but a fool?

---

16. — is like a burden in the way:] Grievous and heavy to be borne.

18. As is a house that is destroyed, &c.] The wisdom of a fool is like a house in ruins; all is confusion in his mind, without order or regularity. Calmet.

19. Doctrine unto fools &c.] Implying, that the fool hates discipline and instruction; he considers them a hindrance to the pursuit of his inclinations, and an obstacle to his pleasures. Arnald.

27. When the ungodly curseth Satan, &c.] That is, Whenever an ungodly man condemneth ungodliness, he condemneth himself. Or, Whenever the wicked blame Satan as the author of their failings, and accuse him as their tempter and betrayer, they ought rather to blame themselves. Arnald.

Chap. XXII. ver. 1. — is compared to a filthy stone,] Is despised and neglected. In the Latin version the sense is, A slothful person is so despicable that men pursue him with stones and dirt, or with reproachful language. Arnald.

6. A tale out of season] A story meant to amuse, but told at an unseasonable time.

7. — is as one that glueth &c.] Meaning, that he altogether throws away his time and trouble. By "a fool" in these sentences, he means one who together with a want of understanding has a corrupt heart. Calmet.

11. — make little weeping &c.] That is, The fool is in a more lamentable condition than the dead.

12. Seven days] The customary time of mourning among the Jews. See the note at Gen. l. 10.

15 [a] Sand, and salt, and a mass of iron, is easier to bear, than a man without understanding.

[a] Prov. 27. 3.

16 As timber girt and bound together in a building cannot be loosed with shaking: so the heart that is stablished by advised counsel shall fear at no time.

17 A heart settled upon a thought of understanding is as a fair plaistering ‖ on the wall of a gallery.

‖ Or, of a polished wall.

18 Pales set on an high place will never stand against the wind: so a fearful heart in the imagination of a fool cannot stand against any fear.

19 He that pricketh the eye will make tears to fall: and he that pricketh the heart maketh it to shew her knowledge.

20 Whoso casteth a stone at the birds frayeth them away: and he that upbraideth his friend breaketh friendship.

21 Though thou drewest a sword at thy friend, yet despair not: for there may be a returning [to favour.]

22 If thou hast opened thy mouth against thy friend, fear not; for there may be a reconciliation: except for upbraiding, or pride, or disclosing of secrets, or a treacherous wound: for for these things every friend will depart.

23 Be faithful to thy neighbour in his poverty, that thou mayest rejoice in his prosperity: abide stedfast unto him in the time of his trouble, that thou mayest be heir with him in his heritage: for a mean estate is not always to be contemned: nor the rich that is foolish to be had in admiration.

24 As the vapour and smoke of a furnace goeth before the fire; so reviling before blood.

25 I will not be ashamed to defend a friend; neither will I hide myself from him.

26 And if any evil happen unto me by him, every one that heareth it will beware of him.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 A prayer for grace to flee sin. 9 We may not use swearing: 14 but remember our parents. 16 Of three sorts of sin. 23 The adulterous wife sinneth many ways.

O LORD, Father and Governor of all my whole life, leave me not to their counsels, and let me not fall by them.

2 Who will set scourges over my thoughts, and the discipline of wisdom over mine heart? that they spare me not for mine ignorances, and it pass not by my sins:

3 Lest mine ignorances increase, and my sins abound to my destruction, and I fall before mine adversaries, and mine enemy rejoice over me, whose hope is far from thy mercy.

4 O Lord, Father and God of my life, give me not a proud look, but turn away from thy servants always ‖ a haughty mind.

‖ Or, a giant.

5 Turn away from me vain hopes and concupiscence, and thou shalt hold him up that is desirous always to serve thee.

6 Let not the greediness of the belly nor lust of the flesh take hold of me; and give not over me thy servant into an impudent mind.

7 Hear, O ye children, the discipline of the mouth: he that keepeth it shall never be taken in his lips.

8 The sinner shall be left in his foolishness: both the evil speaker and the proud shall fall thereby.

15. Sand, and salt, &c.] This seems to be an imitation of Prov. xxvii. 3.

19. — he that pricketh the heart &c.] The sense seems to be, When a person reproves another in a home manner, and touches him to the quick, he conveys to him a lively sense of his faults, and by his affectionate admonitions teaches him wisdom, or a better conduct for the future. Arnald.

24. — so reviling before blood.] Reviling and quarrels go before the shedding of blood.

The praise of Wisdom.

WISDOM shall praise herself, and shall glory in the midst of her people.

The clause "if he acknowledge not &c." would be better rendered, If through forgetfulness he omit to do what he might have done, and swore he actually would do, he is guilty of a double fault. Arnald. The three descriptions of oaths mentioned in this verse seem to be, 1, Swearing and not remembering the oath: 2, Remembering the oath, and yet being careless and unconcerned about fulfilling it: 3, Swearing lightly and in jest, without any serious intention of making the oath good. Grotius.

12. — a word that is clothed about with death:] He seems to allude to the heinous crime of blasphemy. By the law of Moses the blasphemer was to be stoned, by those who heard him, by a summary process of the law, Lev. xxiv. 14; John x. 31. Calmet.

14. — when thou sittest among great men.] Though thou be admitted amongst great persons, and placed in an elevated station. Grotius.

16. Two sorts of men — and the third.] A form of speaking not uncommon in Scripture. See Prov. xxx. 15, 18, &c; Is. xvii. 6. Arnald. The three persons are "a hot mind," (or a passionate man,) a fornicator, and an adulterer. Calmet.

Chap. XXIV. ver. 1. Wisdom shall praise herself, &c.] The author of this book here gives the praise of wisdom, in imitation of Solomon in his Proverbs, chap. viii, and of the author of the book of Wisdom, chap. vii. He describes to us her origin and the magnificence of her works; he paints her as a queen of rare beauty and excellence, who invites all men, and especially the Israelites, to come to her and enjoy her riches and rewards. The Pagan philosophers had extolled to the greatest height their wisdom, science, and eloquence. The author of this book here opposes to them the heavenly wisdom of the Hebrews, as infinitely more ancient, more exalted, and illustrious. Calmet. Wisdom is here described as an essential attribute of God, and derived in a peculiar manner by the law of Moses to the Israelites, as their proper inheritance and possession. Arnald.

25. — as Phison] Or Pison. See note at Gen. ii. 11. The sense seems to be, "He filleth all things with His wisdom," or spreads His wisdom on every side, as Phison and Tigris spread their waters "in the time of the new fruits," that is, when they are swelled by the melting of the winter snows. Calmet.

26. — Jordan in the time of the harvest.] Of barley harvest. See note at Josh. iii. 15.

27. — as Geon in the time of vintage.] Geon, or Gihon. See note at Gen. ii. 13. Probably the clearness of the stream in the summer season is the point of comparison.

30, 31. I also came out as a brook &c.] The general sense is, that wisdom is a never failing source of living waters; and that, as streams enrich and make fruitful the ground, so does she make fruitful the hearts of men, distributing universally her influence, and assisting all by her light. Arnald.

34. — but for all them that seek wisdom.] Thus wisdom concludes her address by asserting, that she is anxious to communicate her blessings to all that are willing to accept her invitation, and to partake of her bounty. Calmet.

5 O how comely is the wisdom of old men, and understanding and counsel to men of honour!

6 Much experience is the crown of old men, and the fear of God is their glory.

7 There be nine things which I have judged in mine heart to be happy, and the tenth I will utter with my tongue: A man that hath joy of his children; and he that liveth to see the fall of his enemy:

The "nine things" are mentioned in ver. 7, 8, 9, 10; and the tenth, "the love of the Lord," at ver. 11. In our translation there are only eight things enumerated; but in the Latin translation there is added, after the eighth verse, "Blessed is he who findeth a true friend," the addition of which completes the number. Arnald.

— he that liveth to see the fall of his enemy:] The author here speaks according to the ideas of the Jews on this subject, who, by a corrupt understanding of their law, conceived hatred and revenge to be permitted, as sufficiently appears from our Saviour's words at Matt. v. 43. Calmet.

11. — passeth all things for illumination:] The sense seems to be, that the love of the Lord excels all the former instances of happiness that have been mentioned, and is more glorious than any of them. Arnald.

14. — but the affliction from them that hate me:] He means, that he would rather endure any affliction or misfortune than that which his enemy wishes him, or in which his enemy would take an unnatured pleasure in triumphing over him. Arnald.

21. Stumble not at the beauty &c.] Prostrate not thyself, throw not thyself away before a beautiful woman, captivated with her charms. Junius.

22. — if she maintain her husband,] If she bring a livelihood to a man, so that he is dependant upon her. Junius.

26. — cut her off from thy flesh,] That is, from thy body. For by matrimony a man and his wife become "one flesh," Gen. ii. 24. Drusius.

Before CHRIST about 204.

BLESSED is the man that hath a virtuous wife, for the number of his days shall be double.

2 A virtuous woman rejoiceth her husband, and he shall fulfil the years of his life in peace.

3 A good wife is a good portion, which shall be given in the portion of them that fear the Lord.

4 Whether a man be rich or poor, if he have a good heart toward the Lord, he shall at all times rejoice with a cheerful countenance.

5 There be three things that mine heart feareth; and for the fourth I was sore afraid: † the slander of a city, the gathering together of an unruly multitude, and a false accusation: all these are worse than death.

† Gr. an evil report.

6 But a grief of heart and sorrow is a woman that is jealous over another woman, and a scourge of the tongue which communicateth with all.

7 An evil wife is ‖ a yoke shaken to and fro: he that hath hold of her is as though he held a scorpion.

‖ Or, a yoke of oxen.

8 A drunken woman and a gadder abroad causeth great anger, and she will not cover her own shame.

9 The whoredom of a woman may be known in her haughty looks and eyelids.

[a] Chap. 42. 11.

10 [a] If thy daughter be shameless, keep her in straitly, lest she abuse herself through overmuch liberty.

11 Watch over an impudent eye: and marvel not if she trespass against thee.

12 She will open her mouth, as a thirsty traveller when he hath found a fountain, and drink of every water near her: by every ‖ hedge will she sit down, and open her quiver against every arrow.

‖ Or, stake.

13 The grace of a wife delighteth her husband, and her discretion will fatten his bones.

14 A silent and loving woman is a gift of the Lord; and there is nothing so much worth as a mind well instructed.

Before CHRIST about 203.

15 A shamefaced and faithful woman is a double grace, and her continent mind cannot be valued.

16 As the sun when it ariseth † in the high heaven; so is the beauty of a good wife in the ‖ ordering of her house.

† Gr. in the highest places of the Lord.

‖ Or, ornament

17 As the clear light is upon the holy candlestick; so is the beauty of the face ‖ in ripe age.

‖ Or, in constant age.

18 As the golden pillars are upon the sockets of silver; so are the ‖ fair feet with a constant ‖ heart.

‖ Or, comely. ‖ Or, breast

19 My son, keep the flower of thine age sound; and give not thy strength to strangers.

20 When thou hast gotten a fruitful possession through all the field, sow it with thine own seed, trusting in the goodness of thy stock.

21 So thy race which thou leavest shall be magnified, having the confidence of their good descent.

22 An harlot shall be accounted as ‖ spittle; but a married woman is a tower against death to her husband.

‖ Or, a swine.

23 A wicked woman is given as a portion to a wicked man: but a godly woman is given to him that feareth the Lord.

24 A dishonest woman contemneth shame: but an honest woman will reverence her husband.

25 A shameless woman shall be counted as a dog; but she that is shamefaced will fear the Lord.

26 A woman that honoureth her husband shall be judged wise of all; but she that dishonoureth him in her pride shall be counted ungodly of all.

27 A loud crying woman and a scold shall be sought out to drive away the enemies.

Chap. XXVI. ver. 5. — the slander of a city,] Rather, "the unjust hatred of a city." Calmet. "The ill will of one's own city." Arnald.

6. — a woman that is jealous over another] In the families of the Hebrews, where polygamy was tolerated, domestick peace was very frequently disturbed by the jealousies and quarrels of the different women amongst each other. Calmet. See the note on Gen. xvi. 4.

—— which communicateth with all.] Which makes itself known to all persons. Calmet. Or else the sense is, Which is common to, and generally goes along with, the four evils before mentioned. Grotius.

7. — is a yoke shaken to and fro:] Is as troublesome and vexatious to a man, as a yoke is to oxen when it does not fit their necks, and consequently frets them. Arnald.

9. — in her haughty looks] In her bold and impudent looks. Calmet.

17. — upon the holy candlestick;] The candlestick with seven branches, which burnt every night before the door of the sanctuary. Calmet. The author here describes the good and accomplished woman in terms of the greatest magnificence and beauty. She is as great an ornament to her family, as the sun is to the universe; her beauty in her middle age has as chaste and comely an appearance, as the lamps in the sanctuary; and her feet, as well as her heart, go not astray, but are both fixed upon a sure and solid basis. Arnald.

19. — to strangers.] To strange women. Grotius.

20. When thou hast gotten &c.] A virtuous wife is here represented under the similitude of a fruitful field. Junius.

22. — as spittle;] The meaning is uncertain: the margin renders it "as swine." According to either, it is an expression of worthlessness.

27. — shall be sought out &c.] Is fit to drive away an enemy by the noise which she makes. Junius.

Before CHRIST about 200.

28 There be two things that grieve my heart; and the third maketh me angry: a man of war that suffereth poverty; and men of understanding that are not set by; and one that returneth from righteousness to sin; the Lord prepareth such an one for the sword.

29 A merchant shall hardly keep himself from doing wrong; and an huckster shall not be freed from sin.

CHAP. XXVII.

1 Of sins in selling and buying. 7 Our speech will tell what is in us. 16 A friend is lost by discovering his secrets. 25 He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it.

[a] Prov. 28. 21. ‖ Or, a thing indifferent. [b] Prov. 28. 4. 1 Tim. 6. 9.

MANY [a] have sinned for ‖ a small matter; and he that [b] seeketh for abundance will turn his eyes away.

2 As a nail sticketh fast between the joinings of the stones; so doth sin stick close between buying and selling.

3 Unless a man hold himself diligently in the fear of the Lord, his house shall soon be overthrown.

4 As when one sifteth with a sieve, the refuse remaineth; so the filth of man in ‖ Or, thought. [c] Prov. 27. 21. his ‖ talk.

[d] Matt. 7. 17. 6 [d] The fruit declareth if the tree have been dressed; so is the utterance of a conceit in the heart of man.

7 Praise no man before thou hearest him speak; for this is the trial of men.

8 If thou followest righteousness, thou shalt obtain her, and put her on, as a glorious long robe.

9 The birds will resort unto their like; so will truth return unto them that practise in her.

10 As the lion lieth in wait for the prey; so sin for them that work iniquity.

11 The discourse of a godly man is always with wisdom; but a fool changeth as the moon. Before CHRIST about 200.

12 If thou be among the indiscreet, observe the time; but be continually among men of understanding.

13 The discourse of fools is irksome, and their sport is the wantonness of sin.

14 The talk of him that sweareth much maketh the hair stand upright; and their brawls make one stop his ears.

15 The strife of the proud is bloodshedding, and their revilings are grievous to the ear.

16 Whoso discovereth secrets loseth his credit; and shall never find friend to his mind.

17 Love thy friend, and be faithful unto him: but if thou bewrayest his secrets, follow no more after him.

18 For as a man hath destroyed his enemy; so hast thou lost the love of thy neighbour.

19 As one that letteth a bird go out of his hand, so hast thou let thy neighbour go, and shalt not get him again.

20 Follow after him no more, for he is too far off; he is as a roe escaped out of the snare.

21 As for a wound, it may be bound up; and after reviling there may be reconcilement: but he that bewrayeth secrets is without hope.

[e] Prov. 10. 10. 22 He [e] that winketh with the eyes worketh evil: and he that knoweth him will depart from him.

‖ Or, alter his speech. 23 When thou art present, he will speak sweetly, and will admire thy words: but at the last he will ‖ writhe his mouth, and slander thy sayings.

24 I have hated many things, but nothing like him; for the Lord will hate him.

25 Whoso casteth a stone on high casteth it on his own head; and a deceitful stroke shall make wounds.

28. — a man of war] A man of courage, who has spent his life and strength in the service of his country. Calmet.

29. — and an huckster &c.] A "huckster" means a retailer. The author speaks of merchants, &c, as being always under temptations to commit frauds, and to engross undue profits. Arnald.

Chap. XXVII. ver. 1. — for a small matter;] "For a thing indifferent" in the margin; for worthless gain.

—— will turn his eyes away.] Will turn his eyes away from that which is right and just. Junius.

2. As a nail sticketh &c.] As a nail or wooden pin, when firmly wedged in a wall, cannot easily be taken out or separated, so is it equally difficult to prevent fraud and iniquity between buyer and seller, while each tries to overreach and impose upon the other. Arnald.

12. If thou be among the indiscreet, observe the time;] That is, If thou fallest into the company of idle and loose persons, enter not into conversation with them, as one of their associates, but defer speaking till some better opportunity. Arnald.

15. — is bloodshedding,] Causes bloodshedding. Junius.

20. Follow after him no more,] For it is in vain for you to try to regain his confidence. Calmet.

22. He that winketh with the eyes] The double dealing and dissembling person. See Prov. x. 10. "Worketh evil," implies the meditating and contriving some evil, while he appears to shew good will and approbation. Arnald.

25. Whoso casteth a stone &c.] Implying, that the mischief which a false friend is meditating and designing against others, shall often fall upon himself. Arnald.

—— shall make wounds.] Shall wound him who aims the stroke at another. Calmet.

Before CHRIST about 200.

26 [a] Whoso diggeth a pit shall fall therein: and he that setteth a trap shall be taken therein.

[a] Ps. 7. 15. Prov. 26. 27. Eccles. 10. 8.

27 He that worketh mischief, it shall fall upon him, and he shall not know whence it cometh.

28 Mockery and reproach are from the proud; but [b] vengeance, as a lion, shall lie in wait for them.

[b] Deut. 32. 35. Rom. 12. 19.

29 They that rejoice at the fall of the righteous shall be taken in the snare; and anguish shall consume them before they die.

30 Malice and wrath, even these are abominations; and the sinful man shall have them both.

CHAP. XXVIII.

1 Against revenge, 8 quarrelling, 10 anger, 15 and backbiting.

HE that revengeth shall find vengeance from the Lord, and he will surely keep his sins [in remembrance.]

2 Forgive thy neighbour the hurt that he hath done unto thee, so shall thy sins also be forgiven when thou prayest.

3 One man beareth hatred against another, and doth he seek pardon from the Lord?

4 He sheweth no mercy to a man, which is like himself: and doth he ask forgiveness of his own sins?

5 If he that is but flesh nourish hatred, who will intreat for pardon of his sins?

6 Remember thy end, and let enmity cease; [remember] corruption and death, and abide in the commandments.

7 Remember the commandments, and bear no malice to thy neighbour: [remember] the covenant of the Highest, and wink at ignorance.

[a] Chap. 8. 1.

8 [a] Abstain from strife, and thou shalt diminish thy sins: for a furious man will kindle strife.

9 A sinful man disquieteth friends, and maketh debate among them that be at peace.

Before CHRIST about 200.

10 [b] As the matter of the fire is, so it burneth: and as a man's strength is, so is his wrath; and according to his riches his anger riseth; and the stronger they are which contend, the more they will be inflamed.

[b] Prov. 26. 21.

11 An hasty contention kindleth a fire: and an hasty fighting sheddeth blood.

12 If thou blow the spark, it shall burn: if thou spit upon it, it shall be quenched: and both these come out of thy mouth.

13 [c] Curse the whisperer and double-tongued: for such have destroyed many that were at peace.

[c] Chap. 5. 14.

14 A backbiting tongue hath disquieted many, and driven them from nation to nation: strong cities hath it pulled down, and overthrown the houses of great men.

15 A ‖backbiting tongue hath cast out virtuous women, and deprived them of their labours.

‖ Or, a virtuous woman.

16 Whoso hearkeneth unto it shall never find rest, and never dwell quietly.

17 The stroke of the whip maketh marks in the flesh: but the stroke of the tongue breaketh the bones.

18 Many have fallen by the edge of the sword: but not so many as have fallen by the tongue.

19 Well is he that is defended from it, and hath not passed through the venom thereof; who hath not drawn the yoke thereof, nor hath been bound in her bands.

20 For the yoke thereof is a yoke of iron, and the bands thereof are bands of brass.

21 The death thereof is an evil death, the grave were better than it.

22 It shall not have rule over them that fear God, neither shall they be burned with the flame thereof.

23 Such as forsake the Lord shall fall into it; and it shall burn in them, and not

---

Chap. XXVIII. ver. 1. — and he will surely keep] The Lord will surely keep. Calmet.

2. Forgive thy neighbour &c.] It should be observed in what strong terms the doctrine of forgiveness is here pressed, even under the times of the Old Testament. It is from passages such as these, that a true judgment of the spirit of the law of Moses is to be formed; for in this law, it was the clear intention of God to encourage mutual love, kindness, and forgiveness. Calmet, Arnald.

7. — wink at ignorance.] Wink at, pass over, forgive, the offences of thy neighbour against thee committed through ignorance. Calmet.

10. As the matter of the fire] As the fuel of fire is, so, &c.

—— as a man's strength is, so is his wrath;] Meaning, that the violence of passion rages in proportion to the rank, power, &c. of those concerned.

12. — and both these come out of thy mouth.] Implying, that the words of the mouth may either effectually allay a dissension, or inflame it to a greater height.

15. — deprived them of their labours.] Caused them to be cast out by a divorce from their husband's house, and thus to lose the advantages which their industry and economy had procured. Calmet.

19. — hath not drawn the yoke thereof;] Hath not worn its yoke, hath not drawn it on his neck. Calmet.

21. The death thereof] The destruction of reputation, which it occasions, is worse than death.

23. — shall fall into it;] Shall be exposed to a backbiting tongue. Calmet.

24 Look that thou hedge thy possession about with thorns, and bind up thy silver and gold,

25 And weigh thy words in a balance, and make a door and bar for thy mouth.

26 Beware thou slide not by it, lest thou fall before him that lieth in wait.

CHAP. XXIX.

1 We must shew mercy and lend: 4 but the borrower must not defraud the lender. 9 Give alms. 14 A good man will not undo his surety. 18 To be surety and undertake for others is dangerous. 22 It is better to live at home than to sojourn.

HE that is merciful will lend unto his neighbour; and he that strengtheneth his hand keepeth the commandments.

Deut. 15. 8. Matt. 5. 42. Luke 6. 35. 2 [a] Lend to thy neighbour in time of his need, and pay thou thy neighbour again in due season.

3 Keep thy word, and deal faithfully with him, and thou shalt always find the thing that is necessary for thee.

4 Many, when a thing was lent them, reckoned it to be found, and put them to trouble that helped them.

5 Till he hath received, he will kiss a man's hand; and for his neighbour's money he will speak submissly: but when he should repay, he will prolong the time, and return words of grief, and complain of the time.

6 ‖ If he prevail, he shall hardly receive the half, and he will count as if he had found it: if not, he hath deprived him of his money, and he hath gotten him an enemy without cause: he payeth him with cursings and railings; and for honour he will pay him disgrace.

7 Many therefore have refused to lend for other men's ill dealing, fearing to be defrauded.

8 Yet have thou patience with a man in poor estate, and delay not to shew him mercy.

Before CHRIST about 200.

9 Help the poor for the commandment's sake, and turn him not away because of his poverty.

10 Lose thy money for thy brother and thy friend, and let it not rust under a stone to be lost.

11 [b] Lay up thy treasure according to the commandments of the most High, and it shall bring thee more profit than gold.

[b] Deut. 4. 37. Matt. 6. 20. Luke 11. 41. & 12. 33. Acts 10. 4. 1 Tim. 6. 18, 19.

[c] Tob. 4. 8, 9, 10.

13 It shall fight for thee against thine enemies better than a mighty shield and strong spear.

14 An honest man is surety for his neighbour: but he that is impudent will ‖ forsake him.

‖ Or, fail.

15 Forget not the friendship of thy surety, for he hath given his life for thee.

16 A sinner will overthrow the good estate of his surety:

17 And he that is of an unthankful mind will leave him [in danger] that delivered him.

18 Suretiship hath undone many of good estate, and shaken them as a wave of the sea: mighty men hath it driven from their houses, so that they wandered among strange nations.

19 A wicked man transgressing the commandments of the Lord shall fall into suretiship: and he that undertaketh and followeth other men's business for gain shall fall into suits.

20 Help thy neighbour according to thy power, and beware that thou thyself fall not into the same.

21 The [d] chief thing for life is water, and bread, and clothing, and an house to cover shame.

—— as a leopard.] As a female "leopard," which authors describe as far more furious than the male. Junius.

24. Look that thou hedge &c.] Meaning that, as it is commendable prudence to fence a field "with thorns, and to bind up silver and gold" in a purse; so no less care should be employed in guarding thy mouth, and keeping the door of thy lips, that no word may issue thence without being weighed and considered. Arnald. See the note on Mic. vii. 4.

Chap. XXIX. ver. 1. — he that strengtheneth his hand] To strengthen the poor man's hand, means to relieve or succour him. Arnald.

5. — he will kiss a man's hand;] To kiss the hand of another was anciently practised only by slaves. It here denotes that servility and baseness which a person who wants to borrow money will use to ingratiate himself with another, for the purpose of gaining his ends. Arnald.

6. If he prevail,] The sense seems to be, If the lender prevail, so as to recover his debt. Druisius.

12. Shut up alms in thy storehouses:] That is, Let thy storehouses be not for thyself alone, but let the poor and needy have a share in them. Calmet.

14. — he that is impudent] He that has lost all sense of shame. Junius.

15. — he hath given his life for thee.] He has exposed his life to risk, for the purpose of assisting thee. Calmet. Or, by "life" may be meant, fortunes, substance, the means of life. Arnald.

19. A wicked man — shall fall into suretiship:] The author implies, that it is so great a misfortune to become surety for a careless or fraudulent debtor, that God can send no greater evil for the chastisement of the greatest sinners. Calmet.

21. — and an house to cover shame.] A house to protect our feeble nature from the inclemencies of the weather. Junius.

Before CHRIST about 200.

mean cottage, than delicate fare in another man's house.

23 Be it little or much, hold thee contented, that thou hear not the reproach of thy house.

24 For it is a miserable life to go from house to house: for where thou art a stranger, thou darest not open thy mouth.

25 Thou shalt entertain, and feast, and have no thanks: moreover, thou shalt hear bitter words:

26 Come, thou stranger, and furnish a table, and feed me of that thou hast ready.

27 Give place, thou stranger, to an honourable man; my brother cometh to be lodged, and I have need of mine house.

28 These things are grievous to a man of understanding; the upbraiding of house-room, and reproaching of the lender.

CHAP. XXX.

Of children.

HE [a] that loveth his son causeth him oft to feel the rod, that he may have joy of him in the end.

[a] Prov. 13. 24. & 23. 13.

2 He that chastiseth his son shall have ‖ joy in him, and shall rejoice of him among his ‖ acquaintance.

5 While he lived, he [c] saw and rejoiced in him: and when he died, he was not sorrowful.

[c] Ps. 128.

6 He left behind him an avenger against his enemies, and one that shall requite kindness to his friends.

7 He that maketh too much of his son shall bind up his wounds; and his bowels will be troubled at every cry.

8 An horse not broken becometh headstrong: and a child left to himself will be wilful.

Before CHRIST about 200.

9 Cocker thy child, and he shall make thee ‖ afraid: play with him, and he will bring thee to heaviness.

‖ Or, astonished.

10 Laugh not with him, lest thou have sorrow with him, and less thou gnash thy teeth in the end.

11 [c] Give him no liberty in his youth, and wink not at his follies.

[c] Chap. 7. 23.

12 Bow down his neck while he is young, and beat him on the sides while he is a child, lest he wax stubborn, and be disobedient unto thee, and so bring sorrow to thine heart.

13 Chastise thy son, and hold him to labour, lest his lewd behaviour be an offence unto thee.

14 Better is the poor, being sound and strong of constitution, than a rich man that is afflicted in his body.

Or, health

15 Health and good estate of body are above all gold, and a strong body above infinite wealth.

16 There is no riches above a sound body, and no joy above the joy of the heart.

17 Death is better than a bitter life or continual sickness.

18 Delicates poured upon a mouth shut up are as messes of meat set upon a grave.

19 What good doeth the offering unto an idol? for neither can it eat nor smell: so is he that is ‖ persecuted of the Lord.

‖ Or, afflicted.

20 He seeth with his eyes and groaneth, as an eunuch that embraceth a virgin and sigheth.

21 [c] Give not over thy mind to heaviness, and afflict not thyself in thine own counsel.

[c] Prov. 12. 25. & 15. 15. & 17. 22.

22 The gladness of the heart is the life of man, and the ‖ joyfulness of a man prolongeth his days.

‖ Or, exultation.

23. — that thou hear not the reproach of thy house.] The meaning seems to be, That thou expose not thyself to the reproach and insult of the rich and powerful, by thrusting thyself amongst them when thou canst live in peace and comfort at home. Arnald.

24. — to go from house to house:] The observation seems to refer to persons who intrude themselves on the families of the great, and prefer a splendid slavery, in the houses of others, to content and freedom within their own walls.

25. Come, thou stranger, &c.] These seem to be the words of the host, calling upon him imperiously to "entertain, and feast," (ver. 25:) but, instead of receiving any thanks when he has exhausted his little substance in this manner, he is turned out of doors to make room for a more honourable visitor.

Chap. XXX. ver. 3. — grieveth the enemy:] Maketh his enemy envious of his happiness. Calmet.

7. — shall bind up his wounds;] Shall have occasion to bind up many wounds occasioned by his son's misconduct. Arnald.

—— his bowels will be troubled at every cry.] When he hears any noise or disturbance, he will be in pain for his son lest some evil may have befallen him. Arnald.

9. Cocker thy child,] To "cocker" signifies to fondle, to indulge. Dr. Johnson.

18. Delicates poured upon a mouth &c.] Delicates offered to "a mouth shut up" by sickness; which has lost all relish for the choicest rarities of wine and food. Arnald.

—— as messes — set &c.] See note at Jer. xvi. 7.

19. What good doeth the offering &c.] As an idol is unable to partake of the offerings set before it, so those who are "persecuted of the Lord," that is, who are visited by God with infirmity and sickness, can derive no pleasure from the good things of life. Calmet.

Before CHRIST about 200.

28 Love thine own soul, and comfort thy heart, remove sorrow far from thee: for sorrow hath killed many, and there is no profit therein.

24 Envy and wrath shorten the life, and carefulness bringeth age before the time.

† Or, A noble. 25 ‖ A cheerful and good heart will have a care of his meat and diet.

CHAP. XXXI.

1 Of the desire of riches. 12 Of moderation and excess in eating, or drinking wine.

[a] 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10.

[a] WATCHING for riches consumeth the flesh, and the care thereof driveth away sleep.

2 Watching care will not let a man slumber, as a sore disease breaketh sleep.

3 The rich hath great labour in gathering riches together; and when he resteth, he is filled with his delicates.

4 The poor laboureth in his poor estate; and when he leaveth off, he is still needy.

5 He that loveth gold shall not be justified, and he that followeth corruption shall have enough thereof.

[b] Chap. 8. 2.

6 [b] Gold hath been the ruin of many, and their destruction was present.

7 It is a stumblingblock unto them that sacrifice unto it, and every fool shall be taken therewith.

[c] Luke 6. 24.

8 [c] Blessed is the rich that is found without blemish, and hath not gone after gold.

9 Who is he? and we will call him blessed: for wonderful things hath he done among his people.

10 Who hath been tried thereby, and found perfect? then let him glory. Who might offend, and hath not offended? or done evil, and hath not done it?

11 His goods shall be established, and the congregation shall declare his alms.

[d] Ps. 141. 4. Prov. 23. 1. † Gr. open not thy throat upon it.

Before CHRIST about 200.

14 Stretch not thine hand whithersoever it looketh, and thrust it not with him into the dish.

‖ Or, before every thing, he is presented.

15 Judge of thy neighbour by thyself: and be discreet in every point.

16 Eat, as it becometh a man, those things which are set before thee; and devour not, lest thou be hated.

17 Leave off first for manners' sake; and be not unsatiable, lest thou offend.

[e] Chap. 37. 29.

18 [e] When thou sittest among many, reach not thine hand out first of all.

‖ Or, and lieth not pacified and bloating.

19 A very little is sufficient for a man well nurtured, ‖ and he fetcheth not his wind short upon his bed.

20 Sound sleep cometh of moderate eating: he riseth early, and his wits are with him: but the pain of watching, and choler, and pangs of the belly, are with an unsatiable man.

21 And if thou hast been forced to eat, arise, go forth, vomit, and thou shalt have rest.

8. — hath not gone after gold.] Hath not set his heart upon it, and placed his trust in it. The expression is used to denote the following of idols, and the practice of idolatry. Arnald.

13. — more wicked than an eye?] "Than such an eye," mentioned in the former part of the verse, namely, an evil or niggardly eye. The sense of the latter part of the verse, according to the marginal reading, may be, What is more wicked than an eye, which lusteth so to gratify a gluttonous appetite in eating of every dainty set before it, that it will even weep if it imagines it shall not be satisfied? Arnald.

22. — in all thy works be quick, &c.] Be quick, active, vigilant; and thus thou wilt escape all manner of sickness. Calmet.

13 And for these things bless him that made thee, and hath replenished thee with his good things.

14 Whoso feareth the Lord will receive his discipline; and they that seek him early shall find favour.

15 He that seeketh the law shall be filled therewith: but the hypocrite will be offended thereat.

16 They that fear the Lord shall find judgment, and shall kindle justice as a light.

17 A sinful man will not be reproved, but findeth an excuse according to his will.

18 A man of counsel will be considerate; but a strange and proud man is not daunted with fear, even when of himself he hath done without counsel.

19 Do nothing without advice; and when thou hast once done, repent not.

20 Go not in a way wherein thou mayest fall, and stumble not among the stones.

21 Be not confident in a plain way.

22 And beware of thine own children.

23 [c] In every good work trust thy own soul; for this is the keeping of the commandments. [c] Rom. 14. 5.

24 He that believeth in the Lord taketh heed to the commandments; and he that trusteth in him ‖ shall fare never the worse. ‖ Or, shall not be hurt.

Chap. XXXII. ver. 1. If thou be made the master &c.] He alludes to a custom frequent among the ancients, of appointing a master of a feast, who was to undertake the regulation of the whole, and to prescribe to each of the guests how much he was to drink. He here gives advice to persons not to be too much elevated by being placed in such a situation, nor to behave with insolence in it. Calmet.

4. Pour not out words &c.] He gives the general advice, Do not lavish thy discourse before persons indisposed to attend to it; know first the taste of the company, and adapt thy subject accordingly. Arnald.

5. A concert of musick in a banquet &c.] The ancients in general were particularly fond of musick at their feasts. Calmet.

10. Before the thunder &c.] The sense is, As lightning is seen some time before the thunder is heard, so modesty in a person, before he begins to speak, recommends him the more to the favour and good opinion of others. Arnald.

12. There take thy pastime, &c.] Use some diversion and moderate exercise at home for health's sake; "but sin not by proud speech," be not contumacious, quarrelsome or angry with thy family, or with any about thee. Arnald.

15. — the hypocrite will be offended thereat.] He who seeks the law of God with hypocrisy, without sincerity, shall find in it a cause of downfal. Calmet.

17. — but findeth an excuse according to his will.] Findeth some pretext, excuse, or example to authorize and justify what he has done, or some explanation, softening, or evasion of the law, according to his mind. Arnald.

21, 22. Be not confident in a plain way. And beware &c.] Be not over confident in things or persons which seem to promise most security, as it is possible, even in the smoothest way, to meet with a slip or hurt, and to sustain some unforeseen mischief from those whom one least suspects. Arnald.

14. Good is set against evil, &c.] A general observation respecting the opposition which subsists between things both in the natural and moral world.

16. I awaked up last of all.] The author represents himself as the last of those of his nation who had made collections of moral sentences or proverbs, as having only gleaned after others who had preceded him; his design being not to produce a wholly original work, but rather a collection of scattered pieces which were liable to be lost. Arnald.

24. — for a servant.] For a slave. In the remaining part of this chapter the wise man gives directions respecting the management of slaves. He speaks first of slaves in general, and of those who were ill-disposed and idle; afterwards (ver. 30, 31) of good slaves. The condition of slaves in those ancient times was very widely different from that of servants in modern times, as slaves were the entire property of their masters, to whom their persons, possessions, and liberty were entirely subject. We ought to bear these circumstances in mind when we read the precepts respecting slaves here given. Calmet.

1 A prayer for the church against the enemies thereof. 18 A good heart and of a froward. 21 Of a good wife.

HAVE mercy upon us, O Lord God of all, and behold us:

Chap. XXXV. ver. 1. He that keepeth the law &c.] The author having shewn in the preceding chapter the vanity and inutility of offering unto God the sacrifices of iniquity and oblations unjustly acquired, now points out what are the true offerings which God requires; namely, justice, innocence, and obedience to His law. He who is a faithful observer of God's commandments, honours Him in a more perfect manner than he who offers to Him multitudes of victims. Calmet.

8. — with a good eye,] That is, generously and freely, without grudging or covetousness. Arnald.

17. — and till it come nigh, he will not be comforted;] Meaning, that his prayer is so importunate and fervent, as not to return back till it has succeeded in its object. Arnald.

Chap. XXXVI. ver. 1. Have mercy upon us, &c.] The author, having in the last chapter spoken of offerings to God, and of the disposition that should accompany them, here utters a prayer to God, beseeching Him to look with favour on His people afflicted and dispersed. At the time when this was written, the Jews were dispersed through Egypt, Syria, and different provinces of the East. Those who were in Judea and Jerusalem, being subject sometimes to the kings of Syria, and sometimes to those of Egypt, were alternately the victims of the ambition of one and the other. The pious Israelites, afflicted by these humiliating circumstances, earnestly prayed to God that He would restore tranquility to His people, and turn the hearts of their enemies. Calmet. The first part of this prayer is cited by St. Austin, as a kind of prophetick prayer for the coming of the Messiah. Pious supplications, such as this, for some future blessings indistinctly described, proceeded from a confidence in the promises of the Prophets; and the Jews, who in the expectation of their Messiah, had, at first, regard only to one advent, looked to the full accomplishment of the prophecies in His arrival, and therefore allude in their prayers to the expected conversion of the Gentiles, and other matters connected with that event. Dr. Grey.

18. The belly devoureth &c.] This which follows is improperly connected with the foregoing prayer; and here ought to have been a division of the chapters.

19. As the palate &c.] As the palate distinguishes venison from ordinary meat, so does an understanding heart separate between the expressions of flattery and real friendship, between truth and falsehood. Arnald.

20. — will recompense him.] Will requite him as he deserves. Calmet.

25. Where no hedge is, &c.] As by the breaking down of the fence the vineyard or garden is spoiled and plundered; so fares it with the house of that person who is without a proper helpmate to direct his domestick concerns; all things are in confusion, and his substance is in danger of being devoured by strangers. Arnald.

26. — well appointed,] Active, prepared to escape suddenly.

—— a man that hath no house,] It was usual for all Jews to marry at a proper age, and it was deemed creditable that they should be settled in that state. On this account, persons who had no family or fixed dwelling were particularly looked upon as loose and disorderly, and therefore spoken of in terms of reproach. Arnald.

Chap. XXXVII. ver. 3. O wicked imagination, &c.] This exclamation seems either forced from the writer, by what he personally suffered from some false friend, or it arises from the general prevalence of the vice of hypocrisy in his time. Arnald.

‖ Or, what use there is of him.

9 And say unto thee, Thy way is good: and afterward he stand on the other side, to see what shall befall thee.

10 Consult not with one that suspecteth thee: and hide thy counsel from such as envy thee.

11 Neither consult with a woman touching her of whom she is jealous; neither with a coward in matters of war; nor with a merchant concerning exchange; nor with a buyer of selling; nor with an envious man of thankfulness; nor with an unmerciful man touching kindness; nor with the slothful for any work; nor with an hireling for a year of finishing work; nor with an idle servant of much business: hearken not unto these in any matter of counsel.

12 But be continually with a godly man, whom thou knowest to keep the commandments of the Lord, whose mind is according to thy mind, and will sorrow with thee, if thou shalt miscarry.

13 And let the counsel of thine own heart stand: for there is no man more faithful unto thee than it.

14 For a man's mind is sometime wont to tell him more than seven watchmen, that sit above in an high tower.

15 And above all this pray to the most High, that he will direct thy way in truth.

16 Let reason go before every enterprize, and counsel before every action.

17 The countenance is a sign of changing of the heart.

18 Four manner of things appear: good and evil, life and death: but the tongue ruleth over them continually.

Before CHRIST about 200.

19 There is one that is wise and teacheth many, and yet is unprofitable to himself.

20 There is one that sheweth wisdom in words, and is hated: he shall be destitute of all ‖ food.

‖ Or, wisdom.

21 For grace is not given him from the Lord; because he is deprived of all wisdom.

22 Another is wise to himself; and the fruits of understanding are commendable in his mouth.

23 A wise man instructeth his people; and the fruits of his understanding fail not.

24 A wise man shall be filled with blessing; and all they that see him shall account him happy.

25 The days of the life of man may be numbered: but the days of Israel are innumerable.

26 A wise man shall inherit ‖ glory among his people, and his name shall be perpetual.

‖ Or, credit.

27 My son, prove thy soul in thy life, and see what is evil for it, and give not that unto it.

28 For all things are not profitable for all men, neither hath every soul pleasure in every thing.

29 Be not unsatiable in any dainty thing, nor too greedy upon meats:

30 For ‖ excess of meats bringeth sickness, and surfeiting will turn into choler.

‖ Or, variety of meats.

31 By surfeiting have many perished; but he that taketh heed prolongeth his life.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

1 Honour due to the physician, and why. 16 How to weep and mourn for the dead. 24 The wisdom of the learned man, and of the labourer and artificer: with the use of them both.

HONOUR a physician with the honour due unto him for the uses which ye may have of him: for the Lord hath created him.

---

5. — which helpeth his friend for the belly,] Which helpeth his friend, not from any regard to him, but for the table which he keeps, and the subsistence he derives from him. Arnald.

8. — lest he cast the lot upon thee,] The Latin version gives a preferable sense, "Lest he throw some impediment or stumbling-block in thy way." Calmet, Arnald.

14. — than seven watchmen, that sit above &c.] See note at 2 Kings ix. 17.

17. The countenance is a sign &c.] That is, The countenance shews whether the heart be gay or sorrowful, content or afflicted. Arnald.

18. — but the tongue ruleth over them] Implying, that the tongue which confers a good or bad reputation, commands the greatest good of life. Calmet.

25. — the days of Israel are innumerable.] The true Israelite liveth for evermore, and his name shall not be blotted out. Arnald.

27. — prove thy soul in thy life,] Study and know thy own powers, and undertake nothing before thou hast ascertained thy ability for it. Calmet.

30. — will turn into choler.] Will cause bilious disorders.

Chap. XXXVIII. ver. 1. — the Lord hath created him.] Hath blessed him with the power of attaining the knowledge which he possesses.

Before CHRIST about 200.

2 For of the most High cometh healing, and he shall receive ‖ honour of the king.

‖ Or, a gift.

3 The skill of the physician shall lift up his head: and in the sight of great men he shall be in admiration.

4 The Lord hath created medicines out of the earth; and he that is wise will not abhor them.

[a] Exod. 15. 25.

5 [a] Was not the water made sweet with wood, that the virtue thereof might be known?

6 And he hath given men skill, that he might be honoured in his marvellous works.

7 With such doth he heal [men,] and taketh away their pains.

8 Of such doth the apothecary make a confection; and of his works there is no end; and from him is peace over all the earth.

9 My son, in thy sickness be not negligent: but [b] pray unto the Lord, and he will make thee whole.

[b] Is. 38. 2.

10 Leave off from sin, and order thine hands aright, and cleanse thy heart from all wickedness.

11 Give a sweet savour, and a memorial of fine flour; and make a fat offering, ‖ as not being.

‖ Or, as a dead man.

12 Then give place to the physician, for the Lord hath created him: let him not go from thee, for thou hast need of him.

13 There is a time when in their hands there is good success.

14 For they shall also pray unto the Lord, that he would prosper that, which they give for ease and ‖ remedy to prolong life.

‖ Or, curing.

15 He that sinneth before his Maker, let him fall into the hand of the physician.

16 My son, let tears fall down over the dead, and begin to lament, as if thou hadst suffered great harm thyself; and then cover his body according to the custom, and neglect not his burial.

17 Weep bitterly, and make great moan, and use lamentation, as he is worthy, and that a day or two, lest thou be evil spoken of: and then comfort thyself for thy heaviness.

Before CHRIST about 200.

18 For of heaviness cometh death, and the heaviness of the [c] heart breaketh strength.

[c] Prov. 15. 13. & 17. 22.

19 In affliction also sorrow remaineth: and the life of the poor is the curse of the heart.

20 Take no heaviness to heart: drive it away, and remember the last end.

21 Forget it not, for there is no turning again: thou shalt not do him good, but hurt thyself.

22 Remember ‖ my judgment: for thine also shall be so; yesterday for me, and to day for thee.

‖ Or, the sentence upon him.

23 [d] When the dead is at rest, let his remembrance rest; and be comforted for him, when his spirit is departed from him.

[d] 2 Sam. 12. 20.

24 The wisdom of a learned man cometh by opportunity of leisure: and he that hath little business shall become wise.

25 How can he get wisdom that holdeth the plough, and that glorieth in the goad, that driveth oxen, and is occupied in their labours, and whose talk is † of bullocks?

† Or, of the breed of bullocks?

26 He giveth his mind to make furrows; and is diligent to give the kine fodder.

27 So every carpenter and workmaster, that laboureth night and day: and they that cut and grave seals, and are diligent to make great variety, and give themselves to counterfeit imagery, and watch to finish a work:

28 The smith also sitting by the anvil, and considering the iron work, the vapour of the fire wasteth his flesh, and he fighteth with the heat of the furnace: the noise of the hammer and the anvil is ever in his ears, and his eyes look still upon the pattern of the thing that he maketh; he setteth his mind to finish his work, and watcheth to polish it perfectly:

---

5. Was not the water made sweet &c.] It is thought by many, that the author here makes allusion to the sweetening of the waters at Marah, Exod. xv. 25. Calmet.

8. — from him is peace] That is, health and comfort. Arnald.

11. Give a sweet savour, &c. — as not being.] That is, In thy sickness offer freely unto God, as one that is leaving the world, and has but little hope of life: but think not thyself (ver. 12.) in so desperate a condition as to hinder thee from making use of proper medicines for thy recovery. Calmet.

15. — let him fall into the hand] He will fall into the hand, &c. Calmet. The sense is, that God will bring upon him "that sinneth before his Maker" sickness and disease, so as to make necessary the help of a physician. Arnald.

17. — and that a day or two, &c.] Respecting the customs of mourning over the dead in the East, see notes at Gen. l. 10; 2 Sam. xii. 20; Jer. ix. 17.

19. — the life of the poor is the curse of the heart.] The sense seems to be, The poor, living in continual abasement and affliction, is ever ready to burst out into impatience and to curse his hard lot. Calmet.

21. — thou shalt not do him good,] Thou shalt not do good to one that is dead. Calmet.

22. Remember my judgment: &c.] Thus, as some interpret, the dead addresses the living, Remember the sentence of mortality passed upon me; as my present state is, so will thy condition be soon; to-day was my turn, to-morrow will be thy visitation; what has happened to me is thine and every man's lot. Arnald.

Before CHRIST about 200.

29 So doth the potter sitting at his work, and turning the wheel about with his feet, who is alway carefully set at his work, and maketh all his work by number;

30 He fashioneth the clay with his arm, and ‖ boweth down his strength before his feet; he applieth himself to lead it over; and he is diligent to make clean the furnace:

‖ Or, imposeth it with his feet.

31 All these trust to their hands: and every one is wise in his work.

32 Without these cannot a city be inhabited: and they shall not dwell where they will, nor go up and down:

33 They shall not be sought for in publick counsel, nor sit high in the congregation: they shall not sit on the judges' seat, nor understand the sentence of judgment: they cannot declare justice and judgment; and they shall not be found where parables are spoken.

34 But they will maintain the state of the world, and [all] their desire is in the work of their craft.

CHAP. XXXIX.

1 A description of him that is truly wise. 12 An exhortation to praise God for his works; which are good to the good, and evil to them that are evil.

BUT he that giveth his mind to the law of the most High, and is occupied in the meditation thereof, will seek out the wisdom of all the ancient, and be occupied in prophecies.

2 He will keep the sayings of the renowned men: and where subtil parables are, he will be there also.

3 He will seek out the secrets of grave sentences, and be conversant in dark parables.

4 He shall serve among great men, and appear before princes: he will travel through strange countries; for he hath tried the good and the evil among men.

5 He will give his heart to resort early to the Lord that made him, and will pray before the most High, and will open his mouth in prayer, and make supplication for his sins.

Before CHRIST about 200.

6 When the great Lord will, he shall be filled with the spirit of understanding: he shall pour out wise sentences, and give thanks unto the Lord in his prayer.

7 He shall direct his counsel and knowledge, and in his secrets shall he meditate.

8 He shall shew forth that which he hath learned, and shall glory in the law of the covenant of the Lord.

9 Many shall commend his understanding; and so long as the world endureth, it shall not be blotted out; his memorial shall not depart away, and his name shall live from generation to generation.

10 [a] Nations shall shew forth his wisdom, and the congregation shall declare his praise.

[a] Chap. 44. 15.

11 If he die, he shall leave a greater name than a thousand: and if he live, he shall ‖ increase it.

‖ Or, gain unto it.

12 Yet have I more to say, which I have thought upon; for I am filled as the moon at the full.

13 Hearken unto me, ye holy children, and bud forth as a rose growing by the ‖ brook of the field:

‖ Or, rivers of water.

14 And give ye a sweet savour as frankincense, and flourish as a lily, send forth a smell, and sing a song of praise, bless the Lord in all his works.

15 Magnify his name, and shew forth his praise with the songs of your lips, and with harps, and in praising him ye shall say after this manner:

16 [b] All the works of the Lord are exceeding good, and whatsoever he commandeth shall be accomplished in due season.

[b] Gen. 1. 31. Mark 7. 37.

17 And none may say, What is this? wherefore is that? for at time convenient they shall all be sought out: at his commandment the waters stood as an heap, and at the words of his mouth the receptacles of waters.

18 At his commandment is done whatsoever pleaseth him; and none can hinder, when he will save.

19 The works of all flesh are before him, and nothing can be hid from his eyes.

---

29. — turning the wheel about with his feet,] The manner in which potters worked in different countries is described as different. See Jer. xviii. 3. Homer describes the potter as turning the wheel with his hands. Calmet.

30. — to lead it over;] Or to glaze it: melted lead is used in potteries for the purpose of glazing earthen ware.

34. But they will maintain &c.] Meaning, that the conveniences of life, and very much that contributes to the welfare and comforts of society, depend on the useful exertions of the labouring part of the community, each in his several craft and calling. Arnald.

Chap. XXXIX. ver. 12. — I am filled as the moon at the full.] The translations differ here: according to some, the sense may be, I make gradual progress in knowledge, as the moon gradually increases to the full. Calmet.

17. — the waters stood as an heap,] Referring to the miraculous passage of the Red sea and the river Jordan.

Before CHRIST about 200.

20 He seeth from everlasting to everlasting; and there is nothing wonderful before him.

21 A man need not to say, What is this? wherefore is that? for he hath made all things for their uses.

22 His blessing covered the dry land as a river, and watered it as a flood.

23 As he hath turned the waters into saltness: so shall the heathen inherit his wrath.

[c] Hos. 14. 9. 24 [c] As his ways are plain unto the holy; so are they stumblingblocks unto the wicked.

25 For the good are good things created from the beginning: so evil things for sinners.

26 The principal things for the whole use of man's life are water, fire, iron, and salt, flour of wheat, honey, milk, and the blood of the grape, and oil, and clothing.

27 All these things are for good to the godly: so to the sinners they are turned into evil.

28 There be spirits that are created for vengeance, which in their fury lay on sore strokes; in the time of destruction they pour out their force, and appease the wrath of him that made them.

29 Fire, and hail, and famine, and death, all these were created for vengeance;

30 Teeth of wild beasts, and scorpions, ‖ serpents, and the sword, punishing the wicked to destruction.

‖ Or, vipers.

31 They shall rejoice in his commandment, and they shall be ready upon earth, when need is; and when their time is come, they shall not transgress his word.

32 Therefore from the beginning I was resolved, and thought upon these things, and have left them in writing.

33 All the works of the Lord are good: and he will give every needful thing in due season. Before CHRIST about 200.

34 So that a man cannot say, This is worse than that: for in time they shall all be well approved.

35 And therefore praise ye the Lord with the whole heart and mouth, and bless the name of the Lord.

CHAP. XL.

1 Many miseries in a man's life. 12 The reward of unrighteousness, and the fruit of true dealing. 17 A virtuous wife and an honest friend rejoice the heart, but the fear of the Lord is above all. 28 A beggar's life is hateful.

GREAT [a] travail is created for every man, and an heavy yoke is upon the sons of Adam, from the day that they go out of their mother's womb, till the day that they return to the mother of all things. [a] Eccles. 1. 13.

2 Their imagination of things to come, and the day of death, [trouble] their thoughts, and [cause] fear of heart;

3 From him that sitteth on a throne of glory, unto him that is humbled in earth and ashes;

4 From him that weareth purple and a crown, ‖ unto him that is clothed with a linen frock. ‖ Or, in the porch.

5 Wrath, and envy, trouble, and unquietness, fear of death, and anger, and strife, and in the time of rest upon his bed his night sleep, do change his knowledge.

6 A little or nothing is his rest, and afterward he is in his sleep, as in a day of keeping watch, troubled in the vision of his heart, as if he were escaped out of a battle.

7 When all is safe, he awaketh, and marvelleth that the fear was nothing.

8 [Such things happen] unto all flesh, both man and beast, and that is sevenfold more upon sinners.

---

23. As he hath turned the waters into saltness:] In the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. Calmet.

27. All these things are for good to the godly:] To the good, these things, necessary to the life of man, prove a blessing by the laudable use which they make of them; but to the wicked they prove evil and pernicious, from the manner in which they abuse them. Calmet.

28. There be spirits &c.] Evil spirits, who are used as the instruments of Divine vengeance on sinners. Calmet.

—— and appease the wrath of him that made them.] Appease the Divine wrath by executing His appointed judgments to the full. Junius.

29. — and death,] Meaning the pestilence and other scourges, which cause certain and rapid death. Calmet.

31. They shall rejoice in his commandment,] The things in the natural world, which are used as the instruments of the Divine judgments, are here, by a strong figure of speech, represented as listening to the Divine command, and rejoicing in their appointed work. Arnald. See Jer. xlvii. 6; and the note there.

34. — for in time they shall all be well approved.] Thus it is only our ignorance, or partial consideration of the works of nature, that makes us think we see great faults in them. But if we examine into them more closely, or if we try to mend them, it very soon appears that the mistake is in ourselves. Bp. Leng.

Chap. XL. ver. 2. Their imagination of things &c.] This passage is thought to be corrupted. The construction is perplexed, and chiefly so for want of a verb to connect the whole, and give it a determinate sense; which our translators have attempted to supply by inserting the verbs "trouble" and "cause." Arnald.

4. — unto him that is clothed with a linen frock.] The word properly means, "with raw linen." In Egypt, where the author of this book is thought to have written, the common people universally wear linen frocks, dyed with indigo. The expression here may mean, undyed cloth of the crudest kind, worse than that ordinarily worn by the common people. Harmer.

5. — do change his knowledge.] Trouble his mind, disturb his thoughts. Calmet.

Before CHRIST about 200.

9 [b] Death, and bloodshed, strife, and sword, calamities, famine, tribulation, and the scourge;

[b] Chap. 39. 29, 30.

10 These things are created for the wicked, and for their sakes came the flood.

[c] Gen. 7. 11.

11 [d] All things that are of the earth shall turn to the earth again: and that which is of the [e] waters doth return into the sea.

[d] Gen. 3. 19. chap. 41. 10.

[e] Eccles. 1. 7.

12 All † bribery and injustice shall be blotted out: but true dealing shall endure for ever.

† Gr. bribes.

13 The goods of the unjust shall be dried up like a river, and shall vanish with noise, like a great thunder in rain.

14 While he openeth his hand he shall rejoice: so shall transgressors come to nought.

15 The children of the ungodly shall not bring forth many branches: but are as unclean roots upon a hard rock.

[f] Job 8. 11. & 18. 16.

16 [f] The weed growing upon every water and [g] bank of a river shall be pulled up before all grass.

[g] Gen. 41. 3.

‖ Or, a garden that is blessed.

17 Bountifulness is as ‖ a most fruitful garden, and mercifulness endureth for ever.

[h] Phil. 4. 11. [i] Tim. 6. 6.

18 To labour, and to [h] be content with that a man hath, is a sweet life: but he that findeth a treasure is above them both.

19 Children and the building of a city continue a man's name: but a blameless wife is counted above them both.

20 Wine and musick rejoice the heart: but the love of wisdom is above them both.

21 The pipe and the psaltery make sweet melody: but a pleasant tongue is above them both.

22 Thine eye desireth favour and beauty: but more than both corn while it is green.

23 A friend and companion never meet amiss: but above both is a wife with her husband.

24 Brethren and help are against time of trouble: but alms shall deliver more than them both.

Before CHRIST about 200.

25 Gold and silver make the foot stand sure: but counsel is esteemed above them both.

26 Riches and strength lift up the heart: but the fear of the Lord is above them both: there is no want in the fear of the Lord, and it needeth not to seek help.

27 The fear of the Lord is ‖ a fruitful garden, and [i] covereth him above all glory.

‖ Or, a garden that is blessed.

[i] Isa. 4. 5.

28 My son, lead not a beggar's life; for better it is to die than to beg.

29 The life of him that dependeth on another man's table is not to be counted for a life; for he polluteth himself with other men's meat: but a wise man well nurtured will beware thereof.

30 Begging is sweet in the mouth of the shameless: but in his belly there shall burn a fire.

CHAP. XLI.

1 The remembrance of death. 3 Death is not to be feared. 5 The ungodly shall be accursed. 11 Of an evil and a good name. 14 Wisdom is to be uttered. 16 Of what things we should be ashamed.

O DEATH, how bitter is the remembrance of thee to a man that liveth at rest in his possessions, unto the man that hath nothing to vex him, and that hath prosperity in all things: yea, unto him that is yet able to receive meat!

2 O death, acceptable is thy sentence unto the needy, and unto him whose strength faileth, that is now in the last age, and ‖ is vexed with all things, and to him that despaireth, and hath lost patience!

‖ Or, to whom every thing is troublesome.

3 Fear not the sentence of death, remember them that have been before thee, and that come after; for this is the sentence of the Lord over all flesh.

4 And why art thou against the pleasure of the most High? there is no inquisition in the grave, whether thou have lived ten, or an hundred, or a thousand years.

---

13. — like a river,] Like a sudden torrent or land flood, which soon passes by, and is dried up. Calmet. See Job vi. 15; and the notes there.

14. While he openeth his hand &c.] While the just and liberal man openeth his hand, "he shall rejoice," but transgressors shall come to nought. Junius, Arnald.

16. The weed growing upon every water &c.] The word translated "weed" properly signifies sedge, growing in marshes, and especially on the borders of the Nile; this is of rapid growth, but is soon plucked up for fuel. So, it is intimated, shall be the fate of the wicked. Calmet. Compare Job viii. 11, 12; and see the notes there.

18. — he that findeth a treasure] He that is made rich by the free bounty of Providence.

22. — corn while it is green.] Which combines what is pleasing in outward appearance with what is serviceable to the necessities of life. Junius.

28. — lead not a beggar's life;] That is, Maintain thyself by thine own industry; regard dependance on others as one of the greatest of worldly evils.

29. — he polluteth himself] Rendereth himself contemptible. Arnald.

30. — there shall burn a fire.] By this may here be understood great voraciousness and greediness. Grotius. The extremity of hunger. Bossuet, Calmet.

Chap. XLI. ver. 4. — there is no inquisition in the grave, whether thou have lived ten, &c.] The inquiry in the other world will be, not how long or how short a time persons have lived here, but how they conducted themselves in this life, and how their account stood at the period of their death. Arnald.

Before CHRIST about 200.

5 The children of sinners are abominable children, and they that are conversant in the dwelling of the ungodly.

6 The inheritance of sinners' children shall perish, and their posterity shall have a perpetual reproach.

7 The children will complain of an ungodly father, because they shall be reproached for his sake.

8 Woe be unto you, ungodly men, which have forsaken the law of the most high God! for if ye increase, it shall be to your destruction:

9 And if ye be born, ye shall be born to a curse: and if ye die, a curse shall be your portion.

* Chap. 40. 11.

10 * All that are of the earth shall turn to earth again: so the ungodly shall go from a curse to destruction.

11 The mourning of men is about their bodies: but an ill name of sinners shall be blotted out.

12 Have regard to thy name; for that shall continue with thee above a thousand great treasures of gold.

13 A good life hath but few days: but a good name endureth for ever.

14 My children, keep discipline in peace: for wisdom that is hid, and a treasure that is not seen, what profit is in them both?

15 A man that hideth his foolishness is better than a man that hideth his wisdom.

16 Therefore be shamefaced according to my word: for it is not good to retain all shamefacedness; neither is it altogether approved in every thing. Before CHRIST about

17 Be ashamed of whoredom before father and mother: and of a lie before a prince and a mighty man;

18 Of an offence before a judge and ruler; of iniquity before a congregation and people; of unjust dealing before thy partner and friend;

19 And of theft in regard of the place where thou sojournest, and in regard of the truth of God and his covenant; and to lean with thine elbow upon the meat; and of scorning to give and take;

20 And of silence before them that salute thee; and to look upon an harlot;

21 And to turn away thy face from thy kinsman; or to take away a portion or a gift; or to gaze upon another man's wife;

22 Or to be overbusy with his maid, and come not near her bed; or of upbraiding speeches before friends; and after thou hast given, upbraid not;

23 Or of iterating and speaking again that which thou hast heard; and of revealing of secrets.

24 So shalt thou be truly shamefaced, and find favour before all men.

CHAP. XLII.

1 Whereof we should not be ashamed. 9 Be careful of thy daughter. 12 Beware of a woman. 15 The works and greatness of God.

OF these things be not thou ashamed, and accept no person to sin thereby:

---

9. And if ye be born, ye shall be born to a curse: &c.] The reading here is faulty: the correct sense is, If you have offspring, you shall beget them to their destruction; and when you die, you shall be reckoned among the cursed. Grotius.

13. A good life hath but few days:] A life, however good and virtuous, does not endure long. Grotius.

14. — keep discipline in peace:] In time of peace, that is, in prosperity: for then there is most need of prudence. Grotius.

16. — be shamefaced according to my word: &c.] He means to say, I will teach thee in what cases shame is commendable, and when it is not.

17. — of whoredom before father and mother:] Of doing or saying any thing indecent in their presence. Grotius.

18. Of an offence before a judge and ruler;] That is, any open misbehaviour or crime before persons in office, whose authority and dignity demand a respectful obedience, and who will make an immediate example of such as seem to disrespect or slight them. Arnald.

—— iniquity] Meaning a publick injury against the state; as "unjust dealing" means a private one. Badwell.

19. And of theft in regard of the place where thou sojournest,] The author seems here particularly to caution against theft in a place of sojourning; that is, in a place where travellers sojourn. In the caravansaries of the East, for the accommodation of travellers, there are no doors between the apartments where different persons lodge: under these circumstances the commission of theft is particularly easy, but it is deemed peculiarly base to take advantage of such an unguarded situation. Harmer.

—— and to lean with thine elbow upon the meat;] Indicating a want of decorum and of gratitude towards your entertainer. Badwell. Perhaps something more than want of decorum may be intended: there may be an allusion to the selfish greediness of a person, who, while he is eating one thing, covers another with his arm, in order to secure it to himself.

—— and of scorning to give and take;] The word, rendered "scorning," means cheating. The sense is, that in matters of commerce we should be ashamed to be dishonest, and should both pay and receive with honour and justice. Arnald.

20. — silence before them that salute thee;] Meaning a want of courtesy in returning salutations.

21. — or to take away a portion or a gift;] That is, to deprive any one of what belongs to him, or has been given to him. Badwell.

There is a shameful meanness still practised in the East, by persons of a superiour station, who frequently seize on the presents made to those that are below them. It may seem from the expression of the text, that this species of rapacity is of ancient date. Harmer.

Chap. XLII. vér. 1. Of these things be not thou ashamed,] In the former chapter the author pointed out in what things shame was just and laudable, and ought to be entertained. In this he shews in what particulars it is faulty and injurious, and ought to be discarded. Badwell.

2. — of judgment to justify the ungodly;] "The godly," according to some readings. Badwell. Or the sense may be, Be not ashamed to oppose any judgment or sentence, in which a wicked man is intended to be favoured or acquitted. Arnald, Calmet.

3. Of reckoning with thy partners and travellers;] The best sense appears to be, that in a judicial hearing between an acquaintance and a stranger, we should not be influenced by prejudice in favour of the former, but should judge equitably and impartially between them. Badwell, Arnald.

—— or of the gift of the heritage of friends;] Take care not to be partial in dividing an inheritance where your friends are concerned and have an interest. Or the advice may be, to distribute the inheritance of a deceased friend according to his intention, without regarding the solicitations of interested persons. Calmet, Arnald.

4. — or of getting much or little;] Be not ashamed to be honest and deal fairly in small as well as large gains, in little matters as well as greater. Calmet.

5. And of merchants' indifferent selling;] That is, of selling at a fixed price, and not varying the rate, so as to get sometimes less and sometimes more. Badwell.

13. — from women wickedness.] Not from all, but from lewd women: from such may be expected to come both "wickedness" and misery. Badwell, Arnald.

14. — than a courteous woman,] One who ensnares by false fondness and deceitful arts. Arnald.

15. I will now remember the works of the Lord,] From this place to the end of the book the author is wholly taken up, either in praising the Lord and enlarging upon the excellence of His works, or in publishing the praises of the Jewish worthies. Arnald.

—— In the words of the Lord are his works.] He begins with a fine thought, that the word, or almighty fiat, of the Lord, was a perfect work, 2 Esdr. vi. 38; which greatly resembles that of Moses, Gen. i. 3, or that comprehensive one of the Psalmist, Ps. xxxiii. 9. There is the like plural expression, and upon the same occasion, in the next chapter, ver. 5, 10; which our translators have there rightly rendered in the singular number. Arnald.

18. — he beholdeth the signs of the world.] The least perceptible point of time is called by the Greek word here rendered "signs." The meaning is, that God knoweth every portion and instant of time, and what passeth in it. Grotius, Arnald.

22. — that a man may see even to a spark.] The works of God are worthy of being beheld and considered, even to the least spark, in which the Divine power can be discerned. Badwell. There is nothing so small and insignificant, not even a spark, which does not declare the wisdom and the power of God. Calmet.

16 At his sight the mountains are shaken, and at his will the south wind bloweth.

17 The noise of the thunder maketh the earth ‖ to tremble: so doth the northern storm and the whirlwind: as birds flying he scattereth the snow, and the falling down thereof is as the lighting of grasshoppers:

Chap. XLIII. ver. 1. The pride of the height, &c.] Dr. Grabe thinks that this chapter ought to begin with ver. 15 of the last. The subject and connexion seem to require it. The sense is, Who can be satisfied with contemplating His glory; namely, the immensity of height, the vast expanse of clearness, the general face of the heavens, exhibiting to the sight a most glorious view? Arnald.

7. — decreaseth in her perfection.] In her consummation; decreaseth gradually till her final disappearing. Calmet.

8. — bring an instrument of the armies above,] The meaning of these words has been variously conjectured. "An instrument of God in the armies of heaven;" alluding to the stars, as the heavenly host. Junius.

17. — as the lighting of grashoppers:] Rather, of locusts; as the lighting of a flight of locusts.

19. — it lieth on the top of sharp stakes.] The marginal reading is preferable, meaning, that it has the form of sharp points. Arnald.

21. It devoureth the mountains,] Destroys all the fruits and produce of the mountains. Junius.

23. — and planteth] And hath planted. Calmet.

10. Who wast ordained for reproofs &c.] Elijah was ordained or appointed to appear again, to denounce reproofs, and by threats of the greatest impending evils to reform the world, reconcile the Israelites, prevent God's judgments, and prepare all for the great and terrible day of the Lord's appearing. It was the opinion of the Jews, that Elijah should first come himself in person before the Messiah, and restore all things. Arnald.

8 And as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, as lilies by the rivers of waters, and as the branches of the frankincense tree in the time of summer:

9 As fire and incense in the censer, and as a vessel of beaten gold set with all manner of precious stones:

10 And as a fair olive tree budding forth fruit, and as a cypress tree which groweth up to the clouds.

11 When he put on the robe of honour, and was clothed with the perfection of glory, when he went up to the holy altar, he made the garment of holiness honourable.

12 When he took the portions out of the priests' hands, he himself stood by the hearth of the altar, compassed with his brethren round about, as a young cedar in Libanus; and as palm trees compassed they him round about.

13 So were all the sons of Aaron in their glory, and the oblations of the Lord in their hands, before all the congregation of Israel.

14 And finishing the service at the altar, that he might adorn the offering of the most high Almighty,

15 He stretched out his hand to the cup, and poured of the blood of the grape, he poured out at the foot of the altar a sweet-smelling savour unto the most high King of all.

Chap. L. ver. 1. Simon the high priest, the son of Onias,] We find mentioned in Jewish history two Simons, sons of Onias, both high priests. It is probable, that the Simon here intended is he who is by Josephus surnamed the Just, on account of his great piety towards God, and of his benevolence to the children of his people. He was probably contemporary with the author of this book, who appears at ver. 11, 12, to speak as if he had seen him minister in his holy office. Drusius, Calmet, Arnald.

sounded the ‖ silver trumpets, and made a great noise to be heard, for a remembrance before the most High.

17 Then all the people together hasted, and fell down to the earth upon their faces to worship their Lord God Almighty, the most High.

18 The singers also sang praises with their voices, with great variety of sounds was there made sweet melody.

19 And the people besought the Lord, the most High, by prayer before him that is merciful, till the solemnity of the Lord was ended, and they had finished his service.

20 Then he went down, and lifted up his hands over the whole congregation of the children of Israel, to give the blessing of the Lord with his lips, and to rejoice in his name.

21 And they bowed themselves down to worship the second time, that they might receive a blessing from the most High.

22 Now therefore bless ye the God of all, which only doeth wondrous things every where, which exalteth our days from the womb, and dealeth with us according to his mercy.

27 Jesus the son of Sirach of Jerusalem hath written in this book the instruction of understanding and knowledge, who out of his heart poured forth wisdom.

28 Blessed is he that shall be exercised in these things; and he that layeth them up in his heart shall become wise.

29 For if he do them, he shall be strong to all things: for the light of the Lord leadeth him, who giveth wisdom to the godly. Blessed be the Lord for ever. Amen, Amen.

CHAP. LI.

¶ A Prayer of Jesus the son of Sirach.

I WILL thank thee, O Lord and King, and praise thee, O God my Saviour: I do give praise unto thy name:

2 For thou art my defender and helper, and hast preserved my body from destruction, and from the snare of the slanderous tongue, and from the lips that forge lies, and hast been mine helper against mine adversaries:

3 And hast delivered me, according to the multitude of thy mercies and greatness of thy name, from † the teeth of them that were ready to devour me, and out of the hands of such as sought after my life, and from the manifold afflictions which I had;

4 From the choking of fire on every side, and from the midst of the fire which I kindled not;

5 From the depth of the belly of hell, from an unclean tongue, and from lying words.

‖ Or. trumpets to be beaten forth with the hammer.

† Gr. the gnashing of the teeth.

21. And they bowed themselves down to worship &c.] We see from this passage, that when the Jews received the blessing from the priest, they received it kneeling or bowing down their heads. In the primitive times of Christianity it was customary for the deacon, in order to prepare the people the better for it, to call out immediately before the benediction, Bow down to the blessing. The blessing of the bishop or priest was so highly esteemed in the primitive times, that none durst go out of the church without receiving it. Arnald.

22. Now therefore bless ye the God of all, &c.] We may learn from this short prayer of the wise man, how to compose and regulate our own: we should acknowledge God to be omnipresent and almighty; that, ever since we were born, we have been preserved by His good providence every day, hour, and moment; and that it is an instance of His great mercy thus to be mindful of our preservation and being, sinful as we are, and justly exposed to punishment. The conclusion of this prayer seems to contain more than a petition for peace and temporal blessings: it manifests the impatience of the writer and his countrymen for the Messiah, and their earnest wish that God would speedily send the blessing of all men, "to perform the mercy promised to their fathers, and to remember His holy covenant," Luke i. 72. Arnald.

26. They that sit upon the mountain of Samaria,] Rather, "upon mount Seir;" that is, the Idumeans. Drusius, Grotius, Arnald.

—— and that foolish people that dwell in Sichem.] Namely, the Samaritans, whom he undervalues, and scarcely allows to be worthy of the name of a people, either because they were a mixed multitude; see 2 Kings xvii. 24; or, because they were apostates, and held many erroneous tenets, and particularly favoured the doctrines of the Sadducees. Arnald. The Idumeans, the Philistines, and the Samaritans, were the three people particularly hostile to the Jews. Grotius.

Chap. LI. The author finishes his work with a prayer or hymn, from which we learn many particulars relating to his life; as the dangers he met with; the favour of God in delivering him; his travels for the acquisition of wisdom; his application to and success in it; and his earnest exhortation to the study of it, which we likewise find in the body of the work. It appears from it, that he was brought in danger of his life before the king on an unjust accusation, probably a charge of some offence against the state: but whether it was before a king of Syria or of Egypt that he was accused, is uncertain. Arnald.

Before CHRIST about 200.

6 By an accusation to the king from an unrighteous tongue my soul drew near even unto death, my life was near to the hell beneath.

7 They compassed me on every side, and there was no man to help me: I looked for the succour of men, but there was none.

8 Then thought I upon thy mercy, O Lord, and upon thy acts of old, how thou deliverest such as wait for thee, and savest them out of the hands of the enemies.

9 Then lifted I up my supplication from the earth, and prayed for deliverance from death.

10 I called upon the Lord, the Father of my Lord, that he would not leave me in the days of my trouble, and in the time of the proud, when there was no help.

11 I will praise thy name continually, and will sing praise with thanksgiving; and so my prayer was heard:

12 For thou savedst me from destruction, and deliveredst me from the evil time: therefore will I give thanks, and praise thee, and bless thy name, O Lord.

Ver. 10. I called upon the Lord, the Father of my Lord,] Most of the interpreters observe, that the second Person in the Trinity is here plainly distinguished from the Father. A very pious and learned prelate (Bp. Beveridge) says, that the author speaks as plainly here of our Lord Christ, as David did when he said, "The Lord said unto my Lord," Ps. cx. 1; to which probably he alludes, and plainly gives us to understand, that not only the Prophets, but all God's faithful people in those days, believed the Lord, the Almighty God, to be the Father of One, who was Himself also the Lord, and in a peculiar manner their Lord and Saviour; and that in their prayers they had a respect unto Him, and prayed in His name, calling upon the Lord as the Father of "their Lord Christ," Matt. xxvi. 63; John i. 49: and so expecting only to be heard upon His account, and for His sake, who was promised by the name of "the Lord," Dan. ix. 17; for Daniel prays in His name as plainly as we do now, saying, "Now therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications, and cause Thy face to shine upon Thy sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's sake;" that is, for the Lord Christ's sake, for no other Lord can possibly be meant there. Arnald.

BARUCH.

INTRODUCTION.

THE author of this book professes himself to be Baruch; a person of very illustrious birth, and distinguished by his attachment to Jeremiah, by whom he was employed, as a scribe or secretary, to write his prophecies, and on some occasions to read them to those against whom they were directed. St. Jerome, Grotius, and others, are however of opinion, that the book was not written by Baruch, nor in the Hebrew language; but by some Hellenistical Jew, who assumed the character of Baruch; and that the letter, which forms a part of the book, was fabricated by his own invention. But there is perhaps no sufficient reason to dispute the authenticity of the five first chapters; and the sixth chapter, which is probably spurious, did not originally belong to this book. The Greek version of these five chapters abounds with Hebraisms; and they were probably written in Hebrew, though not now extant in that language, nor ever admitted into the Hebrew canon: because Baruch, however he might have aspired to the prophetick character, and have sought great things for himself, (Jer. xlv. 5,) was not endowed with the gift of inspiration; though he was on one occasion made the subject of a Divine revelation, and honoured by a consolatory assurance from God.

The author, in consistency with the character of Baruch, whether rightly or falsely assumed, describes himself as the son of Nerias, and as the grandson of Maasias, who were men of eminence in their country. He affirms that he wrote the book at Babylon in the fifth year, and in the seventh day of the month after the Chaldeans had taken and burnt Jerusalem: by which must be understood the fifth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin, called also Jeconiah, and Coniah; which corresponds with the fifth year of the reign of Zedekiah, and the year of the world 3409; when Baruch accompanied his brother Seraias to Babylon, who was deputed from Zedekiah to solicit the restoration of the sacred vessels of the temple, which had been carried away among the spoil. It has been objected as inconsistent with this account, that Jerusalem is in this book represented as burnt, and in circumstances of distress, greater than should seem to have occurred at the time that Jehoiakim was taken prisoner and slain. But allowing for those aggravations, which are customary in the description of great afflictions, there is no particular in the detail of circumstances, which might not have happened during the siege of Jerusalem in the reign of Jehoiakim; when the Jews might have seen part of their city burnt, and have suffered from the most cruel extremities of famine.

It is probable that Baruch was more immediately commissioned by Jeremiah to utter at Babylon those prophecies which were intrusted to Seraias, Jer. li. 59—64; and that he actually did read to Jehoiachin, and others whom they concerned, those prophecies contained in the fiftieth and fifty-first chapters of Jeremiah, which promised deliverance to the Jews from their captivity, and the future destruction of Babylon; though when Baruch speaks of having read the words of this book to the people by the river Sud, chap. i. 4, he seems to allude only to the epistle that forms the chief subject of this book, which was sent from Jehoiachin and his associate captives at Babylon, to Joachim the son of Chilcias and the people at Jerusalem; for Baruch, being probably employed to compose the letter, may well be conceived to have read it to the king and the nobles for their approbation.

The captives, who appear to have been tutored by affliction to a sense of their own unworthiness, and to have felt a pious satisfaction at the success of the deputation of Seraias, sent back with the sacred vessels a collection of money to purchase burnt offerings and incense for the altar of the Lord; and accompanied it with a letter to their countrymen, in which they expressed their sentiments of humility and repentance, and their confident hopes of that restoration, which the Prophets had encouraged them to expect, and which prefigured the future glories of Jerusalem.

The letter, which after the short historical preface begins at the 10th verse of the first chapter, contains a confession which the captives recommended to their brethren, to be used upon solemn days. It exhorts them to pray for the life of Nebuchadnezzar, who had complied with their request, and had possibly been indulgent to the captives; to acknowledge that God's judgments were righteous, and that by their own disobedience they had provoked the accomplishment of those curses, which God had threatened, and which they then experienced; and lastly, to supplicate His mercies with sorrow and contrition. This prayer was probably used also by the captives themselves; and the sentiments, which it contains, were similar to those which Daniel and Nehemiah continued to inculcate during and after the captivity.

This book was not received as canonical by the Jews, or the primitive Church of Christ, though it is cited with respect by many of the earlier writers: it is not mentioned in the catalogue of St. Austin, nor in that of the council of Carthage: it is expressly excluded, with the rest of the Apocryphal books, from the catalogue received from their ancestors by the Greek church: and the members of the Council of Trent were more perplexed, and deliberated longer, about the admission of Baruch, than of any other of the Apocryphal books; and they were withheld from rejecting it only by the consideration, that parts of it were read in the service of the church.

Many ancient writers have cited Baruch under the name of Jeremiah; not that they believed that what we now possess under the name of Baruch was actually composed by Jeremiah, but that they considered Baruch as a disciple of the Prophet; and imagined perhaps, that the epistle in the last chapter of his book was really written by Jeremiah, to whose canonical works it was formerly joined. In the Romish church the book is read at the feast of Pentecost under the name of Jeremiah: but many of the Romanists do not scruple to deny its authority.

The letter, which constitutes the sixth chapter of this book, is in some editions of the Greek, and in the Arabick, which is translated from the Greek, subjoined to the Lamentations. It is omitted by Theodoret in his Commentary, and is not to be found in several Greek manuscripts, nor in any of the Hebrew copies of Jeremiah's writings. It is probably a spurious work, and is rejected as such by St. Jerome; though cited by St. Cyprian and others, as an epistle of Jeremiah, and supposed by some to be alluded to by the author of the second book of the Maccabees, chap. ii. 1, 2; who however only speaks of Jeremiah's general exhortations against idolatry. The letter certainly never was in the Jewish canon. It was probably fabricated by some writer, who had studied the character and writings of Jeremiah; and it contains judicious and spirited strictures against idolatry, of which the vanity is forcibly exposed.

Baruch, after the execution of his commission, appears to have returned to Jerusalem; where, in conjunction with Jeremiah, he encountered much persecution, Jer. xliii. 3; and witnessed the total destruction of Jerusalem. After this he was drawn by Johanan, with Jeremiah and the remnant of Judah, into Egypt, Jer. xliii. 5—7; from which country he probably never returned: though some pretend that he went a second time to Babylon, and died there about the year of the world 3428. Dr. Gray.

CHAP. I.

1 Baruch wrote a book in Babylon. 5 The Jews there wept at the reading of it. 7 They send money and the book to the brethren at Jerusalem.

AND these are the words of the book, which Baruch the son of Nerias, the son of Maasias, the son of Sedecias, the son of Asadias, the son of Checias, wrote in Babylon,

2 In the fifth year, and in the seventh day of the month, what time as the Chaldeans took Jerusalem, and burnt it with fire.

3 And Baruch did read the words of this book in the hearing of Jechonias the son of ‖ Joachim king of Juda, and in the ears of all the people that came to hear the book,

‖ Or, Joacim.

4 And in the hearing of the nobles, and of the king's sons, and in the hearing of the elders, and of all the people, from the lowest unto the highest, even of all them that dwelt at Babylon by the river Sud.

§ Or, and vowed vows.

5 Whereupon they wept, fasted, ‖ and prayed before the Lord.

6 They made also a collection of money according to every man's power:

‖ Or, Joacim.

7 And they sent it to Jerusalem unto ‖ Joachim the high priest, the son of Chelcias, son of Salom, and to the priests, and to all the people which were found with him at Jerusalem,

8 At the same time when he received the vessels of the house of the Lord, that were carried out of the temple, to return them into the land of Juda, the tenth day of the month Sivan, namely, silver vessels, which Sedecias the son of Josias king of Juda had made,

9 After that Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon had carried away Jechonias, and the princes, and the ‖ captives, and the ‖ Or, mighty men, and the people of the land, men from Jerusalem, and brought them unto Babylon.

10 And they said, Behold, we have sent you money to buy you burnt offerings, and sin offerings, and incense, and prepare ye † manna, and offer upon the altar of the Lord our God;

† Gr. corruptly for manna, that is, a meal offering.

11 And pray for the life of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon, and for the life of Balthasar his son, that their days may be upon earth as the days of heaven:

12 And the Lord will give us strength, and lighten our eyes, and we shall live under the shadow of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon, and under the shadow of Balthasar his son, and we shall serve them many days, and find favour in their sight.

13 Pray for us also unto the Lord our God, for we have sinned against the Lord our God; and unto this day the fury of the Lord and his wrath is not turned from us.

14 And ye shall read this book which we have sent unto you, to make confession in the house of the Lord, upon the feasts and solemn days.

15 And ye shall say, [a] To the Lord our God belongeth righteousness, but unto us the confusion of faces, as it is come to pass

[a] Chap. 2.

Chap. I. ver. 1. And these are the words of the book, &c.] It begins abruptly, as if it were a continuation of some former work: but the connective particle is often to be observed in the beginning of the historical books of the Hebrews. By "book," we are to understand the letter, ver. 14, which Baruch wrote from the captives at Babylon to the Jews who remained in Judea. Arnald.

2. In the fifth year, and in the seventh day of the month,] The name of the month is not specified: it probably means the month Cisleu, corresponding partly with November, the same month in which Jerusalem was taken five years before. Dr. Gray.

4. — by the river Sud.] The commentators either take no notice at all, or give no satisfactory account, of this river. Some suppose it to be a name for the Euphrates. Arnald.

8. At the same time when he received the vessels &c.] Seraias brother of Baruch was sent by Zedekiah, in the fourth year of his reign, which was the fifth of the captivity of Jeconiah, to solicit from Nebuchadnezzar the vessels which had been carried away from the temple of the Lord. Baruch accompanied his brother on this mission, and on the tenth day of Sivan, which corresponds in part with our May, they obtained restitution of the vessels. It was then that the captives remitted their collection, and wrote the following letter. Calmet.

—— silver vessels, which Sedecias — had made,] Instead of the golden ones, which Solomon had put in the house of the Lord, and which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away. To supply their place, Zedekiah made the silver vessels, which Seraias appears to have now obtained. Jeremiah had declared, that the golden vessels should not be soon brought again, chap. xxvii. 16; and the most valuable were not restored till the expiration of the captivity Dan. v. 2; Ezra i. 7. Arnald, Dr. Gray.

10. — manna,] This is a corrupt reading, as the margin intimates. Arnald.

—— and offer upon the altar of the Lord our God;] See Dr Blayney's note on Jer. xli. 5.

11. — Balthasar his son,] Belshazzar, here intended, was the grandson of Nebuchadnezzar. See Dan. v. 2, and the note there

12. — and we shall serve them many days,] The wish and prayer of the Jews is, not that they might "serve Nebuchadnezzar and his family many days," but that if, according to their melancholy prospect, they should continue so to serve them, they might "find favour in their sight," and their servitude in the land of their captivity might be easy, or at least tolerable. Arnald.

15. And ye shall say, &c.] The "book" or letter sent by the captives at Babylon properly begins here. It may be divided into three parts. In the first, which ends at chap. iii. 8, they acknowledge their unworthiness, and the justice of God's dealings with them; they entreat His forgiveness of their sins past, and repeat the warning and threats of the Prophets, whose words and re proofs they had notwithstanding rejected: the second part, which begins at ver. 9 of the third chapter, to the beginning of the fourth, recounts the great privileges and advantages which the Jews enjoyed above other nations, in that they had the knowledg this day, unto them of Juda, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem,

16 And to our kings, and to our princes, and to our priests, and to our prophets, and to our fathers:

[a] Dan. 9. 5. 17 For we have [b] sinned before the Lord,

18 And disobeyed him, and have not hearkened unto the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in the commandments that he gave us openly:

19 Since the day that the Lord brought our forefathers out of the land of Egypt, unto this present day, we have been disobedient unto the Lord our God, and we have been negligent in not hearing his voice.

[c] Deut. 28. 15. 20 [c] Wherefore the evils cleaved unto us, and the curse, which the Lord appointed by Moses his servant at the time that he brought our fathers out of the land of Egypt, to give us a land that floweth with milk and honey, like as it is to see this day.

21 Nevertheless we have not hearkened unto the voice of the Lord our God, according unto all the words of the prophets, whom he sent unto us:

22 But every man followed the imagination of his own wicked heart, to serve strange gods, and to do evil in the sight of the Lord our God.

CHAP. II.

The prayer and confession which the Jews at Babylon made, and sent in that book unto the brethren in Jerusalem.

THEREFORE the Lord hath made good his word, which he pronounced against us, and against our judges that judged Israel, and against our kings, and against our princes, and against the men of Israel and Juda,

2 To bring upon us great plagues, such as never happened under the whole heaven, as it came to pass in Jerusalem, according to the things that were written in the law of Moses;

[a] Deut. 28. 53. 3 That a man should [a] eat the flesh of his own son, and the flesh of his own daughter.

4 Moreover he hath delivered them to be in subjection to all the kingdoms that are round about us, to be as a reproach and desolation among all the people round about, where the Lord hath scattered them.

† Gr. were beneath, and not above. 5 Thus we † were cast down, and not exalted, because we have sinned against the Lord our God, and have not been obedient unto his voice.

[b] Chap. 1. 15. 6 [b] To the Lord our God appertaineth righteousness: but unto us and to our fathers open shame, as appeareth this day.

7 For all these plagues are come upon us, which the Lord hath pronounced against us.

8 Yet have we not prayed before the Lord, that we might turn every one from the imaginations of his wicked heart.

9 Wherefore the Lord watched over us for evil, and the Lord hath brought it upon us: for the Lord is righteous in all his works which he hath commanded us.

10 Yet we have not hearkened unto his voice, to walk in the commandments of the Lord, that he hath set before us.

[a] Dan. 9. 15. 11 [c] And now, O Lord God of Israel, that hast brought thy people out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and high arm, and with signs, and with wonders, and with great power, and hast gotten thyself a name, as appeareth this day:

12 O Lord our God, we have sinned, we have done ungodly, we have dealt unrighteously in all thine ordinances.

13 Let thy wrath turn from us: for we are but a few left among the heathen, where thou hast scattered us.

14 Hear our prayers, O Lord, and our petitions, and deliver us for thine own sake, of the law of the Most High, and, through the direction of the only true wisdom, were made acquainted with the means of real happiness, life, and peace. From thence to the end of the fifth chapter, is an exhortation to a sincere repentance, and to leave their evil ways by a speedy conversion, with a promise, on that condition, of a deliverance from the captivity under which they groaned, that the power of their enemies should be subdued, and their haughtiness turned into mourning. This pleasing prospect takes up the remainder of the letter, in which the author has many beautiful turns and lively strokes, and is transported, even to a degree of rapture, in the thoughts of the agreeable change. In particular, the happy times of the Gospel are spoken of with such assurance and clearness, as have given occasion to some to suspect interpolations in several places, the descriptions being too clear and explicit for the darkness of those times: especially chap. iii. 37. It is easy to observe, with respect to the supplicatory part of this prayer, that much of it is borrowed from Daniel, and that, in the description of the glorious state of the Church, there is frequent allusion to many passages in Isaiah. Arnald.

Chap. II. ver. 3. That a man should eat the flesh &c.] See Deut. xxviii. 56, 57, and the note from Bp. Newton.

4. — in subjection to all the kingdoms that are round about us,] The Jews had been successively delivered to all their enemies, who had in turn exercised against them all kinds of cruelty. The kings of Egypt and of Syria, the Edomites, the Philistines, the Moabites, the Ammonites, had declared themselves against them at different times. Afterwards they were subjected to the Chaldeans, and despised by all the surrounding nations, as a people without strength, without authority, the mere remnant and ruins of a commonwealth, of old so flourishing and so formidable. Calmet.

and give us favour in the sight of them which have led us away:

15 That all the earth may know that thou art the Lord our God, because † Israel and his posterity is called by thy name.

† Gr. thy name is called upon Israel.

16 O Lord, [d] look down from thine holy house, and consider us: bow down thine ear, O Lord, to hear us.

[d] Deut. 26. 15. Isa. 63. 15.

17 Open thine eyes, and behold; for the [e] dead that are in the graves, whose † souls are taken from their bodies, will give unto the Lord neither praise nor righteousness:

[e] Psal. 6. 5. & 115. 17. Isa. 38. 18, 19. † Gr. breath, or, life.

18 But the soul that is greatly vexed, which goeth stooping and feeble, and the eyes that fail, and the hungry soul, will give thee praise and righteousness, O Lord.

19 [f] Therefore we do not make our humble supplication before thee, O Lord our God, for the righteousness of our fathers, and of our kings.

[f] Dan. 9. 18.

20 For thou hast sent out thy wrath and indignation upon us, as thou hast spoken by thy servants the prophets, saying,

21 [g] Thus saith the Lord, Bow down your shoulders to serve the king of Babylon: so shall ye remain in the land that I gave unto your fathers.

[g] Jer. 27. 11.

22 But if ye will not hear the voice of the Lord, to serve the king of Babylon,

23 I will cause to cease out of the cities of Juda, and from without Jerusalem, the voice of mirth, and the voice of joy, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride: and the whole land shall be desolate of inhabitants.

24 But we would not hearken unto thy voice, to serve the king of Babylon: therefore hast thou made good the words that thou spakest by thy servants the prophets, namely, that the bones of our kings, and the bones of our fathers, should be taken out of their places.

25 And, lo, they are cast out to the heat of the day, and to the frost of the night, and they died in great miseries by famine, by sword, and by pestilence.

26 And the house which is called by thy name hast thou laid waste, as it is to be seen this day, for the wickedness of the house of Israel and the house of Juda.

27 O Lord our God, thou hast dealt with us after all thy goodness, and according to all that great mercy of thine,

28 As thou spakest by thy servant Moses in the day when thou didst command him to write thy law before the children of Israel, saying,

29 [h] If ye will not hear my voice, surely † this very great multitude shall be turned into a small number among the nations, where I will scatter them.

[h] Lev. 26. 14. Deut. 28. 15. † Gr. this a so many.

30 For I knew that they would not hear me, because it is a stiffnecked people: but in the land of their captivities they shall ‖ remember themselves,

‖ Or, come to themselves.

31 And shall know that I am the Lord their God: for I will give them an heart, and ears to hear:

32 And they shall praise me in the land of their captivity, and think upon my name,

33 And return from their stiff † neck, and from their wicked deeds: for they shall remember the way of their fathers, which sinned before the Lord.

† Gr. back.

34 And I will bring them again into the land which I promised with an oath unto their fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and they shall be lords of it: and I will increase them, and they shall not be diminished.

35 And I will make an everlasting covenant with them to be their God, and they shall be my people: and I will no more drive my people of Israel out of the land that I have given them.

CHAP. III.

3 The rest of their prayer and confession contained in that book, which Baruch writ, and sent to Jerusalem. 30 Wisdom was shewed first to Jacob, and was seen upon the earth.

O LORD Almighty, God of Israel, the soul in anguish, the troubled spirit, crieth unto thee.

2 Hear, O Lord, and have mercy; for

---

24. — that the bones of our kings, — should be taken out of their places.] It was a custom both among Jews and Gentiles to bury with the deceased some of their most valuable effects and ornaments, and sometimes to put into the sepulchre a great quantity of money and treasure. The Chaldean soldiers, in the hope of finding such deposits, broke up the Jewish sepulchres, and cast out the bones of the deceased "out of their graves, and spread them before the sun and the moon," thus fulfilling the prophecy of Jeremiah, chap. viii. 1, 2. Arnald, Calmet.

35. And I will make an everlasting covenant with them] Hence it appears probable, that the Jews at Babylon, where this author wrote, did not conceive that the prophecies of their nation were exhausted in the first return of the Jews under the Persian kings. By virtue of the "everlasting covenant," which God had made with them to "drive them no more out of the land," they seem to have hoped for another, a more perfect and more glorious restoration, as foretold by the Prophets, which should be the deliverance of God Himself, as the Jews are still wont to call the salvation of the Messiah. Bp Chandler thou art merciful: and have pity upon us, because we have sinned before thee.

3 For thou endurest for ever, and we perish utterly.

4 O Lord Almighty, thou God of Israel, hear now the prayers of the dead Israelites, and of their children, which have sinned before thee, and not hearkened unto the voice of thee their God: for the which cause these plagues cleave unto us.

5 Remember not the iniquities of our forefathers: but think upon thy power and thy name now at this time.

6 For thou art the Lord our God, and thee, O Lord, will we praise.

7 And for this cause thou hast put thy fear in our hearts, to the intent that we should call upon thy name, and praise thee in our captivity: for [a] we have called to mind all the iniquity of our forefathers, that sinned before thee.

[a] Deut. 30.

8 Behold, we are yet this day in our captivity, where thou hast scattered us, for a reproach and a curse, and to be subject to payments, according to all the iniquities of our fathers, which departed from the Lord our God.

9 Hear, Israel, the commandments of life: give ear to understand wisdom.

10 How happeneth it, Israel, that thou art in thine enemies' land, that thou art waxen old in a strange country, that thou art defiled with the dead,

11 That thou art counted with them that go down into the grave?

12 Thou hast forsaken the fountain of wisdom.

13 For if thou hadst walked in the way of God, thou shouldest have dwelled in peace for ever.

14 Learn where is wisdom, where is strength, where is understanding; that thou mayest know also where is length of days, and life, where is the light of the eyes, and peace.

15 [b] Who hath found out her place? or who hath come into her treasures?

[b] Job 28. 12, 20

16 Where are the princes of the heathen become, and such as ruled the beasts upon the earth;

17 They that had their pastime with the fowls of the air, and they that hoarded up silver and gold, wherein men trust, and made no end of their getting?

18 For they that wrought in silver, and were so careful, and whose works are unsearchable,

19 They are vanished and gone down to the grave, and others are come up in their steads.

20 Young men have seen light, and dwelt upon the earth: but the way of knowledge have they not known,

21 Nor understood the paths thereof, nor laid hold of it: their children were far off from that way.

22 It hath not been heard of in Chanaan, neither hath it been seen in Theman.

23 The Agarenes that seek wisdom upon earth, the merchants of Meran and of Theman, the ‖ authors of fables, and searchers out of understanding; none of these have known the way of wisdom, or remember her paths.

‖ Or, expounders.

24 O Israel, how great is the house of Chap. III. ver. 4. — the dead Israelites,] It is not an uncommon expression to compare persons under great calamity to dead men, and to speak of them as such. See Ezekiel, chap. xxxvii, where the Israelites in their captivity are represented as dead bones, ver. 11, and their return from their dispersion is mentioned as the opening of their graves. In like manner, their restoration is described as a resurrection by Isaiah, chap. xxvi. 19. Arnald.

8. — for a reproach and a curse, and to be subject to payments,] The phrase may signify unjust exaction, to which the Jews in the land of their captivity were exposed, and which they probably suffered, being at the will and arbitrary pleasure of those who had them in subjection.

The first part of the letter of the captives ends with this verse. Arnald.

10. — thou art defiled with the dead, &c.] The sense is, that, living among the Chaldeans, they were in a state of continual defilement, dwelling as it were among the tombs. He compares the captive Jews, in a strange country, to a person shut up in a grave, or confined in a house with a dead corpse. There is the like expression, Ps. xxviii. 1. Arnald.

14. Learn where is wisdom, &c.] See the concluding note on Job, chap. xxviii.

16. — such as ruled the beasts upon the earth;] Namely, kings who delighted in hunting, and the diversions of the chace, sporting with animals the most fierce and savage. Compare Jer. xxvii. 6; xxviii. 14; Judith xi. 7. Grotius.

17. They that had their pastime with the fowls of the air,] Hawking was a royal pastime in ancient times. A dominion over the fowls of the air, as well as over the beasts of the earth, is mentioned in Scripture as an instance of the sovereignty of princes. See Dan. ii. 38; Ezek. xxxi. 6; Judith xi. 7. Grotius, Arnald.

23. The Agarenes that seek wisdom] Called also Ishmaelites. Not only Arabia and the adjacent countries, but the eastern part of the world in general was famous for the study of wisdom or philosophy. See Jer. xlix. 7. Arnald.

— the authors of fables, and searchers out of understanding;] The Orientals in general were very conversant in the practice of teaching by fables and apologues. It was also a principal study of these people, and an art in which they endeavoured to distinguish themselves, to propose and resolve enigmas and similitudes. The queen of Sheba is a memorable example of it, 1 Kings x. 1, 2. Calmet.

24. — how great is the house of God!] How extensive is His empire! how great is the number of His subjects! how vast is His dominion! All the earth is His kingdom: all men are in subjection to Him: all times are under His control. But how few are they, who enter into His secrets, and partake of His wisdom! Calmet. The writer calls the universe "the house of God,"

God! and how large is the place of his possession!

25 Great, and hath none end; high, and unmeasurable.

26 There were the giants famous from the beginning, that were of so great stature, and so expert in war.

27 Those did not the Lord choose, neither gave he the way of knowledge unto them:

28 But they were destroyed, because they had no wisdom, and perished through their own foolishness.

29 Who hath gone up into heaven, and taken her, and brought her down from the clouds?

30 Who hath gone over the sea, and found her, and will bring her for pure gold?

31 No man knoweth her way, nor thinketh of her path.

32 But he that knoweth all things knoweth her, and hath found her out with his understanding: he that prepared the earth for evermore hath filled it with fourfooted beasts:

33 He that sendeth forth light, and it goeth, calleth it again, and it obeyeth him with fear.

34 The stars shined in their watches, and rejoiced: when he calleth them, they say, Here we be; and so with cheerfulness they shewed light unto him that made them.

35 This is our God, and there shall none other be accounted of in comparison of him.

36 He hath found out all the way of knowledge, and hath given it unto Jacob his servant, and to Israel his beloved.

37 [c] Afterward did he shew himself upon earth, and conversed with men. [c] Prov. 8. 31. John 1. 14.

CHAP. IV.

1 The book of commandments is that wisdom which was commended in the former chapter. 25 The Jews are moved to patience, and to hope for the deliverance.

THIS is the book of the commandments of God, and the law that endureth for ever: all they that keep it shall come to life; but such as leave it shall die.

2 Turn thee, O Jacob, and take hold of it: walk [†] in the presence of the light thereof, that thou mayest be illuminated. [†] Gr. to the shining before the light thereof.

3 Give not thine honour to another, nor the things that are profitable unto thee to a strange nation.

4 O Israel, happy are we: for things that are pleasing to God are made known unto us.

5 Be of good cheer, my people, the memorial of Israel.

6 Ye were sold to the nations, not for [your] destruction: but because ye moved God to wrath, ye were delivered unto the enemies.

7 For ye provoked him that made you by [a] sacrificing unto devils, and not to God. [a] 1 Cor. 10. 20.

8 Ye have forgotten the everlasting God, that brought you up; and ye have grieved Jerusalem, that nursed you.

9 For when she saw the wrath of God coming upon you, she said, Hearken, O ye that dwell about Sion: God hath brought upon me great mourning; because the infinite Being is every where present in it, and governs it as a father or master does his family. Arnald.

36. There were the giants &c.] They, as well as all others, were under the dominion of the sovereign Monarch of the universe; but they were not chosen of God to receive the gifts of wisdom. God preferred to them Noah and his family before the flood; and after that time He preferred Israel to the Rephaim, to the giants of Palestine. Calmet. And indeed throughout both Testaments it appears to have been the constant tenor of His procedure, to prefer the meek and lowly to the mighty and arrogant. Arnald.

32. — he that prepared the earth for evermore hath filled it with fourfooted beasts:] The Latin version reads with a conjunction, "He that prepared the earth for evermore, and filled it with cattle and beasts." The sense is, according to Calmet, He that made the earth, that it might continue always, or that it might never move at any time. The earth was looked upon as the foundation and centre of all the movements, and of all the changes that happened here below, without moving or changing itself. Monarchs rise and fall, men die and others succeed in their place, the seasons change and are in continual vicissitude, but the earth continues always the same. According to that observation of Solomon, "one generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever," Eccles. i. 4. Arnald.

34. — when he calleth them, they say, Here we be;] See the notes on Job xxxviii. 35; Jer. xlvii. 6.

35. This is our God, &c.] Grotius hastily pronounces this passage to the end of the chapter, to be an addition by some Christian. Others consider it as an inspired prophecy of the incarnation and human intercourse of the Messiah. It is perhaps only an acknowledgment of the Divine Wisdom, which had manifested itself to the Patriarchs, and conversed by revelation with mankind, Exod. xxiv. 9—18. It has however so far a prophetick cast, as it is imitative of passages, which, under praises of wisdom, figuratively celebrate that Eternal Wisdom, which dwelt among us in the person of the Son of God. Compare Prov. viii. 31. Dr. Gray.

Chap. IV. ver. 1. This is the book &c.] The meaning is, It is in the book of the commandments of the Lord, that true wisdom consists. This chapter is a continuation of the subject of the preceding. Calmet.

3. Give not thine honour to another,] Namely, the honour of being the chosen and favoured people of God. Do not expose thyself to lose this honourable distinction by thy crimes. Calmet.

5. — the memorial of Israel.] That is, the poor remains of the Jews, the surviving hopes of sinking Israel, who are preserved to continue the name and memory of once so famous a people, the only remaining monument of distressed Sion. Arnald.

10 For I saw the captivity of my sons and daughters, which the Everlasting brought upon them.

11 With joy did I nourish them; but sent them away with weeping and mourning.

12 Let no man rejoice over me, a widow, and forsaken of many, who for the sins of my children am left desolate; because they departed from the law of God.

13 They knew not his statutes, nor walked in the ways of his commandments, nor trod in the paths ‖ of discipline in his righteousness.

‖ Or, of his discipline in righteousness.

14 Let them that dwell about Sion come, and remember ye the captivity of my sons and daughters, which the Everlasting hath brought upon them.

15 For he hath brought a nation upon them from far, a shameless nation, and of a strange language, who neither reverenced old man, nor pitied child.

16 These have carried away the dear beloved children of the widow, and left her that was alone desolate without daughters.

17 But what can I help you?

18 For he that brought these plagues upon you will deliver you from the hands of your enemies.

19 Go your way, O my children, go your way: for I am left desolate.

‖ Or, prosperity.

20 I have put off the clothing of ‖ peace, and put upon me the sackcloth of my prayer: I will cry unto the Everlasting ‖ [b] in my days.

‖ Or, in the time of mine affliction. [b] Psal. 116. 2 & 137. 7.

21 Be of good cheer, O my children, cry unto the Lord, and he shall deliver you from the power and hand of the enemies.

22 For my hope is in the Everlasting, that he will save you; and joy is come unto me from the Holy One, because of the mercy which shall soon come unto you from the Everlasting our Saviour.

23 For I sent you out with mourning and weeping: but God will give you to me again with joy and gladness for ever.

24 Like as now the neighbours of Sion have seen your captivity: so shall they see shortly your salvation from our God, which shall come upon you with great glory, and brightness of the Everlasting.

25 My children, suffer patiently the wrath that is come upon you from God: for thine enemy hath persecuted thee; but shortly thou shalt see his destruction, and shalt tread upon his neck.

26 ‖ My delicate ones have gone rough ways, and were taken away as a flock caught of the enemies.

‖ Or, My darlings.

27 Be of good comfort, O my children, and cry unto God: for ye shall be remembered of him that brought these things upon you.

28 For as it was your mind to go astray from God: so, being returned, seek him ten times more.

29 For he that hath brought these plagues upon you shall bring you everlasting joy again with your salvation.

30 Take a good heart, O Jerusalem: for he that gave thee that name will comfort thee.

31 Miserable are they that afflicted thee, and rejoiced at thy fall.

32 Miserable are the cities which thy children served: miserable is she that received thy sons.

33 For as she rejoiced at thy ruin, and was glad of thy fall: so shall she be grieved for her own desolation.

---

12. Let no man rejoice over me, a widow, &c.] This personification of Sion, bewailing her children gone into captivity, is moving and beautiful. The venting of her grief in broken accents, "But what can I help you?" ver. 17, Grotius says, is inimitably affecting. At length, all appearance of human help vanishing, she raises motives of consolation from that never failing treasury of delight and comfort to afflicted minds, the word of God, whose statutes had been her song in the house of her pilgrimage; and assures them from the Prophets, of a deliverance from her captivity, and remarkable vengeance overtaking their persecutors. In this pleasing prospect she exults and triumphs, chap. v, as a fond mother overjoyed for the recovery of her children. Arnald.

15. For he hath brought a nation upon them from far, &c.] See the note from Dr. Hales on Deut. xxviii. 32.

20. I have put off the clothing of peace, &c.] That is, I have put off the garment of "prosperity," as in the margin, or of gladness; and have put upon me the sackcloth of penance and supplication. The last clause may be rendered, as in the margin, "in the time of mine affliction." Arnald.

22. For my hope is in the Everlasting, &c.] Baruch here speaks with an almost prophetick confidence of those blessings, which Jeremiah and other Prophets might have taught him to expect from the "everlasting Saviour," who should soon appear; of that joy which should come from the East, ver. 36; and of the triumphant glory, with which Jerusalem should be exalted, and her sons assembled from all kingdoms in righteousness and peace, ver. 37. These were prospects of future exultation, with which all in the captivity must have consoled their affliction; they were general characters of the kingdom of Messiah, which every one conversant with the sacred writings was capable of describing. Dr. Gray. See the note on chap. ii. 25.

25. — shortly thou shalt see his destruction, and shalt tread upon his neck.] That is, thine enemies shall come and fall down before thee. This was literally accomplished under Mordecai and Esther, at Susa; and under Daniel, at Babylon. They were raised to the first stations in the empire, and the Chaldeans themselves were forced to submit to their authority, and to prostrate themselves before them. Isaiah had long before foretold it, chap. lx. 14. It was more perfectly accomplished under Jesus Christ, when the heathens came into the church, and threw themselves at the feet of those whom they had persecuted. Calmet.

30. — for he that gave thee that name] Rather, He that named thee: the Lord, who permits thee to take the name of the people of the Lord. Calmet.

34 For I will take away the rejoicing of her great multitude, and her pride shall be turned into mourning.

35 For fire shall come upon her from the Everlasting, long to endure; and she shall be inhabited of devils for a great time.

36 O Jerusalem, look about thee toward the east, and behold the joy that cometh unto thee from God.

37 Lo, thy sons come, whom thou sentest away, they come gathered together from the east to the west by the word of the Holy One, rejoicing in the glory of God.

CHAP. V.

1 Jerusalem is moved to rejoice, 5 and to behold their return out of captivity with glory.

PUT off, O Jerusalem, the garment of thy mourning and affliction, and put on the comeliness of the glory that cometh from God for ever.

2 Cast about thee a double garment of the righteousness which cometh from God; and set a diadem on thine head of the glory of the Everlasting.

3 For God will shew thy brightness unto every country under heaven.

4 For thy name shall be called of God for ever The peace of righteousness, and The glory of God's worship.

5 Arise, O Jerusalem, and stand on high, and look about toward the east, and behold thy children gathered from the west unto the east by the word of the Holy One, rejoicing in the remembrance of God.

6 For they departed from thee on foot, and were led away of their enemies: but God bringeth them unto thee exalted with glory, as children of the kingdom.

7 For God hath appointed that every high hill, and banks of long continuance, should be cast down, and vallies filled up, to make even the ground, that Israel may go safely in the glory of God.

8 Moreover even the woods and every sweetsmelling tree shall overshadow Israel by the commandment of God.

9 For God shall lead Israel with joy in the light of his glory with the mercy and righteousness that cometh from him.

¶ THE EPISTLE OF JEREMY.

CHAP. VI.

1 The cause of the captivity is their sin. 3 The place whereto they were carried is Babylon: the vanity of whose idols and idolatry are set forth at large in this chapter.

A copy of an epistle, which Jeremy sent unto them which were to be led captives into Babylon by the king of the Babylonians, to certify them, as it was commanded him of God.

BECAUSE of the sins which ye have committed before God, ye shall be led away captives into Babylon by Nabuchodonosor king of the Babylonians.

3 So when ye be come unto Babylon, ye shall remain there many years, and for a long season, namely, seven generations: and after that I will bring you away peaceably from thence.

4 [a] Now shall ye see in Babylon gods of silver, and of gold, and of wood, borne upon shoulders, which cause the nations to fear. [a] Isa. 44. 9, 10. & 46. 5, 7. Psal. 115. 4. Wis. 13. 10.

5 Beware therefore that ye in no wise be like to strangers, neither be ye afraid of them, when ye see the multitude before them and behind them, worshipping them.

6 But say ye in your hearts, O Lord, we must worship thee.

7 For mine angel is with you, and I myself caring for your souls.

8 As for their tongue, it is polished by the workman, and they themselves are gilded and laid over with gold; yet are they but false, and cannot speak.

9 And taking gold, as it were for a virgin that loveth to go gay, they make crowns for the heads of their gods.

---

35. — she shall be inhabited of devils] See the note from W. Lowth on Is. xiii. 20.

Chap. V. ver. 6. — exalted with glory, as children of the kingdom.] That is, as a royal race, or children of kings, riding triumphantly in a magnificent procession. Ezra gives us the number and quality of the persons that returned, their horses, mules, camels, &c. employed on the occasion, Ezra ii. 66: and it is related at 1 Esdr. v. 2, that Darius himself sent a thousand horsemen to conduct them back safely to Jerusalem with musical instruments. Arnald.

8. Moreover even the woods and every sweetsmelling tree &c.] A poetical description, setting off in an hyperbolical manner the ease and pleasure with which the people should return to Babylon. Calmet.

Chap. VI. ver. 1. A copy of an epistle, &c.] This epistle, said to be Jeremiah's, is supposed to be written to the Jews, when they were going into captivity with their king, to admonish them to beware of the idolatry they would see in Babylon: and seems to be the letter referred to in 2 Macc. ii. 2, 3, where the same caution is given as here to guard against the idolatry they would observe in that place, and is an epitome of sundry things in Moses, the Psalms, and the Prophets, against idolatry. Arnald.

3. — seven generations:] The word "generation" is here used for the term of ten years. The captivity of the Jews at Babylon lasted seventy years, according to the prophecy of Jeremiah. Arnald.

4. — borne upon shoulders,] See the note on Is. xlvi. 3.

10 Sometimes also the priests convey from their gods gold and silver, and bestow it upon themselves.

11 Yea, they will give thereof to the ‖ common harlots, and deck them as men with garments, [being] gods of silver, and gods of gold, and wood.

‖ Or, with prostitute themselves upon.

12 Yet cannot these gods save themselves from rust and moths, though they be covered with purple raiment.

13 They wipe their faces because of the dust of the temple, when there is much upon them.

14 And he that cannot put to death one that offendeth him holdeth a sceptre, as though he were a judge of the country.

15 He hath also in his right hand a dagger and an ax: but cannot deliver himself from war and thieves.

16 Whereby they are known not to be gods: therefore fear them not.

17 For like as a vessel that a man useth is nothing worth when it is broken; even so it is with their gods: when they be set up in the temple, their eyes be full of dust through the feet of them that come in.

‖ Or, courts.

18 And as the ‖ doors are made sure on every side upon him that offendeth the king, as being committed to suffer death: even so the priests make fast their temples with doors, with locks, and bars, lest their gods be spoiled with robbers.

19 They light them candles, yea, more than for themselves, whereof they cannot see one.

20 They are as one of the beams of the temple, yet they say their hearts are † gnawed upon by things creeping out of the earth; and when they eat them and their clothes, they feel it not.

† Or, licked.

21 Their faces are blacked through the smoke that cometh out of the temple.

22 Upon their bodies and heads sit bats, swallows, and birds, and the cats also.

23 By this ye may know that they are no gods: therefore fear them not.

24 Notwithstanding the gold that is about them to make them beautiful, except they wipe off the rust, they will not shine: for neither when they were molten did they feel it.

25 The things wherein there is no breath are bought for ‖ a most high price.

‖ Or, any price.

26 [b] They are borne upon shoulders, having no feet, whereby they declare unto men that they be nothing worth.

[b] Isa. 46. 7.

27 They also that serve them are ashamed: for if they fall to the ground at any time, they cannot rise up again of themselves: neither, if one set them upright, can they move of themselves: neither, if they be bowed down, can they make themselves straight: but they set ‖ gifts before them, as unto dead men.

‖ Or, offerings.

28 As for the things that are sacrificed unto them, their priests sell and ‖ abuse; in like manner their wives lay up part thereof in salt; but unto the poor and impotent they give nothing of it.

‖ Or, treat.

29 Menstruous women and women in childbed [c] eat their sacrifices: by these things ye may know that they are no gods: fear them not.

[c] Lev. 12. 4.

30 For how can they be called gods? because women set meat before the gods of silver, gold, and wood.

31 And the priests sit in their temples, having their clothes rent,* and their heads and beards shaven, and nothing upon their heads.

32 They roar and cry before their gods, as men do at the feast when one is dead.

33 They priests also take off their garments, and clothe their wives and children.

34 Whether it be evil that one doeth

---

12. — though they be covered with purple raiment.] That the heathens, in their idolatrous worship, adorned the images of their gods with costly raiment, is confirmed from Jer. x. 9. Arnald. See the note there.

14. — as though he were a judge of the country.] That is, a prince, governour, or king. The idols were generally represented with a sceptre or a spear, the former being the emblem of justice and sovereignty, the latter of power. Calmet.

15. He hath also in his right hand a dagger and an ax:] Arnobius observes concerning the Gentiles, that they designed to create fear by the manner in which they framed and represented the statues and images of their gods; hence scythes, clubs, and thunderbolts, were appendages to their idols. Arnald.

20. — yet they say &c.] The sense appears to be, the very idols confess, testify, or make it plain, by the signs of decay and rottenness visible about them, and by their being eaten as a piece of ordinary wood by worms, and not perceiving what is done to them, that they are perishable and senseless. Junius, Arnald. "Their hearts," namely, the heart of the wood, of which the idols are composed. Calmet.

27. — if they fall to the ground &c.] See this illustrated in the case of Dagon, 1 Sam. v. 3, 4. Arnald.

—— they set gifts before them, as unto dead men.] They are served with provisions, which are set before them in form, without their being able to feast on the viands which are offered them. See the story of Bel and the Dragon. By "gifts placed before dead men," the writer alludes to the sepulchral entertainments, which were anciently much used in the Eastern and other countries, and particularly among some idolaters, whose notion was, that the souls of the departed wandered about their sepulchres, and wanted a proper sustenance, and that it was a pious office to place bread and wine over their graves, for their support and refreshment. See the note on Ecclus. xxx. 18. Arnald.

30. For how can they be called gods? because women &c.] The meaning is, that their claim to divinity rests upon the superstition and ignorance of foolish women. Calmet.

31, 32. And the priests sit in their temples, &c.] See the notes on Lev. xix. 27, 28; xxi. 5, 10.

unto them, or good, they are not able to recompense it: they can neither set up a king, nor put him down.

35 In like manner, they can neither give riches nor money: though a man make a vow unto them, and keep it not, they will not require it.

36 They can save no man from death, neither deliver the weak from the mighty.

37 They cannot restore a blind man to his sight, nor help any man in his distress.

38 They can shew no mercy to the widow, nor do good to the fatherless.

39 Their gods of wood, and which are overlaid with gold and silver, are like the stones that be hewn out of the mountain: they that worship them shall be confounded.

40 How should a man then think and say that they are gods, when even the Chaldeans themselves dishonour them?

41 Who if they shall see one dumb that cannot speak, they ‖ bring him, and intreat Bel that he may speak, as though he were able to understand.

‖ Or, bid him call upon Bel.

42 Yet they cannot understand this themselves, and leave them: for they have no ‖ knowledge.

‖ Or, sense.

43 The women also with cords about them, sitting in the ways, burn bran for perfume: but if any of them, drawn by some that passeth by, lie with him, she reproacheth her fellow, that she was not thought as worthy as herself, nor her cord broken.

44 Whatsoever is done among them is false: how may it then be thought or said that they are gods?

45 They are made of carpenters and goldsmiths: they can be nothing else than the workmen will have them to be.

46 And they themselves that made them can never continue long; how should then the things that are made of them be gods?

47 For they left lies and reproaches to them that come after.

48 For when there cometh any war or plague upon them, the priests consult with themselves, where they may be hidden with them.

49 How then cannot men perceive that they be no gods, which can neither save themselves from war, nor from plague?

50 [c] For seeing they be but of wood, and overlaid with silver and gold, it shall be known hereafter that they are false:

[c] Psal. 115. 4. Wisd. 13. 10.

51 And it shall manifestly appear to all nations and kings that they are no gods, but the works of men's hands, and that there is no work of God in them.

52 Who then may not know that they are no gods?

53 For neither can they set up a king in the land, nor give rain unto men.

54 Neither can they judge their own cause, nor redress a wrong, being unable: for they are as crows between heaven and earth.

55 Whereupon when fire falleth upon the house of gods of wood, or laid over with gold or silver, their priests will flee away, and escape; but they themselves shall be burned asunder like beams.

56 Moreover they cannot withstand any king or enemies: how can it then be thought or said that they be gods?

57 Neither are those gods of wood, and laid over with silver or gold, able to escape either from thieves or robbers.

58 Whose gold, and silver, and garments wherewith they are clothed, they that are strong do take, and go away withal: neither are they able to help themselves.

59 Therefore it is better to be a king that sheweth his power, or else a profitable vessel in an house, which the owner shall have use of, than such false gods; or to be a door in an house, to keep such things safe as be therein, than such false gods; or a pillar of wood in a palace, than such false gods.

---

40. — when even the Chaldeans themselves dishonour them?] That is, they inwardly laugh at them, persuaded of their weakness and inability to do any thing. If their priests presented any sick persons before the idols, it was rather to comply with the prevailing superstition, than from any hope that the cure would be effected. They were conscious of the cheat, though for gainful reasons they continued the practice. Arnald.

41. — as though he were able to understand.] How unable Bel or Baal was to understand or answer the petitions of his worshippers, we learn from that signal instance, 1 Kings xviii. 26. Arnald.

43. The women also with cords about them, &c.] Allusion is here made to the practices mentioned in the note on 2 Kings xvii. 30. From this passage it appears into what infamous indecency religion had degenerated, when the most dissolut pleasures were turned into so many acts of devotion, and it was counted by a woman a dishonour not to be defiled. Calmet Arnald.

53. — nor give rain unto men.] See Jer. v. 24, and the note there.

54. — they are as crows between heaven and earth.] As little acquainted with what passes among men, and as little able to effect any change upon earth, as the meanest bird that flies. Calmet Arnald.

56. — they cannot withstand any king &c.] See Is. xlvi. 1—7 and the notes there.

60 For sun, moon, and stars, being bright, and sent to do their offices, are obedient.

61 In like manner the lightning when it breaketh forth is easy to be seen; and ‖ after the same manner the wind bloweth in every country.

‖ Or, the same wind.

62 And when God commandeth the clouds to go over the whole world, they do as they are bidden.

63 And the fire sent from above to consume hills and woods doeth as it is commanded: but these are like unto them neither in shew nor power.

64 Wherefore it is neither to be supposed nor said that they are gods, seeing they are able neither to judge causes, nor to do good unto men.

65 Knowing therefore that they are no gods, fear them not.

66 For they can neither curse nor bless kings:

67 Neither can they shew signs in the heavens among the heathen, nor shine as the sun, nor give light as the moon.

68 The beasts are better than they: for they can get under a covert, and help themselves.

69 It is then by no means manifest unto us that they are gods: therefore fear them not.

70 For as a scarecrow in a garden of cucumbers keepeth nothing: so are their gods of wood, and laid over with silver and gold.

71 And likewise their gods of wood, and laid over with silver and gold, are like to a white thorn in an orchard, that every bird sitteth upon; as also to a dead body, that is cast into the dark.

72 And ye shall know them to be no gods by the ‖ bright purple that rotteth upon them: and they themselves afterward shall be eaten, and shall be a reproach in the country.

‖ Or, purple and brightness.

73 Better therefore is the just man that hath none idols: for he shall be far from reproach.

60. For sun, moon, and stars, being bright, &c.] These great bodies follow the appointment of their Creator. If any creature really deserved worship, it should seem that these were most worthy of it. Their beauty and splendour attract our admiration, and the advantages we receive from them claim our acknowledgment; but all their glory and power they derive from the Father of lights. The gods of the nations neither equal them in beauty, nor are alike beneficial by their influence: we ought therefore to confine all our worship and homage to the living God only, and to give no sort of adoration to false gods of any kind. Arnald.

70. For as a scarecrow &c.] The birds for some time are afraid of a scarecrow, but soon they become used to it, and then care no more about it. They fear it only as long as they take it for a real man. The same is the case with idols: they derive their authority only from the folly and ignorance of those who worship them. Calmet.

72. — by the bright purple that rotteth upon them:] It is observable that this writer is very explicit, and descends to a detail of vestments, ornaments, and decorations of these idols, whom their priests set off and adorned with all possible care, to make them look more rich and glorious. And the reason of his being so particular seems to be, that he might set "their delectable things," as the Prophet calls them, Is. xliv. 9, in a true light, and expose their unprofitableness and decay to a carnal and gross people, too apt to be affected with pomp and pageantry; and whose senses were likely to pervert their understanding, so as not to discern the cheat and falsity of such a worship. Arnald.

—— and they themselves afterward shall be eaten,] This is most probably to be explained of the wooden idols, wormeaten through time. Arnald.

THE SONG

OF THE

THREE HOLY CHILDREN,

Which followeth in the third Chapter of DANIEL after this place,—fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.—Ver. 23. That which followeth is not in the Hebrew, to wit, And they walked—unto these words, Then Nebuchadnezzar—ver. 24.

INTRODUCTION.

IN some copies of the Greek version of Theodoret, and in the vulgar Latin edition of the Bible, this book is inserted between the twenty-third and twenty-fourth verses of the third chapter of Daniel: as at the beginning of the book is prefixed the History of Susanna, and at the end is added that of Bel and the Dragon: but none of these additions are to be found in any Hebrew copy, nor do they appear ever to have existed in the Hebrew or Chaldaick language.

It is probable that the same author invented, or composed from traditional accounts, all the Apocryphal additions, which he interwove with the genuine work of Daniel. Annexed to, or incorporated with, the inspired book, they gradually rose into reputation; and under the sanction of the Prophet's name, and the approbation of the Church, which suffered them to be read for instruction and manners, they were perhaps sometimes considered, in a loose and popular representation, as a part of the genuine work of Daniel.

It is however universally admitted, that they never were in the Hebrew canon: nor can there be any doubt that they were written long after the time of Daniel, by some writer desirous of imitating and of embellishing the sacred history: though, as they were not expressly severed from the canonical books by any positive decree, they were received by the preposterous decision of the Council of Trent as genuine, and in every respect canonical. It is uncertain at what time they were composed. Dr. Gray.

The present book consists of two parts; a prayer and a thanksgiving. The prayer is a devout confession of the sins of the people, and an acknowledgment of God's righteousness, in bringing upon them their captivity and other calamities. And the thanksgiving is a solemn excitation of all creatures whatever, but more especially of the three Hebrew children, who were thus "saved from the bands of death," to "bless the Lord, praise and exalt Him above all for ever." Stackhouse.

Agreeably to this division it may be remarked, that the title, "The Song of the three holy Children," applies properly to the latter part of the work only, from ver. 29 to the end. In the Latin version, and also in Coverdale's English translation, as noted by Bp. Wilson, the title is "The Prayer of Azarias and the Song of the three holy Children." The term "children" appears to mean young men. In the first chapter of Daniel, ver. 4, according to our present translation the word "children" occurs; see the note there: instead of which two old translations, namely, Coverdale's and another, read "springaldes," and "springalls," which latter word is explained by Dr. Johnson to be an obsolete term for "a youth." Todd says, in his enlarged Johnson's Dictionary, that in our old ballads and romances the best authorized sense of the word "child" is that of a youth of noble blood. And this sense exactly corresponds with the circumstances of these "three holy children," as described in the above-mentioned passage of Daniel. Edit.

The song, said to have been uttered by the three companions of Daniel when thrown by Nebuchadnezzar into the burning furnace, is to be admired for its instruction and tendency. The righteous persons, who are said to have uttered it, and whose reputation was founded on the authentick accounts of Daniel, chap. iii. 28, appear by their pious fortitude to have contributed with the Prophet to the suppression of idolatry. The veneration entertained for their character, of which the memory was highly celebrated among the Jews, probably induced some Hellenistick Jew to fabricate this ornamental addition to their history. It must have been inserted at a very early period, as it is cited by many ancient writers. The work is composed with great spirit; and the sentiments, attributed to "the holy children," are consistent with the piety, for which they were distinguished. The hymn resembles the 148th Psalm, as to its invocation on all the works of creation to praise and exalt the Lord. Dr. Gray. According to some authors, it was ancient used in the Jewish church; and adopted into the publick devotions of the Christians from the most early times. In the first Common Prayer Book of King Edward the Sixth, it was appointed to be used, during Lent, in the place of Te Deum. It is still retained in our Liturgy, with a direction for it to be used at the discretion of the minister. And considering the subject of the hymn, namely, that it is an elegant summons to all God's works to praise Him, intimating that they all set forth His glory, and invite us, who have the benefit of them, to join in "praising and magnifying the Lord for ever;" whenever we would glorify God for His work, which is one main end of the Lord's day, or when the Lesson treats of the creation, and sets before us the wonderful works of God in any of His creatures, or the use He makes of them either ordinary or miraculous for the good of the Church; this hymn may very seasonably be used. Wheatly.

1 Azarias his prayer and confession in the flame, 24 wherewith the Chaldeans about the oven were consumed, but the three children within it were not hurt. 28 The song of the three children in the oven.

AND they walked in the midst of the fire, praising God, and blessing the Lord.

2 Then Azarias stood up, and prayed on this manner; and opening his mouth in the midst of the fire said,

3 Blessed art thou, O Lord God of our fathers: thy name is worthy to be praised and glorified for evermore:

4 For thou art righteous in all the things

Ver. 2. — Azarias] Called Abednego in the book of Daniel. See Dan. i. 7.

that thou hast done to us: yea, true are [a] Psal. 25. 10. all thy works, thy ways are right, and [a] all thy judgments truth.

5 In all the things that thou hast brought upon us, and upon the holy city of our fathers, even Jerusalem, thou hast executed true judgment: for according to truth and judgment didst thou bring all these things upon us because of our sins.

6 For we have sinned and committed iniquity, departing from thee.

7 In all things have we trespassed, and not obeyed thy commandments, nor kept them, neither done as thou hast commanded us, that it might go well with us.

8 Wherefore all that thou hast brought upon us, and every thing that thou hast done to us, thou hast done in true judgment.

9 And thou didst deliver us into the hands of lawless enemies, most hateful forsakers of God, and to an unjust king, and the most wicked in all the world.

10 And now we cannot open our mouths, we are become a shame and reproach to thy servants, and to them that worship thee.

11 Yet deliver us not up wholly, for thy name's sake, neither disannul thou thy covenant:

12 And cause not thy mercy to depart from us, for thy beloved Abraham's sake, for thy servant Isaac's sake, and for thy holy Israel's sake;

13 To whom thou hast spoken and promised, that thou wouldest multiply their seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand that lieth upon the seashore.

14 For we, O Lord, are become less than any nation, and be kept under this day in all the world because of our sins.

15 Neither is there at this time prince, or prophet, or leader, or burnt offering, or sacrifice, or oblation, or incense, or place to sacrifice before thee, and to find mercy.

16 Nevertheless in a contrite heart and an humble spirit let us be accepted.

17 Like as in the burnt offerings of rams and bullocks, and like as in ten thousands of fat lambs: so let our sacrifice be in thy sight this day, and grant that we may wholly go after thee: for they shall not be confounded that put their trust in thee.

18 And now we follow thee with all our heart, we fear thee, and seek thy face.

19 Put us not to shame: but deal with us after thy lovingkindness, and according to the multitude of thy mercies.

20 Deliver us also according to thy marvellous works, and give glory to thy name, O Lord: and let all them that do thy servants hurt be ashamed;

21 And let them be confounded ‖ in all their power and might, and let their strength be broken;

‖ Or. by thy power and might.

22 And let them know that thou art Lord, the only God, and glorious over the whole world.

23 And the king's servants, that put them in, ceased not to make the oven hot with ‖ rosin, pitch, tow, and small wood;

60. O ye children of men, bless ye the Lord:] Having called upon all the other kinds of things and animals, which are in heaven, in the air, the earth, and the sea, he now proceeds to men, whose principal duty it is to praise God. And in this address to men, he observes the following order: from the whole race of mankind he descends to the peculiar people of God, and thence to particular persons among that people, who were especially occupied in God's worship. Badwell.

THE HISTORY OF SUSANNA,

Set apart from the beginning of Daniel, because it is not in the Hebrew, as neither the Narration of † Bel and the Dragon.

† Or, Bel's dragon.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS Book has no sufficient pretensions to be considered as canonical. It appears to have been written in Greek by some Jew, who invented the history, or collected its particulars from traditionary relations, in praise of Daniel. The history might perhaps have some foundation in truth, though it is not mentioned by Josephus; who indeed has not noticed any of the particulars contained in these Apocryphal additions to the book of Daniel. The Jews in general rejected it as an improbable fable; they had however some traditional accounts of the story, and many fancied that it was alluded to by Jeremiah in his prophecy, chap. xxix. 22, 23. See the note there.

The book seems to have been received by the Christian Church as containing a relation not inconsistent with the Sacred history, but not as the production of Daniel; though, as forming an appendage to his work, and containing an account of circumstances in which he was concerned, it was sometimes cited under his name; and being read by the Church, was considered with reverence. It is received, together with other spurious additions, as canonical by the Romish church, but is suffered to continue in our Bibles only as a work from which moral improvement is to be drawn. Dr. Gray.

16 Two judges hide themselves in the garden of Susanna to have their pleasure of her: 28 which when they could not obtain, they accuse and cause her to be condemned for adultery: 46 but Daniel examineth the matter again, and findeth the two judges false.

THERE dwelt a man in Babylon, called Joacim:

2 And he took a wife, whose name was Susanna, the daughter of Chelcias, a very fair woman, and one that feared the Lord.

3 Her parents also were righteous, and taught their daughter according to the law of Moses.

4 Now Joacim was a great rich man, and had a fair garden joining unto his house: and to him resorted the Jews; because he was more honourable than all others.

5 The same year were appointed two of the ancients of the people to be judges, such as the Lord spake of, that wickedness came from Babylon from ancient judges, who seemed to govern the people.

6 These kept much at Joacim's house: and all that had any suits in law came unto them.

7 Now when the people departed away at noon, Susanna went into her husband's garden to walk.

8 And the two elders saw her going in every day, and walking; so that their lust was inflamed toward her.

9 And they perverted their own mind, and turned away their eyes, that they might not look unto heaven, nor remember just judgments.

10 And albeit they both were wounded with her love, yet durst not one shew another his grief.

11 For they were ashamed to declare their lust, that they desired to have to do with her.

12 Yet they watched diligently from day to day to see her.

Ver. 4. Now Joacim was a great rich man, &c.] The Jews that were carried away captives to Babylon were not so plundered, but that many among them were both rich and powerful. See Tob. i. 13, 14, 22. The Jews seem to have resorted to Joacim's house for advice, or as to a seat of justice. See ver. 6, 7, 28. Arnald. Some of the Jewish rabbies suppose him to have been Jehoiachin, the captive king of Judah. Dr. Hales.

5. The same year were appointed two of the ancients of the people &c.] The Hebrews never had "judges," either two in number, or annually appointed. These might have been assessors to the chief or president of the captives. Grotius. It is probable that the Jews retained a sort of judicial power, even in their captivity, and that they executed some of the penal laws of Moses in smaller instances. See Esth. iii. 8. Arnald.

—— such as the Lord spake of, &c.] Namely, in Jeremiah, chap. xxix. 22. He gives not the words, but the sense of the Prophet. Grotius.

—— who seemed to govern the people.] That is, who governed the people: an ordinary phrase. See Mark x. 42, where an expression, very much resembling this in the original Greek, is rendered by St. Matthew, chap. xx. 25, "the princes." Grotius, Arnald.

9. — that they might not look unto heaven, &c.] That is, that they might not look unto or reflect upon the God of heaven, nor remember His just judgments against such notorious sinners. See Luke xv. 18. Arnald.

13 And the one said to the other, Let us now go home: for it is dinner time.

14 So when they were gone out, they parted the one from the other, and turning back again they came to the same place; and after that they had asked one another the cause, they acknowledged their lust: then appointed they a time both together, when they might find her alone.

15 And it fell out, as they watched a fit time, she went in † as before with two maids only, and she was desirous to wash herself in the garden: for it was hot.

† Or, as yesterday and the day before.

16 And there was no body there save the two elders, that had hid themselves, and watched her.

17 Then she said to her maids, Bring me oil and washing balls, and shut the garden doors, that I may wash me.

18 And they did as she bade them, and shut the garden doors, and went out themselves at ‖ privy doors to fetch the things that she had commanded them: but they saw not the elders, because they were hid.

‖ Or, side doors.

19 Now when the maids were gone forth, the two elders rose up, and ran unto her, saying,

20 Behold, the garden doors are shut, that no man can see us, and we are in love with thee; therefore consent unto us, and lie with us.

21 If thou wilt not, we will bear witness against thee, that a young man was with thee: and therefore thou didst send away thy maids from thee.

22 Then Susanna sighed, and said, I am straitened on every side: for if I do this thing, it is death unto me: and if I do it not, I cannot escape your hands.

23 It is better for me to fall into your hands, and not do it, than to sin in the sight of the Lord.

24 With that Susanna cried with a loud voice: and the two elders cried out against her.

25 Then ran the one, and opened the garden door.

26 So when the servants of the house heard the cry in the garden, they rushed in at a privy door, to see what was done unto her.

27 But when the elders had declared their matter, the servants were greatly ashamed: for there was never such a report made of Susanna.

28 And it came to pass the next day, when the people were assembled to her husband Joacim, the two elders came also full of mischievous imagination against Susanna to put her to death;

29 And said before the people, Send for Susanna, the daughter of Chelcias, Joacim's wife. And so they sent.

30 So she came with her father and mother, her children, and all her kindred.

31 Now Susanna was a very delicate woman, and beauteous to behold.

32 And these wicked men commanded to uncover her face, (for she was covered) that they might be filled with her beauty.

33 Therefore her friends and all that saw her wept.

34 Then the two elders stood up in the midst of the people, and laid their hands upon her head.

35 And she weeping looked up toward heaven: for her heart trusted in the Lord.

36 And the elders said, As we walked in the garden alone, this woman came in with two maids, and shut the garden doors, and sent the maids away.

37 Then a young man, who was there hid, came unto her, and lay with her.

38 Then we that stood in a corner of the garden, seeing this wickedness, ran unto them.

39 And when we saw them together, the man we could not hold: for he was stronger than we, and opened the door, and leaped out.

40 But having taken this woman, we asked who the young man was, but she would not tell us: these things do we testify.

41 Then the assembly believed them, as those that were the elders and judges of the people: so they condemned her to death.

42 Then Susanna cried out with a loud voice, and said, O everlasting God, that knowest the secrets, and knowest all things before they be:

43 Thou knowest that they have borne false witness against me, and, behold, I must die; whereas I never did such things as these men have maliciously invented against me.

---

15. — she went in as before] As her custom was. Grotius.

22. — commanded to uncover her face,] Probably under pretence of discovering signs of guilt in her countenance. Grotius. Concerning the custom of women appearing vailed in publick, see Gen. xxiv. 65, and the notes there.

34. — and laid their hands upon her head.] See the note on Lev. xxiv. 14.

44 And the Lord heard her voice.

45 Therefore when she was led to be put to death, the Lord raised up the holy spirit of a young youth, whose name was Daniel:

46 Who cried with a loud voice, I am clear from the blood of this woman.

47 Then all the people turned them toward him, and said, What mean these words that thou hast spoken?

48 So he standing in the midst of them said, Are ye such fools, ye sons of Israel, that without examination or knowledge of the truth ye have condemned a daughter of Israel?

49 Return again to the place of judgment: for they have borne false witness against her.

50 Wherefore all the people turned again in haste, and the elders said unto him, Come, sit down among us, and shew it us, seeing God hath given thee the honour of an elder.

51 Then said Daniel unto them, Put these two aside one far from another, and I will examine them.

52 So when they were put asunder one from another, he called one of them, and said unto him, O thou that art waxen old in wickedness, now thy sins which thou hast committed aforetime are come to light:

53 For thou hast pronounced false judgment, and hast condemned the innocent, and hast let the guilty go free; albeit the Lord saith, 'The innocent and righteous shalt thou not slay.

54 Now then, if thou hast seen her, tell me, Under what tree sawest thou them companying together? Who answered, Under a † mastick tree.

55 And Daniel said, Very well; thou hast lied against thine own head; for even now the angel of God hath received the sentence of God to cut thee in two.

56 So he put him aside, and commanded to bring the other, and said unto him, O thou seed of Chanaan, and not of Juda, beauty hath deceived thee, and lust hath perverted thine heart.

57 Thus have ye dealt with the daughters of Israel, and they for fear companied with you: but the daughter of Juda would not abide your wickedness.

58 Now therefore tell me, Under what tree didst thou take them companying together? Who answered, Under an ‖ holm tree.

59 Then said Daniel unto him, Well; thou hast also lied against thine own head: for the angel of God waiteth with the sword to cut thee in two, that he may destroy you.

60 With that all the assembly cried out with a loud voice, and praised God, who saveth them that trust in him.

61 And they arose against the two elders, for Daniel had convicted them of false witness by their own mouth:

62 And according to the law of Moses they did unto them in such sort as they maliciously intended to do to their neighbour: and they put them to death. Thus the innocent blood was saved the same day.

63 Therefore Chelcias and his wife praised God for their daughter Susanna, with Joacim her husband, and all the kindred, because there was no dishonesty found in her.

64 From that day forth was Daniel had in great reputation in the sight of the people.

---

45. — a young youth, whose name was Daniel:] The history, if founded on truth, must be supposed to have taken place when Daniel was very young, and probably, according to some accounts, not above twelve years of age. Dr. Gray.

46. — I am clear from the blood of this woman.] I do not consent to her death. Castellio. A form of speech used also in Matt. xxvii. 24. Grotius.

50. — and the elders said unto him, &c.] These "elders" were most probably different from the two others; and, not being in the plot with them, but acting agreeably to their publick office and character, were well inclined to detect the falsity of the accusation, and to reexamine the cause for that purpose. Arnald.

54. — Under a mastick tree.] Or, "lentisk tree." It is an evergreen, not uncommon in the Greek isles, in Italy, and some parts of France; and affords a very pleasant shade from the verdure of its foliage. Bedwell, Calmet.

55. — to cut thee in two.] Daniel, in his reply to the elders, alludes to the Greek names of the trees, under which they said the fact was committed, and from these names pronounces sentence to their confusion. Between the Greek words for "a mastick tree" and "an holm tree," and the two verbs respectively rendered "to cut thee in two," in this verse and the fifty-ninth, there is an affinity of sound, which cannot be translated into another language. Dean Prideaux. See Jer. i. 11, 12, and the note there.

56. — O thou seed of Chanaan, and not of Juda,] See the note on Ezek. xvi. 3.

58. — Under an holm tree.] The ilex, or evergreen oak. Dr. Johnson.

62. — and they put them to death.] Though the Jews, as Origen and others maintain, might have the power of the sword sometimes in their dispersions, yet it may be questioned how far they had the power of life and death during their captivity under the Chaldeans. It seems more probable that they had not such a power, and therefore the Jewish writers will have these elders to have been punished by Nebuchadnezzar. Under the Romans, who gave the Jews as much liberty as the Babylonians, it is certain they had not this power of life and death, as appears from John xviii. 31, "It is not lawful for us to put any man to death." It is more likely that they had only magistrates, judges, and courts of justice of their own, to decide differences in cases of property, in a way peculiar to themselves; as Strabo says they had at Alexandria in the like state. Arnald.

THE

OF

† Gr. Bel's dragon.

† BEL AND THE DRAGON,

CUT OFF FROM THE END OF DANIEL.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS Book, which in Theodotion's version of Daniel, and in the Vulgate, is annexed as a fourteenth chapter to the book of Daniel, is properly rejected by our Church, having never been in the Hebrew canon, or received as authentick by the earlier Christians. It is most reasonable to suppose that it was never extant in the Hebrew language, though it might, as Lightfoot has conceived, be a parabolical story founded on a passage in Jeremiah, chap. li. 44, who threatens punishment to Bel, the great national idol of Babylon, in terms that might have suggested the circumstances of his destruction as described in this book.

Many persons object to the improbability of the circumstances related in this book; as particularly to the destruction of the Dragon, and to the conveyance of Habakkuk from Jerusalem to Babylon, merely to furnish a dinner to Daniel. The book indeed, though it be cited as historical by the most respectable writers in the earliest ages of the Church, is considered as fabulous by St. Jerome; and it must be allowed to contain some extraordinary and incredible relations. It is however canonized by the Council of Trent. Daniel, probably by detecting the mercenary contrivances of the idolatrous priests of Babylon, and by opening the eyes of the people to the follies of that superstition into which they had been seduced, might have furnished some foundation for the history; and the writer of the book appears to have introduced some additional circumstances to enliven the narration, and to illustrate the providence of God in protecting and providing for those who adhere to His service. Dr. Gray.

19 The fraud of Bel's priests is discovered by Daniel, 27 and the dragon slain, which was worshipped. 33 Daniel is preserved in the lions' den. 42 The king doth acknowledge the God of Daniel, and casteth his enemies into the same den.

AND king Astyages was gathered to his fathers, and Cyrus of Persia received his kingdom.

‖ Or. lived with the king.

2 And Daniel ‖ conversed with the king, and was honoured above all his friends.

3 Now the Babylonians had an idol, called Bel, and there was spent upon him every day twelve great measures of fine flour, and forty sheep, and six vessels of wine.

4 And the king worshipped it, and went daily to adore it: but Daniel worshipped his own God. And the king said unto him, Why dost not thou worship Bel?

5 Who answered and said, Because I may not worship idols made with hands, but the living God, who hath created the heaven and the earth, and hath sovereignty over all flesh.

6 Then said the king unto him, Thinkest thou not that Bel is a living God? seest thou not how much he eateth and drinketh every day?

7 Then Daniel smiled, and said, O king, be not deceived: for this is but clay within, and brass without, and did never [a] eat or drink any thing. [a] Eccl[us]. 30. 19.

8 So the king was wroth, and called for his priests, and said unto them, If ye tell me not who this is that devoureth these expences, ye shall die.

9 But if ye can certify me that Bel devoureth them, then Daniel shall die: for he hath spoken blasphemy against Bel. And Daniel said unto the king, Let it be according to thy word.

10 Now the priests of Bel were threescore and ten, beside their wives and children. And the king went with Daniel into the temple of Bel.

11 So Bel's priests said, Lo, we go out:

Ver. 1. — Cyrus of Persia received his kingdom.] The author here speaks of Cyrus, as of the immediate successor of Astyages, agreeably to the account of Herodotus and his followers. But it is certain, from profane and sacred history, that there was an intermediate king of Media, who reigned two years, called Cyaxares by Xenophon, and Darius by Daniel and Josephus. Dr. Gray. See the note on Dan. v. 31.

2. And Daniel conversed with the king,] That is, he lived with him upon terms of familiar intimacy. Badwell.

3. — Bel,] See the note from Dean Prideaux on Gen. x. 9.

but thou, O king, set on the meat, and make ready the wine, and shut the door fast, and seal it with thine own signet;

12 And to morrow when thou comest in, if thou findest not that Bel hath eaten up all, we will suffer death; or else Daniel, that speaketh falsely against us.

13 And they little regarded it: for under the table they had made a privy entrance, whereby they entered in continually, and consumed those things.

14 So when they were gone forth, the king set meats before Bel. Now Daniel had commanded his servants to bring ashes, and those they strewed throughout all the temple in the presence of the king alone: then went they out, and shut the door, and sealed it with the king's signet, and so departed.

15 Now in the night came the priests with their wives and children, as they were wont to do, and did eat and drink up all.

16 In the morning betime the king arose, and Daniel with him.

17 And the king said, Daniel, are the seals whole? And he said, Yea, O king, they be whole.

18 And as soon as he had opened the door, the king looked upon the table, and cried with a loud voice, Great art thou, O Bel, and with thee is no deceit at all.

19 Then laughed Daniel, and held the king that he should not go in, and said, Behold now the pavement, and mark well whose footsteps are these.

20 And the king said, I see the footsteps of men, women, and children. And then the king was angry, 21 And took the priests with their wives and children, who shewed him the privy doors, where they came in, and consumed such things as were upon the table.

22 Therefore the king slew them, and delivered Bel into Daniel's power, who destroyed him and his temple.

‖ Some add this title, Of the dragon.

23 ‖ And in that same place there was a great dragon, which they of Babylon worshipped.

24 And the king said unto Daniel, Wilt thou also say that this is of brass? lo, he liveth, he eateth and drinketh; thou canst not say that he is no living god: therefore worship him.

25 Then said Daniel unto the king, I will worship the Lord my God: for he is the living God.

26 But give me leave, O king, and I shall slay this dragon without sword or staff. The king said, I give thee leave.

27 Then Daniel took pitch, and fat, and hair, and did seethe them together, and made lumps thereof: this he put in the dragon's mouth, and so the dragon burst in sunder: and Daniel said, ‖ Lo, these are the gods ye worship.

‖ Or, Behold what ye worship.

28 When they of Babylon heard that, they took great indignation, and conspired against the king, saying, The king is become a Jew, and he hath destroyed Bel, he hath slain the dragon, and put the priests to death.

29 So they came to the king, and said, Deliver us Daniel, or else we will destroy thee and thine house.

30 Now when the king saw that they pressed him sore, being constrained, he [b] delivered Daniel unto them:

[b] Dan. 6. 16.

31 Who cast him into the lions' den: where he was six days.

32 And in the den there were seven lions, and they had given them every day ‖ two carcases, and two sheep: which then were not given to them, to the intent they might devour Daniel.

‖ Or, two slaves.

33 Now there was in Jewry a prophet, called Habbacuc, who had ‖ made pottage, and had broken bread in a bowl, and was going into the field, for to bring it to the reapers.

‖ Or, sod.

34 But the angel of the Lord said unto Habbacuc, Go, carry the dinner that thou hast into Babylon unto Daniel, who is in the lions' den.

35 And Habbacuc said, Lord, I never saw Babylon; neither do I know where the den is.

36 Then the angel of the Lord took him by the crown, and [c] bare him by the hair of his head, and through the vehemency of his spirit set him in Babylon over the den.

[c] Ezek. 8. 3.

37 And Habbacuc cried, saying, O Da-

23. — a great dragon.] By the dragon is to be understood a serpent, of which, to the triumph of our great deceiver, the worship prevailed among many nations in early times. Dr. Gray.

27. — and so the dragon burst in sunder.] It may be supposed that this effect was produced, not by any specifick power of the composition, but by the suffocation which it occasioned in a narrow throat. Arnald, Dr. Gray.

33. — a prophet, called Habbacuc.] If this be the same person, whose book we receive as canonical, he must have lived a long time, for he prophesied either before or at least during the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. Eusebius and others suppose it to be a different Habakkuk, whom they regard as the writer of this short history, as also of that of Susanna. Arnald.

38 And Daniel said, Thou hast remembered me, O God: neither hast thou forsaken them that seek thee and love thee.

39 So Daniel arose, and did eat: and the angel of the Lord set Habbacuc in his own place again immediately.

40 Upon the seventh day the king went to bewail Daniel: and when he came to the den, he looked in, and, behold, Daniel was sitting.

41 Then cried the king with a loud voice, saying, Great art thou, O Lord God of Daniel, and there is none other beside thee.

THE

PRAYER OF MANASSES

KING OF JUDA,

WHEN HE WAS HOLDEN CAPTIVE IN BABYLON.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS short Prayer is ascribed to Manasseh, and is said to have been composed by him during his captivity at Babylon; 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11—13. Though it contain nothing inconsistent with the circumstances and period of that monarch, it is not supposed to be his authentick production. It is not in any of the Hebrew copies of the Bible; and it is uncertain in what language it was originally composed. It is however written in a style of much piety and humility. The author of it speaks of repentance as requisite to sinners, in a manner similar to the declaration made by our Saviour, Matt. ix. 13. Dr. Gray.

Before CHRIST about 676.

O LORD, Almighty God of our fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and of their righteous seed; who hast made heaven and earth, with all the ornament thereof; who hast bound the sea by the word of thy commandment; who hast shut up the deep, and sealed it by thy terrible and glorious name; whom all men fear, and tremble before thy power; for the majesty of thy glory cannot be borne, and thine angry threatening toward sinners is importable: but thy merciful promise is unmeasurable and unsearchable; for thou art the most high Lord, of great compassion, longsuffering, very merciful, and repentest of the evils of men. Thou, O Lord, according to thy great goodness hast promised repentance and forgiveness to them that have sinned against thee: and of thine infinite mercies hast appointed repentance unto sinners, that they may be saved. Thou therefore, O Lord, that art the God of the just, hast not appointed repentance to the just, as to Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, which have not sinned against thee; but thou hast appointed repentance unto me that am a sinner: for I have sinned above the number of the sands of the sea. My transgressions, O Lord, are multiplied: my transgressions are multiplied, and I am not worthy to behold and see the height of heaven for the multitude of mine iniquities. I am bowed down with many iron bands, that I cannot lift up mine head, ‖ neither have any release: for I have provoked thy wrath, and done evil before thee: I did not thy will, neither kept I thy commandments: I have set up abominations, and have multiplied offences. Now therefore I bow the knee of mine heart, beseeching thee of grace. I have sinned, O Lord, I have sinned, and I acknowledge mine iniquities: wherefore, I humbly beseech thee, forgive me, O Lord, forgive me, and destroy me not with mine iniquities. Be not angry with me for ever, by reserving evil for me; neither condemn me into the lower parts of the earth. For thou art the God, even the God of them that repent; and in me thou wilt shew all thy goodness: for thou wilt save me, that am unworthy, according to thy great mercy. Therefore I will praise thee for ever all the days of my life: for all the powers of the heavens do praise thee, and thine is the glory for ever and ever. Amen.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE MACCABEES.

INTRODUCTION.

THE first book of the Maccabees contains a collection of historical particulars relating to the Jews, from the beginning of the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes, in the year of the world 3829, to the death of Simon the high priest, 3869. It is supposed to have been originally written in the Hebrew, or rather in the Chaldaick language of the Jerusalem dialect, as used by the Jews after the return from captivity. The author is by some thought to have been John Hyrcanus, the son of Simon; who was a prince and high priest of the Jews near thirty years, and who began his government at the period at which this history concludes. Josephus, indeed, informs us, that the high priests were intrusted with the care of writing the annals of their country; and at the period of the Maccabees great attention seems to have been paid to preserve them. The author of the present book, who was probably some person publickly appointed to digest the history, appears to have had recourse to the national records, and sometimes refers to them. He reckons from a Greek era, but according to the Hebrew mode of computation. St. Jerome professes to have seen the book in the Hebrew, under a title, the meaning of which is, "The sceptre of the prince of the sons of God;" a title which obviously alludes to Judas, the valiant defender of God's persecuted people. This original is however now lost. In the Greek version from which our English translation was made, the book is denominated "the book of the Maccabees," from the persons whose actions are described in it. It was probably executed before the time of Theodotion, for it appears to have been used by authors, his contemporaries. In the Paris and London Polyglots, there are two Syriack versions of both the books of the Maccabees, which were made from the Greek, though they differ from it in some respects.

The two books of the Maccabees were certainly composed after the succession of Prophets had ceased among the Jews: and were never reckoned by them in the catalogue of the Sacred writings. They are not cited by our Saviour or His Apostles; and were considered as Apocryphal by the primitive church, notwithstanding which they were pronounced to be in every respect canonical by the Council of Trent.

This first book is cited as a respectable history by the Fathers. It was probably written by a contemporary author, who had witnessed in part the scenes which he so minutely and graphically describes; and who wrote under the lively impression of the revolutions which his country had recently experienced. It is composed, at least, with great accuracy and spirit, and perhaps approaches nearer to the style of Sacred history than any work now extant. St. John has been thought to substantiate the truth of a relation herein furnished; and Josephus appears to have copied most of its accounts into his Jewish antiquities; and though the author has been represented in a few instances as betraying some ignorance in treating of foreign affairs, yet in other respects many heathen writers corroborate his reports.

The book contains the history of Mattathias and his family, and of the wars which they at the head of their countrymen maintained against the kings of Syria, in the defence of their religion and lives. From the death of Alexander, who had conquered Persia, and the countries dependant on that empire, Judea followed the fate of Syria; and for the space of one hundred and fifty years was exposed to all the ambitious contests which prevailed between the kings of Syria and Egypt. After various revolutions, and alternate subjugation to each of these kingdoms; and after having occasionally suffered all the oppression and exactions that tyranny could enforce by means of the high priests, and those princes who were appointed by the interest, and subject to the control, of the conquerors, Judea was at the time that this history begins a tributary province of Syria, under Antiochus Epiphanes; and cruelly harassed and pillaged by him. The severe persecution which he exercised, and his avowed designs, which tended to exterminate the religion, and indeed the whole nation of the Jews, inflamed the zeal of Mattathias to resentment and revolt; and upon his death excited Judas, in compliance with the dying injunctions of his father, to attempt the deliverance of his country. The successive victories and prudent conduct of Judas and his brethren, which effected the accomplishment of their designs, constitute the chief subject of the present book. The relation affords a lively picture of a nation inspired by the patriotick heroism of its leaders, and struggling with enthusiasm for civil and religious liberty. It represents Judas and his brethren, anxious to "restore the decayed estate of the people," and to purify the polluted sanctuary of their God; as endeavouring, by measures concerted in piety, and conducted with steady fortitude, to conciliate the Divine countenance. It describes, likewise, the gradual recovery of Judea from desolation and miseries to importance and prosperity, and at the same time the worship of the true God reestablished on the ruins of idolatry.

The author, like the sacred historians, selects individual characters for consideration, and describes the misconduct as well as the virtues of the heroes. He treats of the affairs of other nations only so far as connected with the circumstances of the Jewish history; and exhibits the changes and vicissitudes of other governments, as they tended to affect the interests of his country. Dr. Gray.

CHAP. I.

Before CHRIST about 323. 1 Antiochus gave leave to set up the fashions of the Gentiles in Jerusalem, 22 and spoiled it, and the temple in it, 57 and set up therein the abomination of desolation, 63 and slew those that did circumcise their children.

AND it happened, after that Alexander Before CHRIST about 325. son of Philip, the Macedonian, who came out of the land of ‖ Chettiim, had smitten Darius king of the Persians and

Before CHRIST about 328. Medes, that he reigned in his stead, the first over Greece,

2 And made many wars, and won many strong holds, and slew the kings of the earth,

3 And went through to the ends of the earth, and took spoils of many nations, insomuch that the earth was quiet before him; whereupon ‖ he was exalted, and his heart was lifted up.

‖ Or, his heart was exalted and lifted up.

4 And he gathered a mighty strong host, and ruled over countries, and nations, and ‖ kings, who became tributaries unto him.

‖ Or, kingdoms which became, &c.

5 And after these things he fell sick, and perceived † that he should die.

† Gr. that he sieeth.

6 Wherefore he called his servants, such as were honourable, and had been brought up with him from his youth, and parted his kingdom among them, while he was yet alive.

7 So Alexander reigned twelve years, and then died.

8 And his servants bare rule every one in his place.

9 And after his death they all put crowns upon themselves; so did their sons after them many years: and evils were multiplied in the earth.

10 And there came out of them a wicked root, Antiochus surnamed Epiphanes, son of Antiochus the king, who had been an about 176. hostage at Rome, and he reigned in the about 175. hundred and thirty and seventh year of the kingdom of the Greeks.

rael wicked men, who persuaded many, saying, Let us go and make a covenant with the heathen that are round about us: for since we departed from them † we have had much sorrow.

† Gr. many evils have found us.

12 So this device pleased them well.

13 Then certain of the people were so forward herein, that they went to the king, who gave them licence to do after the ordinances of the heathen:

14 Whereupon they ‖ built a place of exercise at Jerusalem according to the customs of the heathen:

‖ Or, set up an open school at Jerusalem.

15 And made themselves uncircumcised, and forsook the holy covenant, and joined themselves to the heathen, and were sold to do mischief.

16 Now when the kingdom was established before Antiochus, he thought to reign 176. over Egypt, that he might have the dominion of two realms.

17 Wherefore he entered into Egypt with a great multitude, with chariots, and elephants, and horsemen, and a great navy, 18 And made war against Ptolemee king of Egypt: but Ptolemee was afraid of him, and fled; and many were wounded to death.

19 Thus they got the strong cities in the land of Egypt, and he took the spoils thereof.

20 And after that Antiochus had smitten 170. Egypt, he returned again in the hundred —— the first over Greece,] Meaning Syria and Egypt, which at that time were called by the Hebrews the kingdom of the Greeks. Grotius.

6. — and parted his kingdom among them,] That is, he intrusted to four of them the chief administration of affairs. Grotius.

9. And after his death they all put crowns upon themselves;] Antigonus first assumed the royal dignity; he was followed by Ptolemy and the others. But they all abstained from that honour, as long as the sons of their king survived. Justin says, So great was their modesty, that, although they possessed royal power, they were contented to forbear the appellation of kings, whilst there existed a legitimate heir to Alexander. Drusius.

10. And there came out of them a wicked root, &c.] That is, one from whom proceeded many most wicked actions, as the root throws out its branches. Grotius. Concerning the succession of Antiochus Epiphanes to the throne of his father Antiochus the Great, see Dan. xi. 21, and the note there.

11. — wicked men,] Menelaus and the son of Tobias, according to Josephus. Grotius.

—— Let us go and make a covenant with the heathen] Let us form a league with Antiochus, and, to render it more secure, let us engage in the ordinances of his religion. Thus many of the Jews had formerly done, to ingratiate themselves sometimes with the Chaldeans, sometimes with the Egyptians. In what follows, they assign a false cause of their calamities, as their forefathers had done in Jeremiah, chap. xliv. 18. Thus they had lost the remembrance of those great benefits of God, who had restored them to their country, on their turning back from idolatry to His worship. Grotius.

14. — a place of exercise] Properly called a "gymnasium;" where men contended in different exercises naked: a custom repugnant to the manners of the Hebrews. Grotius.

15. — and were sold to do mischief.] Became enslaved and devoted to sin, forgetful of their former liberty in the worship of God. Badwell. See a similar phrase, 1 Kings xxi. 25; Rom. vii. 14. Grotius.

16—19. Now when the kingdom was established &c.] See these events predicted in Daniel, chap. xi. 25, 26.

17. — elephants,] In the books of the Maccabees, we find frequent mention made of elephants, because, after the reign of Alexander the Great, these animals were very much employed in the armies raised by the kings of Syria and Egypt. They are naturally of a very quiet and gentle disposition; and never make use of their strength, but when they are irritated or compelled to it. Then their strength is prodigious, and nothing can stand before them. Every creature that comes in their way they trample under foot, overthrow whole squadrons, beat down trees, and demolish houses. Calmet, Stackhouse.

20. And after that Antiochus had smitten Egypt, &c.] The Jewish historian Josephus, in his Antiquities of the Jews, hereabout begins to follow this first book of the Maccabees, a most excellent and most authentick history; and accordingly it is here with great fidelity and exactness abridged by him. Whiston.

Before CHRIST 170. forty and third year, and went up against Israel and Jerusalem with a great multitude,

21 And entered proudly into the sanctuary, and took away the golden altar, and the candlestick of light, and all the vessels thereof,

22 And the table of the shewbread, and the pouring vessels, and the vials, and the censers of gold, and the veil, and the crowns, and the golden ornaments that were before the temple, ‖ all which he pulled off.

‖ Or, he pilled all things.

23 He took also the silver and the gold, and the † precious vessels: also he took the hidden treasures which he found.

† Gr. desirable.

24 And when he had taken all away, he went into his own land, having made a great massacre, and spoken very proudly.

25 Therefore there was great mourning in Israel, in every place where they were;

26 So that the princes and elders mourned, the virgins and young men were made feeble, and the beauty of women was changed.

27 Every bridegroom took up lamentation, and she that sat in the marriage chamber was in heaviness.

28 The land also was moved for the inhabitants thereof, and all the house of Jacob was covered with confusion.

168. 29 And after two years fully expired the king sent his chief collector of tribute unto the cities of Juda, who came unto Jerusalem with a great multitude,

30 And spake peaceable words unto them, but all was deceit: for when they had given him credence, he fell suddenly upon the city, and smote it very sore, and destroyed much people of Israel.

31 And when he had taken the spoils of the city, he set it on fire, and pulled down the houses and walls thereof on every side. Before CHRIST 168.

32 But the women and children took they captive, and possessed the cattle.

33 Then builded they the city of David with a great and strong wall, and with mighty towers, and made it a strong hold for them.

34 And they put therein a sinful nation, wicked men, and fortified themselves therein.

35 They stored it also with armour and victuals, and when they had gathered together the spoils of Jerusalem, they laid them up there, and so they became a sore snare:

36 For it was a place to lie in wait against the sanctuary, and an evil adversary to Israel.

37 Thus they shed innocent blood on every side of the sanctuary, and defiled it:

38 Insomuch that the inhabitants of Jerusalem fled because of them: whereupon the city was made an habitation of strangers, and became strange to those that were born in her; and her own children left her.

39 Her sanctuary was laid waste like a wilderness, her feasts were turned into mourning, her sabbaths into reproach, her honour into contempt.

40 As had been her glory, so was her dishonour increased, and her excellency was turned into mourning.

41 Moreover king Antiochus wrote to his whole kingdom, that all should be one people, 42 And every one should leave his laws: so all the heathen agreed according to the commandment of the king.

—— and went up against Israel and Jerusalem] See Dan. xi. 28, and the note there.

23. — hidden treasures] In the East, where revolutions are frequent, it is extremely common to hide treasures in the ground; and it is usual for conquerors to carry with them persons, reputed sorcerers, whose office it is to find concealed treasures. Thus, says Sir J. Chardin, at Surat, when Siragi came there, there were persons, who, with a stick, striking on the ground or against walls, found out those that had been hollowed or dug up, and ordered such places to be opened. Harmer.

30. — he fell suddenly upon the city.] It was upon the return of the sabbath, while the people were at their devotions, that Apollonius, the "chief collector of the tribute," put his bloody commission in execution, and massacred many of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and plundered the place, 2 Mac. v. 24, &c. Stackhouse.

33. Then builded they the city of David &c.] That is, they fortified the city of David on mount Sion for a citadel. Dr. Hales. "The city of David" is the city in which David formerly dwelt: see 2 Sam. vi. 12. Drusius.

This transaction is recorded by Josephus in the following manner: "When he had overthrown the city walls, he built a citadel in the lower part of the city, for the place was high, and overlooked the temple, on which account he fortified it with high walls and towers, and put into it a garrison of Macedonians. However, in that citadel dwelt the impious and wicked part of the Jewish multitude, from whom it proved that the citizens suffered many and sore calamities." This citadel, of which we have such frequent mention in the following history, both in the Maccabees and in Josephus, seems to have been a castle built on an hill, lower than mount Zion, though upon its skirts, and higher than mount Moriah, but between them both: which hill the enemies of the Jews now got possession of, and built on it this citadel, and fortified it, till a good while afterwards the Jews regained it, demolished it, and levelled the hill itself with the common ground; that their enemies might no more recover it, and thence overlook the temple itself, and do them such mischief as they had long undergone from it. Whiston.

34. And they put therein a sinful nation, &c.] A Macedonian garrison, to whom impious and wicked men of the multitude associated themselves, as Josephus says. Grotius.

42. And every one should leave his laws:] So that they should

Before CHRIST about 168.

43 Yea, many also of the Israelites consented to his religion, and sacrificed unto idols, and profaned the sabbath.

44 For the king had sent letters by messengers unto Jerusalem and the cities of Juda, that they should follow ‖ the strange laws of the land,

‖ Or, the laws and rites of the strangers of the land.

45 And forbid burnt offerings, and sacrifice, and drink offerings, in the temple; and that they should profane the sabbaths and festival days:

46 And pollute the sanctuary and holy people:

47 Set up altars, and groves, and chapels of idols, and sacrifice swine's flesh, and unclean beasts:

48 That they should also leave their children uncircumcised, and make their souls abominable with all manner of uncleanness and profanation:

49 To the end they might forget the law, and change all the ordinances.

50 And whosoever would not do according to the commandment of the king, he said, he should die.

51 In the selfsame manner wrote he to his whole kingdom, and appointed overseers over all the people, commanding the cities of Juda to sacrifice, city by city.

52 Then many of the people were gathered unto them, to wit, every one that forsook the law; and so they committed evils in the land;

‖ Or, And they made Israel hide themselves in holes in every place of succour.

53 ‖ And drove the Israelites into secret places, even wheresoever they could flee for succour.

about 168.

54 Now the fifteenth day of the ′month Casleu, in the hundred forty and fifth year, they set up the abomination of desolation upon the altar, and builded idol altars throughout the cities of Juda on every side;

Before CHRIST about 168.

55 And burnt incense at the doors of their houses, and in the streets.

56 And when they had rent in pieces the books of the law which they found, they burnt them with fire.

57 And wheresoever was found with any the book of the testament, or if any consented to the law, † the king's commandment was, that they should put him to death.

† Gr. the king's commandment put him to death.

58 Thus did they by their authority unto the Israelites every month, to as many as were found in the cities.

about 168.

60 At which time according to the commandment they put to death certain women, † that had caused their children to be circumcised.

62 Howbeit many in Israel were fully resolved and confirmed in themselves not to eat any unclean thing.

63 Wherefore they chose rather to die, that they might not be defiled with meats, and that they might not profane the holy covenant: so then they died.

64 And there was very great wrath upon Israel.

five under the same rites and ordinances, as if they were all Macedonians. Grotius. This decree for establishing the Grecian idolatry throughout Antiochus's dominions, however expressed in general terms, appears to have been principally designed against the Jews; and it seems to have been extended to all the nations of the Syrian empire, that thereby it might reach all of the Jewish worship, wherever they were dispersed among them: the design of Antiochus being to cut off all within his reach that would not apostatize from their God and His law; that so he might, as far as in him lay, extinguish both the Jewish religion, and the Jewish name and nation at the same time. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

5 Eleazar, called ‖ Avaran: and Jonathan, whose surname was Apphus.

‖ Gaddis. ‖ Or, Avaran, or, Abaron.

6 And when he saw the blasphemies that were committed in Juda and Jerusalem,

7 He said, Woe is me! wherefore was I born to see this misery of my people, and of the holy city, and to dwell there, when it was delivered into the hand of the enemy, and the sanctuary into the hand of strangers?

8 Her temple is become as a man without glory.

9 Her glorious vessels are carried away into captivity, her infants are slain in the streets, her young men with the sword of the enemy.

10 What nation hath not had a part in her kingdom, and gotten of her spoils?

11 All her ornaments are taken away; of a free woman she is become a bondslave.

‖ Or, holy thing.

12 And, behold, our ‖ sanctuary, even our beauty and our glory, is laid waste, and the Gentiles have profaned it.

13 To what end therefore shall we live any longer?

14 Then Mattathias and his sons rent their clothes, and put on sackcloth, and mourned very sore.

15 In the mean while the king's officers, such as compelled the people to revolt, came into the city Modin, to make them sacrifice.

16 And when many of Israel came unto them, Mattathias also and his sons came together.

17 Then answered the king's officers, and said to Mattathias on this wise, Thou art a ruler, and an honourable and great man in this city, and strengthened with sons and brethren:

18 Now therefore come thou first, and fulfil the king's commandment, like as all the heathen have done, yea, and the men of Juda also, and such as remain at Jerusalem: so shalt thou and thy house be in the number of the king's friends, and thou and thy children shall be honoured with silver and gold, and many rewards.

Before CHRIST about 168.

19 Then Mattathias answered and spake with a loud voice, Though all the nations that are under the king's dominion obey him, and fall away every one from the religion of their fathers, and give consent to his commandments:

20 Yet will I and my sons and my brethren walk in the covenant of our fathers.

21 God forbid that we should forsake the law and the ordinances.

22 We will not hearken to the king's words, to go from our religion, either on the right hand, or the left.

23 Now when he had left speaking these words, there came one of the Jews in the sight of all to sacrifice on the altar which was at Modin, according to the king's commandment.

24 Which thing when Mattathias saw, he was inflamed with zeal, and his reins trembled, neither could he forbear to shew his anger according to judgment: wherefore he ran, and slew him upon the altar.

25 Also the king's commissioner, who compelled men to sacrifice, he killed at that time, and the altar he pulled down.

26 Thus dealt he zealously for the law of God, like as * Phinees did unto Zambri the son of Salom.

* Numb. 25. 7.

27 And Mattathias cried throughout the city with a loud voice, saying, Whosoever is zealous of the law, and maintaineth the covenant, let him follow me.

28 So he and his sons fled into the mountains, and left all that ever they had in the city.

29 Then many that sought after justice and judgment went down into the wilderness, to † dwell there:

4. Judas, who was called Maccabeus:] The motto of Judas on his standard was a Hebrew sentence, taken from Exod. xv. 11: not written at length, but, by an abbreviation, formed of the initial letters, which made the artificial word Maccabi: hence, all that fought under that standard were called Maccabees, or Maccabeans; and he, in an especial manner, being their captain, had the same name by way of eminence. This practice of abbreviating sentences and names by putting together the initial letters of the words, and thus forming an artificial word to express the whole, has been common among the Jews. Grotius, Dean Prideaux. Or, as Judas was called by this name before he set up his standard ver. 4 and 66 of this chapter, others derive it from the Hebrew words Makke-bahah, a conqueror in the Lord, which agrees with his father's account of Judas, that "he had been mighty and strong, even from his youth." Stackhouse.

32 They pursued after them a great number, and having overtaken them, they camped against them, and made war against them on the sabbath day.

33 And they said unto them, Let that which ye have done hitherto suffice; come forth, and do according to the commandment of the king, and ye shall live.

34 But they said, We will not come forth, neither will we do the king's commandment, to profane the sabbath day.

Or, the Jews. 35 So then they gave ‖ them the battle with all speed.

36 Howbeit they answered them not, neither cast they a stone at them, nor stopped the places where they lay hid;

† Gr. simplicity. 37 But said, Let us die all in our † innocency: heaven and earth shall testify for us, that ye put us to death wrongfully.

38 So they rose up against them in battle on the sabbath, and they slew them, with their wives and children, and their cattle, to the number of a thousand † people.

† Gr. multitude of men.

39 Now when Mattathias and his friends understood hereof, they mourned for them right sore.

40 And one of them said to another, If we all do as our brethren have done, and fight not for our lives and laws against the heathen, they will now quickly root us out of the earth.

41 At that time therefore they decreed, saying, Whosoever shall come to make battle with us on the sabbath day, we will fight against him; neither will we die all, as our brethren that were murdered in the secret places.

42 Then came there unto him a company of Assideans, who were mighty men of Israel, even all such as were voluntarily devoted unto the law.

43 Also all they that fled for persecution joined themselves unto them, and were a stay unto them.

44 So they joined their forces, and smote sinful men in their anger, and wicked men in their wrath: but the rest fled to the heathen for succour.

1 The valour and fame of Judas Maccabeus. 10 He overthroweth the forces of Samaria and Syria. 27 Antiochus sendeth a great power against him. 44 He and his fall to fasting and prayer, 58 and are encouraged.

THEN his son Judas, called Maccabeus, rose up in his stead.

2 And all his brethren helped him, and so did all they that held with his father, and they fought with cheerfulness the battle of Israel.

3 So he gat his people great honour, and put on a breastplate as a giant, and girt his warlike harness about him, and he made battles, protecting the host with his sword.

4 In his acts he was like a lion, and like a lion's whelp roaring for his prey. Before CHRIST about 164.

5 For he pursued the wicked, and sought them out, and burnt up those that vexed his people.

6 Wherefore the wicked shrunk for fear of him, and all the workers of iniquity were troubled, because salvation prospered in his hand.

7 He grieved also many kings, and made Jacob glad with his acts, and his memorial is blessed for ever.

8 Moreover he went through the cities of Juda, destroying the ungodly out of them, and turning away wrath from Israel:

9 So that he was renowned unto the utmost part of the earth, and he † received unto him such as were ready to perish. † Or, gathered, gather.

10 Then Apollonius gathered the Gentiles together, and a great host out of Samaria, to fight against Israel.

11 Which thing when Judas perceived, he went forth to meet him, and so he smote him, and slew him: many also fell down slain, but the rest fled.

12 Wherefore Judas took their spoils, and Apollonius' sword also, and therewith he fought all his life long.

13 Now when Seron, a prince of the army of Syria, heard say that Judas had gathered unto him a multitude and company of the faithful to go out with him to war;

14 He said, I will get me a name and honour in the kingdom; for I will go fight with Judas and them that are with him, who despise the king's commandment.

15 So he made him ready to go up, and there went with him a mighty host of the ungodly to help him, and to be avenged of the children of Israel.

16 And when he came near to the going up of Bethhoron, Judas went forth to meet him with a small company:

Chap. III. ver. 1. Then his son Judas, called Maccabeus, rose up in his stead.] In the events that succeed, we shall see this valiant chieftain, with his noble brothers, maintaining a religious war for twenty-six years from the time of the insurrection of Modin, with five successive kings of Syria; destroying above two hundred thousand of their best troops; and finally establishing the independence of their own country, and the aggrandizement of their family. Such a triumph of a petty province over a great empire is scarcely to be paralleled in the annals of history. But the Lord fought for Israel while they were religious and virtuous, and put their whole trust in Him: and the inflexible spirit of the Jewish nation has ever grown more rigid under persecution, and their zeal waxed hotter in the furnace of adversity. Dr. Hales.

—— rose up in his stead.] In the year before Christ 167, the insurrection began to be embodied by the appointment of a chief Judas Maccabeus, round whose standard the insurgents could rally; but it was not until the death of the high priest Menelaus and the appointment of Judas to be governour by Antiochus Eupator, before Christ 163, that the Asmonean dynasty began. Dr Hales. See 2 Macc. xiii. 24, and the note there.

18 Unto whom Judas answered, [a] It is no hard matter for many to be shut up in the hands of a few; and with the God of heaven it is all one, to deliver with a great multitude, or a small company:

19 For the victory of battle standeth not in the multitude of an host; but strength cometh from heaven.

23 Now as soon as he had left off speaking, he leapt suddenly upon them, and so Seron and his host was overthrown before him.

† Gr. in the going down.

24 And they pursued them † from the going down of Bethhoron unto the plain, where were slain about eight hundred men of them; and the residue fled into the land of the Philistines.

25 Then began the fear of Judas and his brethren, and an exceeding great dread, to fall upon the nations round about them:

26 Insomuch as his fame came unto the king, and all nations talked of the battles of Judas.

27 Now when king Antiochus heard these things, he was full of indignation: wherefore he sent and gathered together all the forces of his realm, even a very strong army.

31 Wherefore, being greatly perplexed in his mind, he determined to go into Persia, there to take the tributes of the countries, and to gather much money.

32 So he left Lysias, a nobleman, and one of the blood royal, to oversee the affairs of the king from the river Euphrates unto the borders of Egypt:

33 And to bring up his son Antiochus, until he came again.

34 Moreover he delivered unto him the half of his forces, and the elephants, and gave him charge of all things that he would have done, as also concerning them that dwelt in Juda and Jerusalem:

35 To wit, that he should send an army against them, to destroy and root out the strength of Israel, and the remnant of Jerusalem, and to take away their memorial from that place;

36 And that he should place strangers in all their quarters, and divide their land by lot.

44 Then was the congregation gathered together, that they might be ready for battle, and that they might pray, and ask mercy and compassion.

45 Now Jerusalem lay void as a wilderness, there was none of her children that went in or out: the sanctuary also was trodden down, and aliens kept the strong hold; the heathen had their habitation in that place; and joy was taken from Jacob, and the pipe with the harp ceased.

41. And the merchants of the country, hearing the fame of them, &c.] Compare 2 Macc. viii. 10, 11. Whence it appears, that Nicanor, proposing to raise a sum of money to defray the arrears of tribute due from the king to the Romans, and confident of victory over the Jews, proclaimed a sale of the captives beforehand, at the rate of ninety for a talent, or about two pounds sterling a head. This brought together a thousand principal merchants to the Syrian camp, besides a great number of "servants" and assistants, to help them in carrying off the slaves they should purchase. Dean Prideaux, Dr. Hales.

It is to be observed, that the books of the Maccabees being in the Greek language, hence several names, though somewhat varied according to the Greek form, yet denote the same place with the Hebrew names, from which they are thus varied. Thus Accaron is the same as Ekron, Amathis as Hamath, Gazara as Gezer, Bethsura as Bethshur, Bosora as Bosor, &c; which last place, together with those mentioned with it, chap. v. 26, seems plainly to be situated beyond Jordan, in the country of Galaad, or Gilead, largely taken. Some names are also probably corrupted in course of time by translators: thus Zabadeans, chap. xii. 31, appears to be a corrupt reading for Nabatheans; and so of other names noticed in the margin of our Bibles. Dr. Wells.

48. And laid open the book of the law, &c.] This they did in the sight of God, to declare the reproachful and injurious conduct of the heathens, in painting the likeness of their images in the sacred books, to the dishonour of the Jewish religion and law. Bedwell.

The heathens polluted the book of the law by painting on the copies, which they had seized, the pictures of their gods, that so they might be no more of use to any true Israelite: for their pictures were forbidden by the law of God as much as their images, Lev. xxvi. 1; Numb. xxxiii. 52; and to have either of them was equally esteemed an abomination among that people. Dean Prideaux.

49. They brought also the priests' garments, &c.] Because whilst the temple was standing they did not dare to offer sacrifices out of the temple, they spread before God the sacred vestments which they had preserved from the temple. Grotius.

—— and the Nazarites they stirred up,] They caused them to stand in a conspicuous part of the assembly. Grotius.

50. — What shall we do with these,] As if they had said, These Nazarites ought to shew themselves in the temple, and, having performed their offerings, to be duly released from their vow. But we have no access to the temple. Grotius.

53. — except thou, O God, be our help?] In thus causing his army to address themselves to God for His assistance and protection, Judas acted the part of a wise and religious commander, as knowing that "the battle was the Lord's," and therefore that it would be impious to begin so important an enterprise without first imploring the Divine aid. Stackhouse.

CHAP. IV.

6 Judas defeateth the plot, 13 and forces of Gorgias, 25 and spoileth their tents, 34 and overthroweth Lysias. 45 He pulleth down the altar which the heathen had profaned, and setteth up a new: 60 and maketh a wall about Sion.

THEN took Gorgias five thousand footmen, and a thousand of the best horsemen, and removed out of the camp by night;

2 To the end he might rush in upon the camp of the Jews, and smite them suddenly. And the men of the fortress were his guides.

3 Now when Judas heard thereof, he himself removed, and the valiant men with him, that he might smite the king's army which was at Emmaus,

4 While as yet the forces were dispersed from the camp.

5 In the mean season came Gorgias by night into the camp of Judas: and when he found no man there, he sought them in the mountains: for said he, These fellows flee from us.

6 But as soon as it was day, Judas shewed himself in the plain with three thousand men, who nevertheless had neither ‖ armour nor swords to their minds.

‖ Or, targets.

7 And they saw the camp of the heathen, that it was strong and well harnessed, and compassed round about with horsemen; and these were expert of war.

8 Then said Judas to the men that were with him, Fear ye not their multitude, neither be ye afraid of their assault.

9 Remember how our fathers were delivered in the Red sea, when Pharaoh pursued them with an army.

10 Now therefore let us cry unto heaven, Before CHRIST about 166. if peradventure the Lord will have mercy upon us, and remember the covenant of our fathers, and destroy this host before our face this day:

11 That so all the heathen may know that there is one who delivereth and saveth Israel.

12 Then the strangers lifted up their eyes, and saw them coming over against them.

13 Wherefore they went out of the camp to battle; but they that were with Judas sounded their trumpets.

14 So they joined battle, and the heathen being discomfited fled into the plain.

15 Howbeit all the hindmost of them were slain with the sword: for they pursued them unto Gazera, and unto the plains of Idumea, and Azotus, and Jamnia, so that there were slain of them upon a three thousand men.

16 This done, Judas returned again with his host from pursuing them,

17 And said to the people, Be not greedy of the spoils, inasmuch as there is a battle before us,

18 And Gorgias and his host are here by us in the mountain: but stand ye now against our enemies, and overcome them, and after this ye may boldly take the spoils.

19 As Judas was yet speaking these words, there appeared a part of them looking out of the mountain:

20 Who when they perceived that the Jews had put their host to flight, and were burning the tents; for the smoke that was seen declared what was done:

21 When therefore they perceived these things, they were sore afraid, and seeing also the host of Judas in the plain ready to fight,

22 They fled every one into the land of strangers.

23 Then Judas returned to spoil the tents, where they got much gold, and silver, and blue silk, and purple of the sea, and great riches.

24 After this they went home, and sung

25 Thus Israel had a great deliverance that day.

27 Who, when he heard thereof, was confounded and discouraged, because neither such things as he would were done unto Israel, nor such things as the king commanded him were come to pass.

about 165. 28 The next year therefore following Lysias gathered together threescore thousand choice men of foot, and five thousand horsemen, that he might subdue them.

29 So they came into Idumea, and pitched their tents at Bethsura, and Judas met them with ten thousand men.

30 And when he saw that mighty army, he prayed and said, Blessed art thou, O [a] 1 Sam. 17. 50, 51. Saviour of Israel, [a] who didst quell the violence of the mighty man by the hand of thy servant David, and gavest the host of [‖] Or, Philistines. [b] 1 Sam. 14. 13, 14. ‖ strangers into the hands of [b] Jonathan the son of Saul, and his armourbearer;

32 Make them to be of no courage, and cause the boldness of their strength to [†] Gr. melt. † fall away, and let them quake at their destruction:

33 Cast them down with the sword of them that love thee, and let all those that know thy name praise thee with thanksgiving.

34 So they joined battle; and there were slain of the host of Lysias about five thousand men, even before them were they slain.

35 Now when Lysias saw his army put to flight, and the manliness of Judas' soldiers, and how they were ready either to live or die valiantly, he went into Antiochia, and gathered together a company of strangers, and having made his army greater than it was, he purposed to come again into Judea.

36 Then said Judas and his brethren, Behold, our enemies are discomfited: let us go up to cleanse and ‖ dedicate the sanctuary. Before CHRIST about 12 ‖ Or, repew.

37 Upon this all the host assembled themselves together, and went up into mount Sion.

38 And when they saw the sanctuary desolate, and the altar profaned, and the gates burned up, and shrubs growing in the courts as in a forest, or in one of the mountains, yea, and the priests' chambers pulled down;

39 They rent their clothes, and made great lamentation, and cast ashes upon their heads,

40 And fell down flat to the ground upon their faces, and blew an alarm with the trumpets, and cried toward heaven.

41 Then Judas appointed certain men to fight against those that were in the fortress, until he had cleansed the sanctuary.

42 So he chose priests of blameless conversation, such as had pleasure in the law:

43 Who cleansed the sanctuary, and bare out the defiled stones into an unclean place.

44 And when as they consulted what to do with the altar of burnt offerings, which was profaned;

45 They thought it best to pull it down, lest it should be a reproach to them, because the heathen had defiled it: wherefore they pulled it down,

46 And laid up the stones in the mountain of the temple in a convenient place, until there should come a prophet to shew what should be done with them.

47 Then they took whole stones [c] according to the law, and built a new altar according to the former; [c] Exod. 20. 25. Deut. 27. 5. Josh. 8. 31.

51 Furthermore they set the loaves upon the table, and ‖ spread out the veils, and finished all the works which they had begun to make.

‖ Or, spread abroad the hangings, or, hanged up the veils.

52 Now on the five and twentieth day of the ninth month, which is called the month Casleu, in the hundred forty and eighth year, they rose up betimes in the morning,

53 And offered sacrifice according to the law upon the new altar of burnt offerings, which they had made.

54 Look, at what time and what day the heathen had profaned it, even in that was it dedicated with songs, and citherns, and harps, and cymbals.

55 Then all the people fell upon their faces, worshipping and praising the God of heaven, who had given them good success.

56 And so they kept the dedication of the altar eight days, and offered burnt offerings with gladness, and sacrificed the sacrifice of ‖ deliverance and praise.

58 Thus was there very great gladness among the people, for that the reproach of the heathen was put away.

59 Moreover Judas and his brethren with the whole congregation of Israel ordained, that the days of the dedication of the altar should be kept in their season from year to year by the space of eight days, from the five and twentieth day of the month Casleu, with mirth and gladness. Before CHRIST about 165.

60 At that time also they builded up the mount Sion with high walls and strong towers round about, lest the Gentiles should come and tread it down, as they had done before.

61 And they set there a garrison to keep it, and fortified Bethsura to preserve it; that the people might have a defence against Idumea.

been kept constantly burning. After that they used no other than common fire in the temple; but still they avoided the bringing thither of any common fire, which had been profaned by other uses, and therefore kindled a flame by dashing two stones against each other. Dean Prideaux.

52. Now on the five and twentieth day of the ninth month,] This was the very same day, on which three years before the temple had been profaned; just three years and a half after the city and temple had been desolated by Apollonius; and two years after Judas had taken on him the chief command of the Jews on his father's death. Dean Prideaux.

55. — worshipping and praising the God of heaven,] The whole service was thus restored according to their former rule in all the particulars of the Divine worship which were there used to be performed: and so it continued to be there ever after celebrated without any other interruption, till the Romans finally destroyed the temple, and thereby put an end to all the ritual worship of that place. Dean Prideaux.

56. And so they kept the dedication of the altar eight days,] The solemnity of this dedication was continued, as here stated, for eight days together, which they celebrated with great joy and thanksgiving for the deliverance which God had given to them; and, for the more solemn acknowledgment hereof, they decreed the like festival to be ever after annually kept in commemoration of it. This was called the feast of dedication. It began every year on the twenty-fifth day of their ninth month Cisleu, (or Casleu,) and was continued to the eighth day after, in the same manner as were the passover and the feast of tabernacles; during all which time they all illuminated their houses by setting up lights at every man's door, whence it was called the feast of lights. This festival Christ honoured with His presence at Jerusalem, coming thither on purpose to bear His part in the solemnizing of it, which implies His approbation of it. And therefore from hence Grotius very justly infers, that festival days in memorial of publick blessings may piously be instituted by persons in authority without a Divine command, or, it may be added, the example of a person divinely directed observing the same. For the institution of this festival was without either, there being neither any Divine precept, nor the example of any Prophet for the observance of it. Dean Prideaux.

60. — they builded up the mount Sion with high walls &c.] Apollonius, in taking Jerusalem, had erected a fortress on mount Acra, chap. i. 33—35, which commanding the mountain of the temple, and being still in the hands of the enemy, gave them the advantage of annoying all those, who went up to the temple to worship. To remedy this inconvenience, Judas at first blocked up the fortress, ver. 41 of this chapter; but finding that he could not conveniently spare the requisite number of men, he caused the mountain of the temple, as here related, to be fortified with strong walls and high towers, and placed therein a sufficient garrison, both to defend it, and protect those who went up to worship from all future insults, either from the fortress or from any other place. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

5 He shut them up therefore in the towers, and encamped against them, and destroyed them utterly, and burned the towers of that place with fire, and all that were therein.

6 Afterward he passed over to the children of Ammon, where he found a mighty power, and much people, with Timotheus their captain.

7 So he fought many battles with them, till at length they were discomfited before him; and he smote them.

8 And when he had taken Jazar, with the towns belonging thereto, he returned into Judea.

9 Then the heathen that were at Galaad assembled themselves together against the Israelites that were in their quarters, to destroy them; but they fled to the fortress of Dathema,

10 And sent letters unto Judas and his brethren, The heathen that are round about us are assembled together against us to destroy us:

11 And they are preparing to come and take the fortress whereunto we are fled, Timotheus being captain of their host.

12 Come now therefore, and deliver us from their hands, for many of us are slain:

13 Yea, all our brethren that were in the places of Tobie are put to death: their wives and their children also they have carried away captives, and borne away their stuff; and they have destroyed there about a thousand men.

14 While these letters were yet reading, behold, there came other messengers from Galilee with their clothes rent, who reported on this wise,

15 And said, They of Ptolemais, and of Tyrus, and Sidon, and all Galilee of the Gentiles, are assembled together against us to consume us.

Before CHRIST about 166

16 Now when Judas and the people heard these words, there assembled a great congregation together, to consult what they should do for their brethren, that were in trouble, and assaulted of them.

17 Then said Judas unto Simon his brother, Choose thee out men, and go and deliver thy brethren that are in Galilee, for I and Jonathan my brother will go into the country of Galaad.

18 So he left Joseph the son of Zacharias, and Azarias, captains of the people, with the remnant of the host in Judea to keep it.

19 Unto whom he gave commandment, saying, Take ye the charge of this people, and see that ye make not war against the heathen until the time that we come again.

20 Now unto Simon were given three thousand men to go into Galilee, and unto Judas eight thousand men for the country of Galaad.

21 Then went Simon into Galilee, where he fought many battles with the heathen, so that the heathen were discomfited by him.

22 And he pursued them unto the gate of Ptolemais; and there were slain of the heathen about three thousand men, whose spoils he took.

31 When Judas therefore saw that the battle was begun, and that the cry of the city went up to heaven, with trumpets, and a great sound, 32 He said unto his host, Fight this day for your brethren.

33 So he went forth behind them in three companies, who sounded their trumpets, and cried with prayer.

34 Then the host of Timotheus, knowing that it was Maccabeus, fled from him: wherefore he smote them with a great slaughter; so that there were killed of them that day about eight thousand men.

35 This done, Judas turned aside to Maspha; and after he had assaulted it, he took it, and slew all the males therein, and received the spoils thereof, and burnt it with fire.

36 From thence went he, and took Casphon, Maged, Bosor, and the other cities of the country of Galaad.

37 After these things gathered Timotheus another host, and encamped against Raphon beyond the brook.

38 So Judas sent men to espy the host, who brought him word, saying, All the heathen that be round about us are assembled unto them, even a very great host.

39 He hath also hired the Arabians to help them, and they have pitched their tents beyond the brook, ready to come and fight against thee. Upon this Judas went to meet them.

Before CHRIST about 164.

40 Then Timotheus said unto the captains of his host, When Judas and his host come near the brook, if he pass over first unto us, we shall not be able to withstand him; for he will mightily prevail against us:

41 But if he be afraid, and camp beyond the river, we shall go over unto him, and prevail against him.

42 Now when Judas came near the brook, he caused the scribes of the people to remain by the brook: unto whom he gave commandment, saying, Suffer no man to remain in the camp, but let all come to the battle.

43 So he went first over unto them, and all the people after him: then all the heathen, being discomfited before him, cast away their weapons, and fled unto the temple that was at Carnaim.

‖ Judas and his company.

44 But ‖ they took the city, and burned the temple with all that were therein. Thus was Carnaim subdued, neither could they stand any longer before Judas.

45 Then Judas gathered together all the Israelites that were in the country of Galaad, from the least unto the greatest, even their wives, and their children, and their stuff, a very great host, to the end they might come into the land of Judea.

46 Now when they came unto Ephron, (this was a great city in the way as they should go, very well fortified) they could not turn from it, either on the right hand or the left, but must needs pass through the midst of it.

47 Then they of the city shut them out, and stopped up the gates with stones.

48 Whereupon Judas sent unto them in peaceable manner, saying, Let us pass through your land to go into our own country, and none shall do you any hurt; we will only pass through on foot: howbeit they would not open unto him.

49 Wherefore Judas commanded a proclamation to be made throughout the host, that every man should pitch his tent in the place where he was.

29. — to the fortress.] Namely, the fortress of Dathema, mentioned ver. 9. Grotius.

46. Now when they came unto Ephron, &c.] It is not known what was the particular situation of Ephron. The author seems to imply, that the country all about it was impassable; that is, very probably so full of water and morasses, that the army of Judas must have been lost, had they been obliged to "turn either on the right hand or the left." They were under the necessity therefore of passing through the town: and Grotius asserts, that the refusal of the inhabitants to let them pass, after the promise of the Israelites to march through the country quietly and inoffensively, was an act contrary to the just rights of human society. Stackhouse.

49. —that every man should pitch his tent in the place where he

50 So the soldiers pitched, and assaulted the city all that day and all that night, till at the length the city was delivered into his hands:

51 Who then slew all the males with the edge of the sword, and rased the city, and took the spoils thereof, and passed through the city over them that were slain.

52 After this went they over Jordan into the great plain before Bethsan.

53 And Judas gathered together those that ‖ came behind, and ‖ exhorted the people all the way through, till they came into the land of Judea.

57 Wherefore they said, Let us also get us a name, and go fight against the heathen that are round about us.

61. Thus was there a great overthrow &c.] Here is another great instance of Providence, that at the very time when Simon and Judas and Jonathan were so miraculously preserved and blessed in the just defence of their laws and religion, these other generals of the Jews, who went to fight for honour in a vainglorious way, and without any commission from God or the family He had raised up to deliver them, were miserably disappointed and defeated. Whiston.

Before CHRIST about 164.

3 Wherefore he came and sought to take the city, and to spoil it; but he was not able, because they of the city, having had warning thereof,

4 Rose up against him in battle: so he fled, and departed thence with great heaviness, and returned to Babylon.

5 Moreover there came one who brought him tidings into Persia, that the armies, which went against the land of Judea, were put to flight:

6 And that Lysias, who went forth first with a great power, was driven away of the Jews; and that they were made strong by the armour, and power, and store of spoils, which they had gotten of the armies, whom they had destroyed:

7 Also that they had pulled down the abomination, which he had set up upon the altar in Jerusalem, and that they had compassed about the sanctuary with high walls, as before, and his city Bethsura.

8 Now when the king heard these words, he was astonished and sore moved: whereupon he laid him down upon his bed, and fell sick for grief, because it had not befallen him as he looked for.

9 And there he continued many days: for his grief was ever more and more, and he made account that he should die.

10 Wherefore he called for all his friends, and said unto them, The sleep is gone from mine eyes, and my heart faileth for very care.

11 And I thought with myself, Into what tribulation am I come, and how great a flood of misery is it, wherein now I am! for I was bountiful and beloved in my power.

12 But now I remember the evils that I did at Jerusalem, and that I took all the vessels of gold and silver that were therein, and sent to destroy the inhabitants of Judea without a cause.

Before CHRIST about 163

13 I perceive therefore that for this cause these troubles are come upon me, and, behold, I perish through great grief in a strange land.

14 Then called he for Philip, one of his friends, whom he made ruler over all his realm,

15 And gave him the crown, and his robe, and his signet, to the end he should bring up his son Antiochus, and nourish him up for the kingdom.

‖ Or, he would take his son Antiochus to him.

16 So king Antiochus died there in the hundred forty and ninth year. 164. Nisan.

17 Now when Lysias knew that the king was dead, he set up Antiochus his son, whom he had brought up being young, to reign in his stead, and his name he called Eupator.

18 About this time they that were in the tower shut up the Israelites round about the sanctuary, and sought always their hurt, and the strengthening of the heathen. about 163.

19 Wherefore Judas, purposing to destroy them, called all the people together to besiege them.

20 So they came together, and besieged them in the hundred and fiftieth year, and he made mounts for shot against them, and other engines. 163.

21 Howbeit certain of them that were besieged got forth, unto whom some ungodly men of Israel joined themselves:

16. So king Antiochus died there] This wicked king is an example of all hardened sinners, and false penitents, whose only motive of turning to God is their fear or feeling of punishment. Being at length awakened by his afflictions, and made fully sensible that all his sufferings were from the hand of God upon him for what he had done against His temple and servants at Jerusalem, he acknowledged all this before his death, with many vows that he would endeavour to repair the evil in case he should recover. But his repentance came too late: God would not then hear him. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

17. — he set up Antiochus his son,] Lysias assumed to himself the tuition of the person of the young Antiochus, and the government of the kingdom, without any regard to the appointment of the late king, ver. 14, 15. Before CHRIST about 163.

23 We have been willing to serve thy father, and to do as he would have us, and to obey his commandments;

24 For which cause they of our nation besiege the tower, and are alienated from us: moreover as many of us as they could light on they slew, and spoiled our inheritance.

25 Neither have they stretched out their hand against us only, but also against all their borders.

26 And, behold, this day are they besieging the tower at Jerusalem, to take it: the sanctuary also and Bethsura have they fortified.

27 Wherefore if thou dost not prevent them quickly, they will do greater things than these, neither shalt thou be able to rule them.

28 Now when the king heard this, he was angry, and gathered together all his friends, and the captains of his army, and those that had charge of the horse.

29 There came also unto him from other kingdoms, and from isles of the sea, bands of hired soldiers.

30 So that the number of his army was an hundred thousand footmen, and twenty thousand horsemen, and two and thirty elephants exercised in battle.

31 These went through Idumea, and pitched against Bethsura, which they assaulted many days, making engines of war; but they of Bethsura came out, and burned them with fire, and fought valiantly.

32 Upon this Judas removed from the tower, and pitched in Bathzacharias, over against the king's camp.

33 Then the king rising very early marched fiercely with his host toward Bathzacharias, where his armies made them ready to battle, and sounded the trumpets.

34 And to the end they might provoke the elephants to fight, they shewed them the blood of grapes and mulberries.

35 Moreover they divided the beasts among the armies, and for every elephant they appointed a thousand men, armed with coats of mail, and with helmets of brass on their heads; and beside this, for every beast were ordained five hundred horsemen of the best.

Before CHRIST about 164.

36 These were ready at every occasion: wheresoever the beast was, and whithersoever the beast went, they went also, neither departed they from him.

37 And upon the beasts were there strong towers of wood, which covered every one of them, and were girt fast unto them with devices: there were also upon every one two and thirty strong men, that fought upon them, beside the Indian that ruled him.

38 As for the remnant of the horsemen, they set them on this side and that side at the two parts of the host, ‖ giving them signs what to do, and being harnessed all over amidst the ranks.

‖ Or, stirring them up, and being compassed with the ranks. Or, defended with the valleys.

39 Now when the sun shone upon the shields of gold and brass, the mountains glistered therewith, and shined like lamps of fire.

40 So part of the king's army being spread upon the high mountains, and part on the valleys below, they marched on safely and in order.

41 Wherefore all that heard the noise of their multitude, and the marching of the company, and the rattling of the harness, were moved: for the army was very great and mighty.

42 Then Judas and his host drew near, and entered into battle, and there were slain of the king's army six hundred men.

43 ¶ Eleazar also, surnamed Savaran, perceiving that one of the beasts, armed with royal harness, was higher than all the rest, and supposing that the king was upon him,

46 Which done, he crept under the elephant, and thrust him under, and slew him: whereupon the elephant fell down upon him, and there he died.

47 Howbeit the rest of the Jews seeing the strength of the king, and the violence of his forces, turned away from them.

48 ¶ Then the king's army went up to Jerusalem to meet them, and the king pitched his tents ‖ against Judea, and against mount Sion.

‖ Or, in Judea.

49 But with them that were in Bethsura he made peace: ‖ for they came out of the city, because they had no victuals there to endure the siege, it being a year of rest to the land.

‖ Add out of Josephus, and they yielded themselves.

50 So the king took Bethsura, and set a garrison there to keep it.

51 As for the sanctuary, he besieged it many days: and ‖ set there artillery with engines and instruments to cast fire and stones, and pieces to cast darts and slings.

‖ Or, made there mounts for shot.

52 Whereupon ‖ they also made engines against their engines, and held them battle a long season.

‖ Or, the Jews.

53 Yet at the last, their vessels being without victuals, (for that it was the seventh year, and they in Judea, that were delivered from the Gentiles, had eaten up the residue of the store;)

54 There were but a few left in the sanctuary, because the famine did so prevail against them, that they were fain to disperse themselves, every man to his own place.

55 At that time Lysias heard say, that Philip, whom Antiochus the king, whiles he lived, had appointed to bring up his son Antiochus, that he might be king, 56 Was returned out of Persia and Media, and the king's host also that went with him, and that he sought to take unto him the ruling of the affairs.

Before CHRIST about 163.

57 Wherefore he went in all haste, and said to the king and the captains of the host and the company, We decay daily, and our victuals are but small, and the place we lay siege unto is strong, and the affairs of the kingdom lie upon us:

58 Now therefore let us † be friends with these men, and make peace with them, and with all their nation;

† Gr. give hand.

59 And covenant with them, that they shall live after their laws, as they did before: for they are therefore displeased, and have done all these things, because we abolished their laws.

60 So the king and the princes were content: wherefore he sent unto them to make peace; and they accepted thereof.

61 Also the king and the princes made an oath unto them: whereupon they went out of the strong hold.

62 Then the king entered into mount Sion; but when he saw the strength of the place, he brake his oath that he had made, and gave commandment to pull down the wall round about.

63 Afterward departed he in all haste, and returned unto Antiochia, where he found Philip to be master of the city: so he fought against him, and took the city by force.

Philip had fled into Egypt, with the hope of procuring assistance against Lysias, ver. 17: but, being disappointed, he returned into the East, and having there collected an army, he took advantage of the king's absence in Judea, and seized the imperial city. Dean Prideaux.

57. — and said to the king] Antiochus Eupator, whom Lysias, here spoken of, at that time had in his power. Grotius.

63. — and took the city by force.] And slew Philip himself, no doubt by the advice of Lysias, as Josephus relates. Grotius.

Chap. VII. ver. 1. — Demetrius the son of Seleucus departed from Rome, &c.] Demetrius, who was the son of Seleucus Philopator, and the rightful heir of the crown of Syria, had been kept as a hostage, and afterwards in an honourable captivity, at Rome, during the reign of his uncle Antiochus Epiphanes, on whose death he solicited the senate for leave to return to Syria. But that politick body, preferring a minor, like Eupator, on the throne of Syria to a prince in the prime of life, of considerable talents and ambition, refused his request: whereupon Demetrius privily escaped from Rome, and landed "with a few men," only eight friends and their servants, at Tripolis in Phenicia; was joined by several of his adherents under the persuasion that he was patronised by the Romans; and advanced to Antioch, where the army declared for him, and secured Eupator and Lysias, and as a proof of their sincerity brought them to Demetrius. Dr. Hales.

— with a few men] He is represented, 2 Macc. xiv. 1, as having "entered the haven of Tripolis with a great power and † Gr. house of the kingdom of his father.

3 Wherefore, when he knew it, he said, Let me not see their faces.

4 So his host slew them. Now when Demetrius was set upon the throne of his kingdom,

5 There came unto him all the wicked and ungodly men of Israel, having Alcimus, who was desirous to be high priest, for their captain:

6 And they accused the people to the king, saying, Judas and his brethren have slain all thy friends, and driven us out of our own land.

7 Now therefore send some man whom thou trustest, and let him go and see what havock he hath made among us, and in the king's land, and let him punish them with all them that aid them.

8 Then the king chose Bacchides, a friend of the king, who ruled beyond the flood, and was a great man in the kingdom, and faithful to the king.

9 And him he sent with that wicked Alcimus, whom he made high priest, and commanded that he should take vengeance of the children of Israel.

10 So they departed, and came with a great power into the land of Judea, where they sent messengers to Judas and his brethren with peaceable words deceitfully.

11 But they gave no heed to their words; for they saw that they were come with a great power.

12 Then did there assemble unto Alcimus and Bacchides a company of ‖ scribes, to require justice.

Before CHRIST about 161.

‖ Or, officers, commissary, or, receiver

13 Now the Assideans were the first among the children of Israel that sought peace of them:

14 For said they, One that is a priest of the seed of Aaron is come with this army, and he will do us no wrong.

15 So he spake unto them peaceably, and sware unto them, saying, We will procure the harm neither of you nor your friends.

16 Whereupon they believed him: howbeit he took of them threescore men, and slew them in one day, according to the words which he wrote,

17 * The flesh of thy saints have they cast out, and their blood have they shed round about Jerusalem, and there was none to bury them.

* Psal. 79. 2, 3.

18 Wherefore the fear and dread of them fell upon all the people, who said, There is neither truth nor † righteousness in them; for they have broken the covenant and oath that they made.

† Gr. judgment

19 After this removed Bacchides from Jerusalem, and pitched his tents in Bezeth, where he sent and took many of the men that had forsaken him, and certain of the people also, and when he had slain them, he cast them into the great pit.

20 Then committed he the country to Alcimus, and left with him a power to aid him: so Bacchides went to the king.

21 But Alcimus ‖ contended for the high priesthood.

—— and reigned there.] In that city he took possession of the kingdom. Bedwell.

2. — into the palace of his ancestors,] Namely, Antioch, the capital of his kingdom. Grotius.

5. — Alcimus, who was desirous to be high priest,] In the expedition related in the last chapter, Menelaus the high priest accompanied Antiochus Eupator, and was very forward in offering his services against his own people, the Jews. But falling under the displeasure of Lysias, he was accused and condemned as the author and fomenter of the war, and was put to a miserable death: see 2 Mac. xiii. 3—8. On his death Alcimus, a man altogether as wicked, was constituted by Eupator high priest of the Jews, but was not acknowledged by them as such, because he had polluted himself by conforming to the ways of the Greeks in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes. He now got together all the other apostate Jews then living at Antioch, who had for their apostasy been expelled from Judea; and went at the head of them to the new king, praying relief against Judas and his brethren, whom they accused of being enemies to the kings of Syria, fomenters of sedition, and persecutors and murderers of his most faithful subjects. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

8. — who ruled beyond the flood,] That is, the Euphrates, according to the usual Hebrew phraseology. Josephus says, that he was governour of Mesopotamia. Grotius.

12. — a company of scribes,] These were probably a deputation from the great Sanhedrim, which at this time had the government of the nation in their hands. The reason is obvious why Judas, who was at the head of them, did not think proper to accompany the deputation. Calmet, Stackhouse.

—— to require justice.] Namely, that he would abide by the things, which his father Seleucus and the preceding kings had established. Grotius.

13. — the Assideans] See chap. ii. 42.

16. — according to the words which he wrote,] That is, which the author of the 79th Psalm wrote. Drusius. "According to the word which was written:" the Psalm alluded to was composed with a view to other times, but was no less suitable to the present. Grotius.

21. — Alcimus contended for the high priesthood.] Josephus explains this to mean, that he did every thing to establish himself in the high priesthood. Grotius. See the margin.

Before CHRIST about 162. gotten the land of Juda into their power, did much hurt in Israel.

23 Now when Judas saw all the mischief that Alcimus and his company had done among the Israelites, even above the heathen,

24 He went out into all the coasts of Judea round about, and took vengeance of them that had ‖ revolted from him, so that they durst no more ‖ go forth into the country.

‖ Or, fled from him to the enemy.
‖ Or, inside the country.

25 On the other side, when Alcimus saw that Judas and his company ‖ had gotten the upper hand, and knew that he was not able † to abide their force, he went again to the king, and said all the worst of them that he could.

‖ Or, were grown very strong.
† Gr. to abide them.

26 Then the king sent Nicanor, one of his honourable princes, a man that bare deadly hate unto Israel, with commandment to destroy the people.

about 161. 27 So Nicanor came to Jerusalem with a great force; and sent unto Judas and his brethren deceitfully with † friendly words, saying, † Gr. peaceable.

28 Let there be no battle between me and you; I will come with a few men, that I may † see you in peace.

† Gr. see your faces.

29 He came therefore to Judas, and they saluted one another peaceably. Howbeit the enemies were prepared to take away Judas by violence.

30 Which thing after it was known to Judas, to wit, that he came unto him with deceit, he was sore afraid of him, and would see his face no more.

31 Nicanor also, when he saw that his counsel was discovered, went out to † fight against Judas beside ‖ Capharsalama:

† Gr. meet Judas in battle.
‖ Or, Caphusalama.

32 Where there were slain of Nicanor's side about five thousand men, and the rest fled into the city of David.

33 After this went Nicanor up to mount Sion, and there came out of the sanctuary certain of the priests and certain of the elders of the people, to salute him peaceably, and to shew him the burnt sacrifice that was offered for the king.

Before CHRIST about 161.

34 But he mocked them, and laughed at them, and † abused them shamefully, and spake proudly, † Gr. defiled them.

35 And sware in his wrath, saying, Unless Judas and his host be now delivered into my hands, if ever I come again † in safety, I will burn up this house: and with that he went out in a great rage.

† Gr. in peace.

36 Then the priests entered in, and stood before the altar and the temple, weeping, and saying,

37 Thou, O Lord, didst choose this house to be called by thy name, and to be a house of prayer and petition for thy people:

38 Be avenged of this man and his host, and let them fall by the sword: remember their blasphemies, and suffer them not to continue any longer.

39 So Nicanor went out of Jerusalem, and pitched his tents in Bethhoron, where an host out of Syria met him.

40 But Judas pitched in Adasa with three thousand men, and there he prayed, saying,

41 [b] O Lord, when they that were sent from the king of the Assyrians blasphemed, thine angel went out, and smote an hundred fourscore and five thousand of them.

[b] 2 Kings 19. 35. Isa. 37. 36. Eccl[us] 48. 21. 2 Mac. 8. 19.

42 Even so destroy thou this host before us this day, that the rest may know that he hath spoken blasphemously against thy sanctuary, and judge thou him according to his wickedness.

43 So the thirteenth day of the month Adar the hosts joined battle: but Nicanor's host was discomfited, and he himself was first slain in the battle.

44 Now when Nicanor's host saw that he was slain, they cast away their weapons, and fled.

45 Then ‖ they pursued after them a day's journey, from Adasa unto Gazera, sounding an alarm after them with their trumpets.

‖ Or, the Jews.

22. — they had gotten the land of Juda into their power,] That is, many of its towns. Grotius.

24. — so that they durst no more go forth into the country.] They were hindered from making any more incursions into Judea. Drusius. See the margin.

28. Let there be no battle between me and you;] Nicanor knew the prowess of Judas, as having been vanquished by him in a former expedition; see chap. iii. 38, and chap. iv: he appears therefore to have been loth to make another trial of it, for fear of another defeat. Dean Prideaux.

31. — Capharsal.ma:] The same perhaps as Caphar-Semelis, not far from Jerusalem. The Hebrew word Caphar signifies a field or village: it is often used in composition with other words as a proper name. Calmet.

33. — and to shew him the burnt sacrifice that was offered for the king.] As formerly for the Persian kings, Ezra vi. 10; and afterwards for the Roman emperours, Augustus and Tiberius, according to the accounts of Philo and Josephus. Grotius.

34. — abused them shamefully,] Literally, "defiled them;" see the margin: namely, he defiled their ears with blasphemous words, according to the interpretation suggested by Josephus. Grotius.

40. — Adasa] Josephus says it was distant from Bethoron about thirty furlongs. Grotius.

43. — the month Adar] Which answers in part to our February, and in part to March. Drusius.

Before CHRIST about 161.

46 Whereupon they came forth out of all the towns of Judea round about, and closed them in; so that they, turning back upon them that pursued them, were all slain with the sword, and not one of them was left.

47 Afterwards they took the spoils, and the prey, and smote off Nicanor's head, and his right hand, which he stretched out so proudly, and brought them away, and hanged them up toward Jerusalem.

48 For this cause the people rejoiced greatly, and they kept that day a day of great gladness.

49 Moreover they ordained to keep yearly this day, being the thirteenth of Adar.

50 Thus the land of Juda was in rest a little while.

CHAP. VIII.

1 Judas is informed of the power and policy of the Romans, 20 and maketh a league with them. 24 The articles of that league.

NOW Judas had heard of the fame of the Romans, that they were mighty and valiant men, and such as would lovingly accept all that joined themselves unto them, and make a league of amity with all that came unto them;

2 And that they were men of great valour. It was told him also of their wars and noble acts which they had done among the ‖ Galatians, and how they had conquered them, and brought them under tribute;

‖ Or, Frenchmen.

3 And what they had done in the country of Spain, for the winning of the mines of the silver and gold which is there;

4 And that by their policy and patience they had conquered ‖ all the place, though it were very far from them; and the kings also that came against them from the uttermost part of the earth, till they had discomfited them, and given them a great overthrow, so that the rest did give them tribute every year:

‖ Or, every place.

Before CHRIST about 161.

5 Beside this, how they had discomfited in battle Philip, and Perseus, king of the ‖ Citims, with others that lifted up themselves against them, and had overcome them:

‖ Or, Macedonians.

6 How also Antiochus the great king of Asia, that came against them in battle, having an hundred and twenty elephants, with horsemen, and chariots, and a very great army, was discomfited by them;

7 And how they took him alive, and covenanted that he and such as reigned after him should pay a great tribute, and give hostages, and that which was agreed upon,

8 And the country of India, and Media, and Lydia, and of the goodliest countries, which they took of him, and gave to king Eumenes:

9 Moreover how the Grecians had determined to come and destroy them;

10 And that they, having knowledge thereof, sent against them a certain captain, and fighting with them slew many of them, and carried away captives their wives and their children, and spoiled them, and took possession of their lands, and pulled down their strong holds, and brought them to be their servants unto this day:

11 It was told him besides, how they destroyed and brought under their dominion all other kingdoms and isles that at any time resisted them;

12 But with their friends and such as relied upon them they kept amity: and that they had conquered kingdoms both far and nigh, insomuch as all that heard of their name were afraid of them:

---

46. — and not one of them was left.] The simple account of the transactions with Nicanor, given in this chapter, is much more probable than the long detail in the second book of the Maccabees. The supposed reconciliation of Nicanor with Judas, that "he would not willingly have Judas out of his sight: for he loved the man from his heart," 2 Macc. xiv. 24, is inconsistent both with his character, that he "bare deadly hate unto Israel," ver. 26 of this chapter; and with his subsequent conduct. Dr. Hales.

47. — his right hand, which he stretched out so proudly,] Namely, in his threatenings against the temple; herein also resembling Sennacherib, 2 Kings xix. 21, 22. Grotius, Dean Prideaux.

49. Moreover they ordained to keep yearly this day,] As an anniversary day of thanksgiving, in commemoration of this mercy: and it is so kept even to this present time by the name of the day of Nicanor. This victory terminates the narration of the second book of the Maccabees. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

Chap. VIII. ver. 1. — of the fame of the Romans,] The Roman commonwealth is here described such as it was before the third Punick war. Grotius.

2. — among the Galatians,] Not the Galatians, to whom St. Paul wrote one of his Epistles, and who lived in the lesser Asia, but the European Galatians, called by the Latins Galli; the greatest part of whose country is now inhabited by the French. Dr. Wells.

5. — of the Citims,] Or Chittims. See note at Numb. xxiv. 24.

6. And the country of India, and Media, and Lydia,] It appears, that from an errour of the transcriber, instead of India and Media, we ought to read Ionia and Mysia. No Jew could be ignorant that neither India nor Media belonged to the Romans, or to the successors of Eumenes. But that Ionia and Mysia were given to Eumenes we learn from Livy. Grotius.

Before CHRIST about 161.

18 Also that, whom they would help to a kingdom, those reign; and whom again they would, they displace: finally, that they were greatly exalted:

14 Yet for all this none of them wore a crown, or was clothed in purple, to be magnified thereby:

15 Moreover how they had made for themselves a senate house, wherein three hundred and twenty men sat in council daily, consulting alway for the people, to the end they might be well ordered:

16 And that they committed their government to one man every year, who ruled over all their country, and that all were obedient to that one, and that there was neither envy nor emulation among them.

17 In consideration of these things, Judas chose Eupolemus the son of John, the son of Accos, and Jason the son of Eleazar, and sent them to Rome, to make a league of amity and confederacy with them,

18 And to intreat them that they would take the yoke from them; for they saw that the kingdom of the Grecians did oppress Israel with servitude.

19 They went therefore to Rome, which was a very great journey, and came into the senate, where they spake and said,

20 Judas Maccabeus with his brethren, and the people of the Jews, have sent us unto you, to make a confederacy and peace with you, and that we might be registered your confederates and friends.

21 So that matter pleased the Romans well.

22 And this is the copy of the epistle which the senate wrote back again in tables of brass, and sent to Jerusalem, that there they might have by them a memorial of peace and confederacy:

Before CHRIST about 161.

23 Good success be to the Romans, and to the people of the Jews, by sea and by land for ever: the sword also and enemy be far from them.

24 If there come first any war upon the Romans or any of their confederates throughout all their dominion,

25 The people of the Jews shall help them, as the time shall be appointed, with all their heart:

26 Neither shall they give any thing unto them that make war upon them, or aid them with victuals, weapons, money, or ships, as it hath seemed good unto the Romans; but they shall keep their covenants without taking any thing therefore.

27 In the same manner also, if war come first upon the nation of the Jews, the Romans shall help them with all their heart, according as the time shall be appointed them:

28 Neither shall victuals be given to them that take part against them, or weapons, or money, or ships, as it hath seemed good to the Romans; but they shall keep their covenants, and that without deceit.

29 According to these articles did the Romans make a covenant with the people of the Jews.

30 Howbeit if hereafter the one party or the other shall think meet to add or diminish any thing, they may do it at their pleasures, and whatsoever they shall add or take away shall be ratified.

31 And as touching the evils that Demetrius doeth to the Jews, we have written unto him, saying, Wherefore hast thou made thy yoke heavy upon our friends and confederates the Jews?

---

15. — three hundred and twenty men] The number of the Roman senate was not definite: perhaps this was the number at the present time. Grotius.

16. — to one man] There were two consuls, but the conduct of military affairs was committed to one. Grotius.

17. — Eupolemus the son of John,] The same John, who in a like embassy to Seleucus Philopator obtained a grant for the Jews of all those privileges, which Antiochus Epiphanes would have afterwards abolished. Dean Prideaux.

18. — the kingdom of the Grecians] Namely, of the Syro-Macedonians; or of the Seleucidæ. Drusius.

22. And this is the copy of the epistle] Josephus takes notice, that this was the first treaty which the Jews ever made with the Romans: and it is very probable from the manner in which the author here prefaces his account of it; for it appears, that the Jews till this time had very little knowledge of the Roman state. Stackhouse.

—— in tables of brass,] For it was the custom of the Romans to inscribe both their laws and their treaties on brass, on account of the durability of the material. Drusius, Grotius.

30. Howbeit if hereafter the one party or the other] In the Greek the passage runs correctly, "the one party and the other;" that is, if hereafter it shall be thought meet to add or alter any thing by common consent, it may be done without affecting the treaty. Grotius.

31. And as touching the evils &c.] These are the words, not of the treaty, but of the decree of the senate, made at the same time. Grotius.

—— we have written unto him,] For Josephus informs us, that Judas had made this a part of his request through his ambassadours. Drusius.

The words of Justin on this occasion are, "The Jews, when they revolted from Demetrius, having sought the friendship of the Romans, were the first of the nations of the East who regained their liberty, the Romans at that time easily giving to others of that which was not their own." Dean Prideaux. This was according to the systematick scheme of subjugation practised by the Romans, who readily granted liberty to those who were under foreign dominion, that they might detach them from their rulers, and afterwards enslave them when a fit opportunity offered. Dr. Hales.

Before CHRIST about 161.

39 If therefore they complain any more against thee, we will do them justice, and fight with thee by sea and by land.

CHAP. IX.

1 Alcimus and Bacchides come again with new forces into Judea. 7 The army of Judas flee from him, 17 and he is slain. 30 Jonathan is in his place, 40 and revengeth his brother John's quarrel. 55 Alcimus is plagued, and dieth. 70 Bacchides maketh peace with Jonathan.

FURTHERMORE when Demetrius heard that Nicanor and his host were slain in battle, † he sent Bacchides and Alcimus into the land of Judea the second time, and with them ‖ the chief strength of his host:

† Gr. he added, or, proceeded to send.

‖ Or, the right wing.

2 Who went forth by the way that leadeth to ‖ Galgala, and pitched their tents before Masaloth, which is in Arbela, and after they had won it, they slew much people.

‖ Or, Galilee.

3 Also the first month of the hundred fifty and second year they encamped before Jerusalem:

4 From whence they removed, and went to ‖ Berea, with twenty thousand footmen and two thousand horsemen.

‖ Or, Berrethra, Joseph.

5 Now Judas had pitched his tents at Eleasa, and three thousand chosen men with him:

6 Who seeing the multitude of the other army to be so great were sore afraid; whereupon many conveyed themselves out of the host, insomuch as there abode of them no more but eight hundred men.

7 When Judas therefore saw that his host slipt away, and that the battle pressed upon him, he was sore troubled in mind, and much distressed, for that he had no time to gather them together.

8 Nevertheless unto them that remained he said, Let us arise and go up against our enemies, if peradventure we may be able to fight with them.

Before CHRIST about 161.

9 But they dehorted him, saying, We shall never be able: ‖ let us now rather save our lives, and hereafter we will return with our brethren, and fight against them: for we are but few.

‖ We follow here the Roman copy.

10 Then Judas said, God forbid that I should do this thing, and flee away from them: if our time be come, let us die manfully for our brethren, and † let us not stain our honour.

† Gr. let us not leave any just cause behind us, why our glory should be spoken against.

11 With that the host of Bacchides removed out of their tents, and stood over against ‖ them, their horsemen being divided into two troops, and their slingers and archers going before the host, and they that marched in the foreward were all mighty men.

‖ Or, the Jews.

12 As for Bacchides, he was in the right wing: so the host drew near on the two parts, and sounded their trumpets.

13 They also of Judas' side, even they sounded their trumpets also, so that the earth shook at the noise of the armies, and the battle continued from morning till night.

14 Now when Judas perceived that Bacchides and the strength of his army were on the right side, he took with him all the hardy men, 15 Who discomfited the right wing, and pursued them unto the mount Azotus.

16 But when they of the left wing saw that they of the right wing were discomfited, they followed upon Judas and those that were with him hard at the heels from behind:

17 Whereupon there was a sore battle, insomuch as many were slain on both parts.

18 Judas also was killed, and the remnant fled.

Chap. IX. ver. 2. — to Galgala.] This seems to have been put for Galilee. Arbela, which is presently mentioned, is said by Josephus to be a city of Galilee. It appears rather in this place to be the name of a district. Drusius.

5. — Eleasa.] Or Laisa, a place near Berea, or rather Berotho, a city of Benjamin. Calmet.

10. — God forbid that I should do this thing, &c.] The language of a man recoiling from the commission of an act which he esteemed base and unworthy. Bedwell.

—— if our time be come, let us die manfully &c.] As if he had said, If Providence has ordained that we should die, let us die manfully, fighting for our brethren; and let us never stain the honour of our former valorous deeds by an ignominious flight. The conduct of Judas appears to have been built in this emergency, as uniformly throughout his life, on this notion, that God, whenever He saw fit, could save with a few as well as with a multitude. This notion had been confirmed by long experience of His providential goodness, and clears him from all imputation of rashness or presumptuous tempting of God in this action: an action, for which St. Ambrose in particular has represented him as a model of heroism: for we have here, saith he, an example of warlike fortitude, wherein is exhibited no mean representation of what is honourable and glorious, in that he preferred death to servitude and disgrace. Stackhouse.

15. — unto the mount Azotus.] Josephus calls it mount Azo. It has nothing to do with the Philistine city Azotus. Grotius.

18. Judas also was killed.] Thus fell the great Judas Maccabeus, the restorer and preserver of the true worship of God, and the reliever and protector of his distressed countrymen whilst he lived. In the whole compass of history we can find few patterns in all respects equal to him. Most of the commanders we read of were carried away by ambition, vanity, or vainglory.

Before CHRIST about 161. 19 Then Jonathan and Simon took Judas their brother, and buried him in the sepulchre of his fathers in Modin.

20 Moreover they bewailed him, and all Israel made great lamentation for him, and mourned many days, saying,

21 How is the valiant man fallen, that delivered Israel!

22 As for the other things concerning Judas and his wars, and the noble acts which he did, and his greatness, they are not written: for they were very many.

23 ¶ Now after the death of Judas the wicked began to put forth their heads in all the coasts of Israel, and there arose up all such as wrought iniquity.

24 In those days also was there a very great famine, by reason whereof the country revolted, and went with ‖ them.

‖ Bacchides and his company.

25 Then Bacchides chose the wicked men, and made them lords of the country.

26 And they made enquiry and search for Judas' friends, and brought them unto Bacchides, who took vengeance of them, and † used them despitefully.

† Gr. mocked them.

27 So was there a great affliction in Israel, the like whereof was not since the time that a prophet was not seen among them.

28 For this cause all Judas' friends came together, and said unto Jonathan,

29 Since thy brother Judas died, we have no man like him to go forth against our enemies, and Bacchides, and against them of our nation that are adversaries to us.

30 Now therefore we have choson thee this day to be our prince and captain in his stead, that thou mayest fight our battles.

31 Upon this Jonathan took the governance upon him at that time, and rose up instead of his brother Judas.

32 But when Bacchides gat knowledge thereof, he sought for to slay him.

33 Then Jonathan, and Simon his brother, and all that were with him, perceiving that, fled into the wilderness of Thecoe, and pitched their tents by the water of the pool Asphar.

36 But the children of Jambri came out of Medaba, and took John, and all that he had, and went their way with it.

37 After this came word to Jonathan and Simon his brother, that the children of Jambri made a great marriage, and were bringing the bride from ‖ Nadabatha with a great train, as being the daughter of one of the great princes of Chanaan.

‖ Or. Medaba.

38 Therefore they remembered John their brother, and went up, and hid themselves under the covert of the mountain:

‖ Or. timbrels.
‖ Or. musicians.

40 Then Jonathan and they that were with him rose up against them from the place where they lay in ambush, and made a slaughter of them in such sort, as many fell down dead, and the remnant fled into the mountain, and they took all their spoils.

41 Thus was the marriage turned into mourning, and the noise of their melody into lamentation.

42 So when they had avenged fully the blood of their brother, they turned again to the marsh of Jordan.

43 Now when Bacchides heard hereof, he came on the sabbath day unto the banks of Jordan with a great power.

44 Then Jonathan said to his company, Let us go up now and fight for our lives, and whilst they valued themselves upon subduing others, had no rule or command over their own passions. But in this Jewish leader we find all the characters of a great hero: courage and intrepidity, guided by counsel and wisdom, and without any alloy either of rashness or of pride. And what a profound knowledge he had of the laws of God, and the principles of true morality, every speech that he made to his men, when he animated them to the combat and inspired them with a contempt of the greatest dangers, is a sufficient indication. Stackhouse.

Before CHRIST about 161. for it standeth not with us to day, as in time past:

45 For, behold, the battle is before us and behind us, and the water of Jordan on this side and that side, the marsh likewise and wood, neither is there place for us to turn aside.

46 Wherefore cry ye now unto heaven, that ye may be delivered from the hand of your enemies.

47 With that they joined battle, and Jonathan stretched forth his hand to smite Bacchides, but he turned back from him.

48 Then Jonathan and they that were with him leapt into Jordan, and swam over unto the farther bank: howbeit the other passed not over Jordan unto them.

49 So there were slain of Bacchides' side that day about † a thousand men.

about 160. 54 Moreover in the hundred fifty and third year, in the second month, Alcimus commanded that the wall of the inner court of the sanctuary should be pulled down; he pulled down also the works of the prophets.

55 And as he began to pull down, even at that time was Alcimus plagued, and his enterprizes hindered: for his mouth was stopped, and he was taken with a palsy, so that he could no more speak any thing, nor give order concerning his house. Before CHRIST about 160.

56 So Alcimus died at that time with great torment.

57 Now when Bacchides saw that Alcimus was dead, he returned to the king: whereupon the land of Judea was in rest two years.

58 Then all the ungodly men held a council, saying, Behold, Jonathan and his company are at ease, and dwell without care: now therefore we will bring Bacchides hither, who shall take them all in one night. about 158.

59 So they went and consulted with him.

60 Then removed he, and came with a great host, and sent letters privily to his adherents in Judea, that they should take Jonathan and those that were with him: howbeit they could not, because their counsel was known unto them.

61 Wherefore they took of the men of the country, that were authors of that mischief, about fifty persons, and slew them.

62 Afterward Jonathan, and Simon, and they that were with him, got them away to Bethbasi, which is in the wilderness, and they repaired the decays thereof, and made it strong.

Alcimus, who had apostatized from Judaism, in order to take away this distinction, and give the Gentile, with whom he wished to ingratiate himself, equal liberty with the Jew to pass into the inner courts of the temple, ordered this wall of partition to be taken down. Dean Prideaux, Grotius.

57. — he returned to the king:] It is most likely that Demetrius had by this time received the letters which were sent to him by the Romans in behalf of the Jews; and thereupon gave Bacchides orders to refrain from vexing that people: and that, in obedience to these orders, Bacchides took occasion on the death of Alcimus to leave the country. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

67 And when he began to smite them, and came up with his forces, Simon and his company went out of the city, and burned up the engines of war,

68 And fought against Bacchides, who was discomfited by them, and they afflicted him sore: for his counsel and travail was in vain.

69 Wherefore he was very wroth at the wicked men that gave him counsel to come into the country, insomuch as he slew many of them, and purposed to return into his own country.

70 Whereof when Jonathan had knowledge, he sent ambassadors unto him, to the end he should make peace with him, and deliver them the prisoners.

71 Which thing he accepted, and did according to his demands, and sware unto him that he would never do him harm all the days of his life.

about 153. ‖ Joseph. the son of Antiochus Epiphanes.

IN the hundred and sixtieth year Alexander, ‖ the son of Antiochus surnamed Epiphanes, went up and took Ptolemais: for the people had received him, by means whereof he reigned there.

2 Now when king Demetrius heard thereof, he gathered together an exceeding great host, and went forth against him to fight.

Before CHRIST about 152.

3 Moreover Demetrius sent letters unto Jonathan with loving words, so as he magnified him.

4 For said he, Let us first make peace with him, before he join with Alexander against us:

5 Else he will remember all the evils that we have done against him, and against his brethren and his people.

6 Wherefore he gave him authority to gather together an host, and to provide weapons, that he might aid him in battle: he commanded also that the hostages that were in the tower should be delivered him.

7 Then came Jonathan to Jerusalem, and read the letters in the audience of all the people, and of them that were in the tower:

8 Who were sore afraid, when they heard that the king had given him authority to gather together an host.

9 Whereupon they of the tower delivered their hostages unto Jonathan, and he delivered them unto their parents.

10 This done, Jonathan settled himself in Jerusalem, and began to build and repair the city.

11 And he commanded the workmen to build the walls and the mount Sion round about with square stones for fortification; and they did so.

12 Then the strangers, that were in the fortresses which Bacchides had built, fled away;

13 Insomuch as every man left his place, and went into his own country.

14 Only at Bethsura certain of those that had forsaken the law and the commandments remained still: for it was their place of refuge.

15 Now when king Alexander had heard what promises Demetrius had sent unto

73. — but Jonathan dwelt at Machmas,] That is, Michmash, a town about nine miles to the north of Jerusalem; there he governed Israel according to the law; cut off all that apostatized from it; restored again justice and righteousness in the land; and reformed, as far as he could, all that was amiss either in church or state. Dean Prideaux.

Chap. X. ver. 1. — Alexander, the son of Antiochus] That is, the reputed son of Antiochus Epiphanes. He was in reality an impostor of Rhodes, named Balas, set up in opposition to Demetrius by the kings of Egypt and Pergamus, and patronised by the Romans, who never forgave the flight of Demetrius from Rome, and his assumption of the Syrian throne without their consent. They now therefore by a decree empowered the impostor to raise forces for the recovery of the kingdom, with which he sailed to Ptolemais, secured that city, and was joined by numbers of the Syrians disaffected to Demetrius. Dr. Hales.

This Alexander Balas, who certainly pretended to be the son of Antiochus Epiphanes, and was owned for such by the Jews and Romans and many others, and yet is by several historians deemed a counterfeit and of no family at all, is however by Josephus believed to have been the real son of that Antiochus, and by him always spoken of accordingly. And truly, since the original contemporary and authentick author of the first book of Maccabees calls him the son of Antiochus, I suppose the other writers, who are all much later, are not to be followed against such evidence, though perhaps Epiphanes may have had him by a woman of no family. The king of Egypt also, Philometor, soon gave him his daughter in marriage, which he would hardly have done, had he believed him to be a counterfeit, and of so very mean a birth as the later historians pretend. Whiston.

Before CHRIST about 158. Jonathan: when also it was told him of the battles and noble acts which he and his brethren had done, and of the pains that they had endured, 16 He said, Shall we find such another man? now therefore we will make him our friend and confederate.

17 Upon this he wrote a letter, and sent it unto him, according to these words, saying,

18 King Alexander to his brother Jonathan sendeth greeting:

19 We have heard of thee, that thou art a man of great power, and meet to be our friend.

20 Wherefore now this day we ordain thee to be the high priest of thy nation, and to be called the king's friend; (and therewithal he sent him a purple robe and a crown of gold:) and require thee to take our part, and keep friendship with us.

153. 21 So in the seventh month of the hundred and sixtieth year, at the feast of the tabernacles, Jonathan put on the holy robe, and gathered together forces, and provided much armour.

22 Whereof when Demetrius heard, he was very sorry, and said,

23 What have we done, that Alexander hath prevented us in making amity with the Jews to strengthen himself?

24 I also will write unto them words of encouragement, and promise them dignities and gifts, that I may have their aid.

25 He sent unto them therefore to this effect: King Demetrius unto the people of the Jews sendeth greeting:

26 Whereas ye have kept covenants with us, and continued in our friendship, not joining yourselves with our enemies, we have heard hereof, and are glad. Before CHRIST about 158.

27 Wherefore now continue ye still to be faithful unto us, and we will well recompense you for the things ye do in our behalf,

28 And will grant you many immunities, and give you rewards.

29 And now do I free you, and for your sake I release all the Jews, from tributes, and from the customs of salt, and from crown taxes,

30 And from that which appertaineth unto me to receive for the third part of the seed, and the half of the fruit of the trees, I release it from this day forth, so that they shall not be taken of the land of Judea, nor of the three governments which are added thereunto out of the country of Samaria and Galilee, from this day forth for evermore.

31 Let Jerusalem also be holy and free, with the borders thereof, both from tenths and tributes.

32 And as for the tower which is at Jerusalem, I yield up my authority over it, and give it to the high priest, that he may set in it such men as he shall choose to keep it.

33 Moreover I freely set at liberty every one of the Jews, that were carried captives out of the land of Judea into any part of my kingdom, and I will that all my officers remit the tributes even of their cattle.

34 Furthermore I will that all the feasts, and sabbaths, and new moons, and solemn days, and the three days before the feast, and the three days after the feast, shall be all days of immunity and freedom for all the Jews in my realm.

20. — we ordain thee to be the high priest of thy nation,] Since the return from the Babylonish captivity, the office of high priest had been in the family of Jozadack, and in a lineal descent was transmitted down to Onias, the third of that name. He was supplanted by Jason his brother; as Jason was by his brother Menelaus; on whose death Alcimus, of a different family, was put into the office by command of the king of Syria. Whether the Asmoneans were of the race of Jozadack, we are not informed; but they were certainly of the course of Joarib, chap. ii. 1, which was the first class of the sons of Aaron: and therefore, upon the failure of the former pontifical family, they had the best right to succeed. With this right Jonathan took the office: and in his family it became settled, and continued for several descents, until the time of Herod; who from an office of inheritance changed it into one of arbitrary will and pleasure. Whoever had the power after him, put the high priest in or out, as they thought fit; till at length the office was extinguished by the destruction of the temple by the Romans. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

—— a purple robe and a crown of gold:] As ensigns of the great dignity with which he invested him. To wear a purple robe was a mark of high nobility: see Esth. viii. 15. Dean Prideaux, Grotius. These presents were sent to Jonathan, as ethnarch, or prince of Judea. Dr. Hales.

21. — Jonathan put on the holy robe,] Not that sent by Alexander, but the pontifical or high priest's robe, as Josephus explains it. Grotius.

28. And will grant you many immunities, &c.] The list of these offered immunities, exemptions, and privileges, (ver. 29—45,) is curious: it demonstrates the greatness and extent of the oppressions and exactions of the Syrian government respecting the Jews, throughout the empire; and it furnishes a sufficient excuse for Jonathan and the people, in rejecting these proposals from the insincere Demetrius, and preferring the alliance of Alexander. Dr. Hales.

29. — customs of salt, &c.] The Eastern people to this day support the expenses of government, in common, by paying a certain proportion of the produce of their lands to their prince. And it appears from this and other passages in Scripture, that the custom was in ancient times the same. Sir J. Chardin, Harmer.

—— crown taxes,] The Jews were wont to present crowns to the kings of Syria: afterwards that gold, which was paid instead of those crowns, or which was expended in making them, was called the crown gold, and crown tax. The parallel passage to Josephus is, "I forgive you the tax upon salt, and the value of the crowns which you used to offer to me." Grotius, Whiston.

30. — the three governments] See chap. xi. 34.

Before CHRIST about 158. 35 Also no man shall have authority to meddle with them, or to molest any of them in any matter.

36 I will further, that there be enrolled among the king's forces about thirty thousand men of the Jews, unto whom pay shall be given, as belongeth to all the king's forces.

37 And of them some shall be placed in the king's strong holds, of whom also some shall be set over the affairs of the kingdom, which are of trust: and I will that their overseers and governors be of themselves, and that they † live after their own laws, even as the king hath commanded in the land of Judea.

† Gr. walk.

38 And concerning the three governments that are added to Judea from the country of Samaria, let them be joined with Judea, that they may be reckoned to be under one, nor bound to obey other authority than the high priest's.

39 As for Ptolemais, and the land pertaining thereto, I give it as a free gift to the sanctuary of Jerusalem for the necessary expences ‖ of the sanctuary.

‖ Or, of the holy things.

40 Moreover I give every year fifteen thousand shekels of silver out of the king's accounts from the places appertaining.

41 And all the overplus, which the officers payed not in as in former time, from henceforth shall be given toward the works of the temple.

42 And beside this, the five thousand shekels of silver, which they took from the uses of the temple out of the accounts year by year, even those things shall be released, because they appertain to the priests that minister.

43 And whosoever they be that flee unto the temple at Jerusalem, or be within the liberties thereof, being indebted unto the king, or for any other matter, let them be at liberty, and all that they have in my realm.

44 For the building also and repairing of the works of the sanctuary expences shall be given of the king's accounts.

45 Yea, and for the building of the walls of Jerusalem, and the fortifying thereof round about, expences shall be given out of the king's accounts, as also for the building of the walls in Judea.

46 Now when Jonathan and the people heard these words, they gave no credit unto them, nor received them, because they remembered the great evil that he had done in Israel; for he had afflicted them very sore.

47 But with Alexander they were well pleased, because he was the first that entreated of true peace with them, and they were confederate with him always. Before CHRIST about 152.

48 Then gathered king Alexander great forces, and camped over against Demetrius. about 150.

49 And after the two kings had joined battle, Demetrius' host fled: but Alexander followed after him, and prevailed against them.

50 And he continued the battle very sore until the sun went down: and that day was Demetrius slain.

51 Afterward Alexander sent ambassadors to Ptolemee king of Egypt with a message to this effect:

52 Forasmuch as I am come again to my realm, and am set in the throne of my progenitors, and have gotten the dominion, and overthrown Demetrius, and recovered our country;

53 For after I had joined battle with him, both he and his host was discomfited by us, so that we sit in the throne of his kingdom:

54 Now therefore let us make a league of amity together, and give me now thy daughter to wife: and I will be thy son in law, and will give both thee and her gifts according to thy dignity.

55 Then Ptolemee the king gave answer, saying, Happy be the day wherein thou didst return into the land of thy fathers, and satest in the throne of their kingdom.

56 And now will I do to thee, as thou hast written: meet me therefore at Ptolemais, that we may see one another; for I will marry my daughter to thee according to thy desire.

57 So Ptolemee went out of Egypt with his daughter Cleopatra, and they came unto Ptolemais in the hundred threescore and second year:

58 Where king Alexander meeting him, he gave unto him his daughter Cleopatra, and celebrated her marriage at Ptolemais with great glory, as the manner of kings is.

59 Now king Alexander had written unto Jonathan, that he should come and meet him.

60 Who thereupon went honourably to Ptolemais, where he met the two kings, and gave them and their friends silver and gold, and many presents, and found favour in their sight.

61 At that time certain pestilent fellows of Israel, men of a wicked life, assembled

Before CHRIST about 150. themselves against him, to accuse him: but the king would not hear them.

62 Yea more than that, the king commanded to take off his garments, and clothe him in purple: and they did so.

63 Also he made him sit by himself, and said unto his princes, Go with him into the midst of the city, and make proclamation, that no man complain against him of any matter, and that no man trouble him for any manner of cause.

64 Now when his accusers saw that he was honoured according to the proclamation, and clothed in purple, they fled all away.

65 So the king honoured him, and wrote him among his chief friends, and made him a duke, and ‖ partaker of his dominion.

‖ Or, governour of a province.

66 Afterward Jonathan returned to Jerusalem with peace and gladness.

about 148. 67 Furthermore in the hundred threescore and fifth year came Demetrius son of Demetrius out of Crete into the land of his fathers:

68 Whereof when king Alexander heard tell, he was right sorry, and returned into Antioch.

69 Then Demetrius made Apollonius the governor of Celosyria his general, who gathered together a great host, and camped in Jamnia, and sent unto Jonathan the high priest, saying,

70 Thou alone liftest up thyself against us, and I am laughed to scorn for thy sake, and reproached: and why dost thou vaunt thy power against us in the mountains?

71 Now therefore, if thou trustest in thine own strength, come down to us into the plain field, and there let us try the matter together: for with me is the power of the cities.

72 Ask and learn who I am, and the rest that take our part, and they shall tell thee that thy foot is not able to stand before our face; for thy fathers have been twice put to flight in their own land.

Before CHRIST about 141.

73 Wherefore now thou shalt not be able to abide the horsemen and so great a power in the plain, where is neither stone nor flint, nor place to flee unto.

74 So when Jonathan heard these words of Apollonius, he was moved in his mind, and choosing ten thousand men he went out of Jerusalem, where Simon his brother met him for to help him.

75 And he pitched his tents against Joppe: but they of Joppe shut him out of the city, because Apollonius had a garrison there.

76 Then Jonathan laid siege unto it: whereupon they of the city let him in for fear: and so Jonathan won Joppe.

77 Whereof when Apollonius heard, he took three thousand horsemen, with a great host of footmen, and went to Azotus ‖ as one that journeyed, and therewithal ‖ drew him forth into the plain, because he had a great number of horsemen, in whom he put his trust.

‖ Or, as though one had journeyed through it.
‖ Or, led him on.

78 Then Jonathan followed after him to Azotus, where the armies joined battle.

79 Now Apollonius had left a thousand horsemen in ambush.

80 And Jonathan knew that there was an ambushment behind him; for they had compassed in his host, and cast darts at the people, from morning till evening.

81 But the people stood still, as Jonathan had commanded them: and so the ‖ enemies' horses were tired.

‖ Joseph. Antiq. lib. 13. cap. 8.

82 Then brought Simon forth his host, and set them against the footmen, (for the horsemen were spent,) who were discomfited by him, and fled.

83 The horsemen also, being scattered in the field, fled to Azotus, and went into Beth-dagon, their idol's temple, for safety.

84 But Jonathan set fire on Azotus, and the cities round about it, and took their 86 And from thence Jonathan removed his host, and camped against Ascalon, where the men of the city came forth, and met him with great pomp.

87 After this returned Jonathan and his host unto Jerusalem, having many spoils.

about 146. AND the king of Egypt gathered together a great host, like the sand that lieth upon the sea shore, and many ships, and went about through deceit to get Alexander's kingdom, and join it to his own.

2 Whereupon he took his journey into Syria in peaceable manner, so as they of the cities opened unto him, and met him: for king Alexander had commanded them so to do, because he was his father in law.

3 Now as Ptolemee entered into the cities, he set in every one of them a garrison of soldiers to keep it.

4 And when he came near to Azotus, Before CHRIST about 146. they shewed him the temple of Dagon that was burnt, and Azotus and the suburbs thereof that were destroyed, and the bodies that were cast abroad, and them that he had burnt in the battle; for they had made heaps of them by the way where he should pass.

5 Also they told the king whatsoever Jonathan had done, to the intent he might blame him: but the king held his peace.

6 Then Jonathan met the king with great pomp at Joppe, where they saluted one another, and † lodged. † Gr. slept.

7 Afterward Jonathan, when he had gone with the king to the river called Eleutherus, returned again to Jerusalem.

8 King Ptolemee therefore, having gotten the dominion of the cities by the sea unto Seleucia upon the sea coast, imagined wicked counsels against Alexander.

9 Whereupon he sent ambassadors unto king Demetrius, saying, Come, let us make a league betwixt us, and I will give thee my daughter whom Alexander hath, and thou shalt reign in thy father's kingdom:

10 For I repent that I gave my daughter unto him, for he sought to slay me.

11 Thus did he slander him, because he was desirous of his kingdom.

12 Wherefore he took his daughter from him, and gave her to Demetrius, and forsook Alexander, so that their hatred was openly known.

13 Then Ptolemee entered into Antioch, where he set two crowns upon his head, the crown of Asia, and of Egypt.

14 In the mean season was king Alexander in Cilicia, because those that dwelt in those parts had revolted from him.

15 But when Alexander heard of this, he came to war against him: whereupon

Chap. XI. ver. 1. And the king of Egypt gathered together a great host, &c.] This was Ptolemy Philometor, who marched a great army into Palestine, at the request of his son in law Alexander king of Syria, and to his assistance. Dean Prideaux.

The historian says, that under cover of assisting Alexander he was really promoting his own schemes of ambition: but Josephus gives no such account. Grotius.

— imagined wicked counsels against Alexander.] Josephus gives the following account of these transactions. After Ptolemy arrived at Ptolemais, he very narrowly escaped destruction by means of a conspiracy formed against him by Ammonius the friend of Alexander. On the discovery of this, he wrote to Alexander with a demand that Ammonius should be given up to punishment on account of the conspiracy. But upon the refusal of his demand he perceived that Alexander himself was the author of the plot, and accordingly began to entertain great hatred towards him. Drusius. Josephus believed this to be the truth; but the writer of the book of the Maccabees evidently favours Alexander. Grotius.

Before CHRIST about 146. king Ptolemee brought forth his host, and met him with a mighty power, and put him to flight.

16 So Alexander fled into Arabia, there to be defended; but king Ptolemee was exalted:

about 145. 18 King Ptolemee also died the third day after, † and they that were in the strong holds were slain one of another.

† Gr. and those that were in the holds were slain of those that were in the holds.

19 By this means Demetrius reigned in the hundred threescore and seventh year.

20 At the same time Jonathan gathered together them that were in Judea, to take the tower that was in Jerusalem: and he made many engines of war against it.

21 Then certain ungodly persons, who hated their own people, went unto the king, and told him that Jonathan besieged the tower.

22 Whereof when he heard, he was angry, and immediately removing, he came to Ptolemais, and wrote unto Jonathan, that he should not lay siege to the tower, but come and speak with him at Ptolemais in great haste.

23 Nevertheless Jonathan, when he heard this, commanded to besiege it still: and he chose certain of the elders of Israel and the priests, and put himself in peril;

24 And took silver and gold, and raiment, and divers presents besides, and went to Ptolemais unto the king, where he found favour in his sight.

25 And though certain ungodly men of the people had made complaints against him,

26 Yet the king entreated him as his predecessors had done before, and promoted him in the sight of all his friends,

27 And confirmed him in the high priesthood, and in all the honours that he had before, and gave him preeminence among his chief friends. Before CHRIST about 144.

28 Then Jonathan desired the king, that he would make Judea free from tribute, as also the three governments, with the country of Samaria; and he promised him three hundred talents.

29 So the king consented, and wrote letters unto Jonathan of all these things after this manner:

30 King Demetrius unto his brother Jonathan, and unto the nation of the Jews, sendeth greeting:

31 We send you here a copy of the letter which we did write unto our cousin Lasthenes concerning you, that ye might see it.

32 King Demetrius unto his father Lasthenes sendeth greeting:

33 We are determined to do good to the people of the Jews, who are our friends, and keep covenants with us, because of their good will toward us.

34 ‖ Wherefore we have ratified unto them the borders of Judea, with the three governments of Apherema and Lydda and Ramathem, that are added unto Judea from the country of Samaria, and all things appertaining unto them, for all such as do sacrifice in Jerusalem, instead of the payments which the king received of them yearly aforetime out of the fruits of the earth and of trees. ‖ Joseph. 16. — but king Ptolemee was exalted:] That is, established in the highest degree of power: he was elevated to the loftiest situation of dignity and empire, having acquired the dominion of two powerful kingdoms. Badwell.

His joy however did not last long: for having received a dangerous wound in the battle, he died of it a few days after, ver. 18; leaving Demetrius in quiet possession of his father's kingdom, which he having recovered by virtue of this victory thenceforward assumed the name of Nicator, or the Conqueror. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

18. —and they that were in the strong holds were slain one of another.] The first false step of the new government was the massacre of the Egyptian soldiers, whom Ptolemy the father-in-law of Demetrius had left to assist in garrisoning the fortresses in the maritime towns, but who by order of Demetrius were now put to death by their Syrian associates: upon which in disgust the rest of the Egyptian army returned to Egypt, and would no longer support him. Dean Prideaux, Dr. Hales.

copy of these things, and let it be delivered unto Jonathan, and set upon the holy mount in a conspicuous place.

38 After this, when king Demetrius saw that the land was quiet before him, and that no resistance was made against him, he sent away all his forces, every one to his own place, except certain bands of strangers, whom he had gathered from the isles of the heathen: wherefore all the forces of his fathers hated him.

39 Moreover there was one Tryphon, that had been of Alexander's part afore, who, seeing that all the host murmured against Demetrius, went to Simalcue the Arabian, that brought up Antiochus the young son of Alexander,

40 And lay sore upon him to deliver him this young Antiochus, that he might reign in his father's stead: he told him therefore all that Demetrius had done, and how his men of war were at enmity with him, and there he remained a long season.

41 In the mean time Jonathan sent unto king Demetrius, that he would cast those of the tower out of Jerusalem, and those also in the fortresses: for they fought against Israel.

42 So Demetrius sent unto Jonathan, saying, I will not only do this for thee and thy people, but I will greatly honour thee and thy nation, if opportunity serve.

43 Now therefore thou shalt do well, if thou send me men to help me; for all my forces are gone from me.

44 Upon this Jonathan sent him three thousand strong men unto Antioch: and when they came to the king, the king was very glad of their coming.

45 Howbeit they that were of the city gathered themselves together into the midst of the city, to the number of an hundred and twenty thousand men, and would have slain the king.

46 Wherefore the king fled into the court, but they of the city kept the passages of the city, and began to fight.

Before CHRIST about 145.

47 Then the king called to the Jews for help, who came unto him all at once, and dispersing themselves through the city slew that day in the city to the number of an hundred thousand.

48 Also they set fire on the city, and gat many spoils that day, and delivered the king.

49 So when they of the city saw that the Jews had got the city as they would, their courage was abated: wherefore they made supplication to the king, and cried, saying,

50 ‖ Grant us peace, and let the Jews cease from assaulting us and the city.

‖ Or, Be friends with us.

51 With that they cast away their weapons, and made peace; and the Jews were honoured in the sight of the king, and in the sight of all that were in his realm; and they returned to Jerusalem, having great spoils.

52 So king Demetrius sat on the throne of his kingdom, and the land was quiet before him.

53 Nevertheless he dissembled in all that ever he spake, and estranged himself from Jonathan, neither rewarded he him according to the benefits which he had received of him, but troubled him very sore.

54 After this returned Tryphon, and with him the young child Antiochus, who reigned, and was crowned. about 144.

55 Then there gathered unto him all the men of war, whom Demetrius had put away, and they fought against Demetrius, who turned his back and fled.

64 He went to meet them, and left Simon his brother in the country.

65 Then Simon encamped against Bethsura, and fought against it a long season, and shut it up:

66 But they desired to have peace with him, which he granted them, and then put them out from thence, and took the city, and set a garrison in it.

67 As for Jonathan and his host, they pitched at the water of Gennesar, from whence betimes in the morning they gat them to the plain of Nasor.

68 And, behold, the host of strangers met them in the plain, who, having laid men in ambush for him in the mountains, came themselves over against him.

69 So when they that lay in ambush rose out of their places, and joined battle, all that were of Jonathan's side fled;

70 Insomuch as there was not one of them left, except Mattathias the son of Absalom, and Judas the son of Calphi, the captains of the host. Before CHRIST about 144.

71 Then Jonathan rent his clothes, and cast earth upon his head, and prayed.

72 Afterwards turning again to battle, he put them to flight, and so they ran away:

73 Now when his own men that were fled saw this, they turned again unto him, and with him pursued them to Cades, even unto their own tents, and there they camped.

74 So there were slain of the heathen that day about three thousand men: but Jonathan returned to Jerusalem.

1 Jonathan reneweth his league with the Romans and Lacedemonians. 28 The forces of Demetrius, thinking to surprise Jonathan, flee away for fear. 35 Jonathan fortifieth the castles in Judea, 48 and is shut up by the fraud of Tryphon in Ptolemais.

NOW when Jonathan saw that the time served him, he chose certain men, and sent them to Rome, for to confirm and renew the friendship that they had with them.

2 He sent letters also to the Lacedemonians, and to other places, for the same purpose.

3 So they went unto Rome, and entered into the senate, and said, Jonathan the high priest, and the people of the Jews, sent us unto you, to the end ye should renew the friendship, which ye had with them, and league, as in former time.

4 Upon this the Romans gave them letters unto the governors of every place, that they should bring them into the land of Judea peaceably.

5 And this is the copy of the letters which Jonathan wrote to the Lacedemonians:

60. Then Jonathan went forth, &c.] The ill return which Demetrius made Jonathan was doubtless his chief reason for declaring for the new king. Stackhouse. It appears from Josephus, that on Jonathan's consenting to the proposals of Antiochus, a commission was sent to him to raise forces for Antiochus's service through all Coele-Syria and Palestine, by virtue whereof, having gotten together a large army, he marched round the country as far as Damascus, to secure all in those parts to the interest of Antiochus. Dean Prideaux.

9 Therefore we also, albeit we need none of these things, for that we have the holy books of scripture in our hands to comfort us,

10 Have nevertheless attempted to send unto you for the renewing of brotherhood and friendship, lest we should become strangers unto you altogether: for there is a long time passed since ye sent unto us.

11 We therefore at all times without ceasing, both in our feasts, and other convenient days, do remember you in the sacrifices which we offer, and in our prayers, as reason is, and as it becometh us to think upon our brethren:

12 And we are right glad of your honour.

13 As for ourselves, we have had great troubles and wars on every side, forsomuch as the kings that are round about us have fought against us.

14 Howbeit we would not be troublesome unto you, nor to others of our confederates and friends, in these wars:

15 For we have help from heaven that succoureth us, so as we are delivered from our enemies, and our enemies are brought under foot.

16 For this cause we chose Numenius the son of Antiochus, and Antipater the son of Jason, and sent them unto the Romans, to renew the amity that we had with them, and the former league.

17 We commanded them also to go unto you, and to salute you, and to deliver you our letters concerning the renewing of our brotherhood.

Before CHRIST about 144.

18 Wherefore now ye shall do well to give us an answer thereto.

19 And this is the copy of the letters ‖ which Oniares sent.

‖ Read out of Josephus, which Areus sent to Onias.

20 Areus king of the Lacedemonians to Onias the high priest, greeting:

21 It is found in writing, that the Lacedemonians and Jews are brethren, and that they are of the stock of Abraham:

22 Now therefore, since this is come to our knowledge, ye shall do well to write unto us of your † prosperity.

† Gr. peace.

23 We do write back again to you, that your cattle and goods are our's, and our's are your's. We do command therefore our ambassadors to make report unto you on this wise.

24 Now when Jonathan heard that Demetrius' princes were come to fight against him with a greater host than afore, 25 He removed from Jerusalem, and met them in the land of Amathis: for he gave them no respite ‖ to enter his country.

‖ Or, to set foot in his country: or, to invade his country.

26 He sent spies also unto their tents, who came again, and told him that they were appointed to come upon them in the night season.

27 Wherefore so soon as the sun was down, Jonathan commanded his men to watch, and to be in arms, that all the night long they might be ready to fight: also he sent forth centinels round about the host.

28 But when the adversaries heard that Jonathan and his men were ready for battle, they feared, and trembled in their hearts, and ‖ they kindled fires in their camp.

‖ Joseph. Antiq. lib. 13. cap. 5. We y went away.

29 Howbeit Jonathan and his company knew it not till the morning: for they saw the lights burning.

Chap. XII. ver. 7. — unto Onias the high priest from Darius,] The Onias here mentioned was the son of Simon the Just; he lived during the reigns, first of Euergetes, then of Ptolemy Philopator, and Ptolemy Epiphanes, in Egypt; and of Antiochus the Great, and Seleucus, in Syria. The name of the Lacedemonian king was Areus, of which Darius is manifestly a corruption. Grotius.

—— ye are our brethren,] By this is meant, not merely friends and allies, but kinsmen: as is manifest from the language of Josephus, and from the very words of the epistle of the Lacedemonians, ver. 21, who declare themselves to be of the stock of Abraham. Grotius. Whence this kindred arose, is uncertain; unless, as Grotius supposes, they were derived from the Dores, who came from the Pelasgi: these are by Herodotus called "barbarians;" and perhaps were derived from the Syrians and Arabians, the posterity of Abraham by Keturah. Whiston.

19. — which Oniares sent,] See the margin.

21. It is found in writing,] That is, in the annals and monuments of history. Badwell. It appears from hence, that the Lacedemonians first wrote to the Jews, and certified them that they found in some old books that they were related, and had the patriarch Abraham for their common father. The Jews, though proud of their noble origin, did not reject the pretension of the Lacedemonians. Both believed they were related. It must be confessed, however, that their belief was ill founded, if it rested on the documents remaining in Scripture, or in profane authors. But they might at that time have proofs and monuments in their possession, which are unknown to us. Calmet.

25. — in the land of Amathis:] Or, Hamath. See the note on Isa. x. 9.

28. — they feared, and trembled in their hearts,] So that they immediately marched off in the night, "kindling fires in their camp," in order to make it believed that they were still there. Dean Prideaux. A stratagem, of which instances are frequently recorded in history. Grotius.

Before CHRIST about 144.

30 Then Jonathan pursued after them, but overtook them not: for they were gone over the river Eleutherus.

31 Wherefore Jonathan turned to the Arabians, who were called † Zabadeans, and smote them, and took their spoils.

† Joseph. Gr. Nabatheans, or, Zabatheans.

32 And removing thence, he came to Damascus, and so passed through all the country.

33 Simon also went forth, and passed through the country unto Ascalon, and the holds there adjoining, from whence he turned aside to Joppe, and won it.

34 For he had heard that they would deliver the hold unto them that took Demetrius' part; wherefore he set a garrison there to keep it.

35 After this came Jonathan home again, and calling the elders of the people together, he consulted with them about building strong holds in Judea,

36 And making the walls of Jerusalem higher, and raising a great mount between the tower and the city, for to separate it from the city, that so it might be alone, that men might neither sell nor buy in it.

37 Upon this they came together to build up the city, ‖ forasmuch as part of the wall toward the brook on the east side was fallen down, and they repaired that which was called Caphenatha.

‖ Or, according to the Roman reading. and he came near to the wall of the brook toward the east.

38 Simon also set up Adida in Sephela, and made it strong with gates and bars.

39 Now Tryphon went about to get the kingdom of Asia, and to kill Antiochus the king, that he might set the crown upon his own head.

40 Howbeit he was afraid that Jonathan would not suffer him, and that he would fight against him; wherefore he sought a way how to take Jonathan, that he might kill him. So he removed, and came to Bethsan.

41 Then Jonathan went out to meet him with forty thousand men chosen for the battle, and came to Bethsan.

42 Now when Tryphon saw that Jonathan came with so great a force, he durst not stretch his hand against him; Before CHRIST about 144.

43 But received him honourably, and commended him unto all his friends, and gave him gifts, and commanded his men of war to be as obedient unto him, as to himself.

44 Unto Jonathan also he said, Why hast thou put all this people to so great trouble, seeing there is no war betwixt us?

45 Therefore send them now home again, and choose a few men to wait on thee, and come thou with me to Ptolemais, for I will give it thee, and the rest of the strong holds and forces, and all that have any charge: as for me, I will return and depart: for this is the cause of my coming.

46 So Jonathan believing him did as he bade him, and sent away his host, who went into the land of Judea.

47 And with himself he retained but three thousand men, of whom he † sent two thousand into Galilee, and one thousand went with him.

† Gr. he sent in two thousand into Galilee.

48 Now as soon as Jonathan entered into Ptolemais, they of Ptolemais shut the gates, and took him, and all them that came with him they slew with the sword.

49 Then sent Tryphon an host of footmen and horsemen into Galilee, and into the great plain, to destroy all Jonathan's company.

50 But when they knew that Jonathan and they that were with him were taken and slain, they encouraged one another, and went close together, prepared to fight.

51 They therefore that followed upon them, perceiving that they were ready to fight for their lives, turned back again.

52 Whereupon they all came into the land of Judea peaceably, and there they bewailed Jonathan, and them that were with him, and they were sore afraid; wherefore all Israel made great lamentation.

Before CHRIST about 144.

53 Then all the heathen that were round about them sought to destroy them: for said they, They have no captain, nor any to help them: now therefore let us make war upon them, and take away their memorial from among men.

CHAP. XIII.

8 Simon is made captain in his brother Jonathan's room. 19 Tryphon getteth two of Jonathan's sons into his hands, and slayeth their father. 27 The tomb of Jonathan. 36 Simon is favoured by Demetrius, 40 and winneth Gaza, and the tower at Jerusalem.

NOW when Simon heard that Tryphon had gathered together a great host to invade the land of Judea, and destroy it,

2 And saw that the people was in great trembling and fear, he went up to Jerusalem, and gathered the people together,

3 And gave them exhortation, saying, Ye yourselves know what great things I, and my brethren, and my father's house, have done for the laws and the sanctuary, the battles also and troubles which we have seen,

4 By reason whereof all my brethren are slain for Israel's sake, and I am left alone.

5 Now therefore be it far from me, that I should spare mine own life in any time of trouble: for I am no better than my brethren.

6 Doubtless I will avenge my nation, and the sanctuary, and our wives, and our children: for all the heathen are gathered to destroy us of very malice.

7 Now as soon as the people heard these words, their spirit revived.

8 And they answered with a loud voice, saying, Thou shalt be our leader instead of Judas and Jonathan thy brother.

9 Fight thou our battles, and whatsoever thou commandest us, that will we do.

10 So then he gathered together all the men of war, and made haste to finish the walls of Jerusalem, and he fortified it round about.

11 Also he sent Jonathan the son of Absalom, and with him a great power, to Joppe: who casting out them that were therein remained there in it.

12 So Tryphon removed from Ptolemais with a great power to invade the land of Judea, and Jonathan was with him in ward.

13 But Simon pitched his tents at Adida, over against the plain. Before CHRIST about 144.

14 Now when Tryphon knew that Simon was risen up instead of his brother Jonathan, and meant to join battle with him, he sent messengers unto him, saying,

15 Whereas we have Jonathan thy brother in hold, it is for money that he is owing unto the king's treasure, ‖ concerning the business that was committed unto him. ‖ Or, for the affairs, or, offices that he had, or, the necessary uses which he had.

16 Wherefore now send an hundred talents of silver, and two of his sons for hostages, that when he is at liberty he may not revolt from us, and we will let him go.

17 Hereupon Simon, albeit he perceived that they spake deceitfully unto him, yet sent he the money and the children, lest peradventure he should procure to himself great hatred of the people:

18 Who might have said, Because I sent him not the money and the children, therefore is Jonathan dead.

19 So he sent them the children and the hundred talents: howbeit Tryphon dissembled, neither would he let Jonathan go.

20 And after this came Tryphon to invade the land, and destroy it, going round about by the way that leadeth unto Adora: but Simon and his host marched against him in every place, wheresoever he went.

21 Now they that were in the tower sent messengers unto Tryphon, to the end that he should hasten his coming unto them by the wilderness, and send them victuals.

22 Wherefore Tryphon made ready all his horsemen to come that night: but there fell a very great snow, by reason whereof he came not. So he departed, and came into the country of Galaad.

23 And when he came near to Bascama, he slew Jonathan, who was buried there.

24 Afterward Tryphon returned and went into his own land.

25 Then sent Simon, and took the bones of Jonathan his brother, and buried them in Modin, the city of his fathers. about 143.

26 And all Israel made great lamentation for him, and bewailed him many days.

27 Simon also built a monument upon the sepulchre of his father and his brethren, and raised it aloft to the sight, with hewn stone behind and before.

Chap. XIII. ver. 20. — Adora:] A city belonging to the tribe of Judah, in the southern part of Judea, on the confines of Idumea. Calmet.

21. — they that were in the tower] In the fortress of Jerusalem on mount Acra. It appears from chap. xii. 36, that they had a difficulty in procuring supplies of provisions, &c. Grotius.

25. — in Modin,] See the last note on chap. ii. 1.

Before CHRIST about 143.

28 Moreover he set up seven pyramids, one against another, for his father, and his mother, and his four brethren.

29 And in these he made cunning devices, about the which he set great pillars, and upon the pillars he made all their armour for a perpetual memory, and by the armour ships carved, that they might be seen of all that sail on the sea.

30 This is the sepulchre which he made at Modin, and it standeth yet unto this day.

31 Now Tryphon dealt deceitfully with the young king Antiochus, and slew him.

32 And he reigned in his stead, and crowned himself king of Asia, and brought a great calamity upon the land.

33 Then Simon built up the strong holds in Judea, and fenced them about with high towers, and great walls, and gates, and bars, and laid up victuals † therein.

† Gr. in the strong holds.

34 Moreover Simon chose men, and sent to king Demetrius, to the end he should give the land an immunity, because † all that Tryphon did was to spoil.

† Gr. all Tryphon's doings were robberies.

35 Unto whom king Demetrius answered and wrote after this manner:

36 King Demetrius unto Simon the high priest, and friend of kings, as also unto the elders and nation of the Jews, sendeth greeting:

37 The golden crown, and the scarlet robe, which ye sent unto us, we have received: and we are ready to make a stedfast peace with you, yea, and to write unto our officers, to confirm the immunities which we have granted.

38 And whatsoever covenants we have made with you shall stand; and the strong holds, which ye have builded, shall be your own.

Before CHRIST about 142.

39 As for any oversight or fault committed unto this day, we forgive it, and the crown tax also, which ye owe us: and if there were any other tribute paid in Jerusalem, it shall no more be paid.

40 And look who are meet among you to be in our court, let them be enrolled, and let there be peace betwixt us.

41 Thus the yoke of the heathen was taken away from Israel in the hundred and seventieth year.

42 Then the people of Israel began to write in their instruments and contracts, In the first year of Simon the high priest, the governor and leader of the Jews.

43 In those days Simon camped against Gaza, and besieged it round about; he made also an engine of war, and set it by the city, and battered a certain tower, and took it.

44 And they that were in the engine leaped into the city; whereupon there was a great uproar in the city:

45 Insomuch as the people of the city rent their clothes, and climbed upon the walls with their wives and children, and cried with a loud voice, beseeching Simon † to grant them peace.

46 And they said, Deal not with us according to our wickedness, but according to thy mercy.

47 So Simon was appeased toward them, and fought no more against them, but put them out of the city, and cleansed the houses wherein the idols were, and so

30. — and it standeth yet unto this day.] Josephus tells us, that this whole fabrick was standing entire in his days, and looked upon as a very curious and excellent piece of architecture; and Eusebius mentions it as still in being in his time, which was two hundred years after the time of Josephus. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

31. — and slew him.] How Tryphon killed this Antiochus, the epitome of Livy informs us; namely, that he corrupted his physicians or surgeons, who, falsely pretending to the people that he was perishing with the stone, as they cut him for it, killed him. This exactly agrees with Josephus. Whiston.

32. — and brought a great calamity upon the land.] By the destruction of many who disapproved of his conduct. Grotius.

34. — Simon chose men, and sent to king Demetrius.] Notwithstanding the ill treatment the Jews had received from Demetrius, who after his defeat by Tryphon had abandoned himself to sloth and luxury at Laodicea, Simon yet preferred him to his perfidious rival, and sent respectfully to treat with him about a renewal of the former terms of accommodation: to which Demetrius gladly agreed, and confirmed them all, with an act of amnesty for all past offences. From this grant the Jews date the independence of their country, and their freedom from the Syrian yoke, before Christ 148; and thenceforth computed the times from this era of Simon's reign, as high priest, and ethnarch or prince of the Jews instead of the era of the Seleucidæ, or of Alexander's successors, as before. Dr. Hales.

40. — let them be enrolled,] In the number of our soldiers. Badwell. See chap. x. 36.

43. In those days Simon camped against Gaza, &c.] Having obtained the independent sovereignty of the land, Simon took a progress through it, to inspect what was wanting for its security; repairing the fortifications that were decayed, making new ones where they were wanted, and besieging and taking the place that stood out against him. Dean Prideaux.

—— Gaza,] This is in all probability an error for Gazara; the taking of which is spoken of as one of the good works of Simon, chap. xiv. 7, 34; and also by Josephus: but nothing is said in either history of his taking Gaza. And Gazara is often mentioned by them as in the hands of Simon; but Gaza never, unless it be in this place. Gazara is the same with the ancient Gezer: see the note on chap. iii. 46. And here most likely it was that Simon built him an house, ver. 48; and that was the house wherein John his son dwelt, when he sent him to command in those parts, ver. 53. Dean Prideaux.

47. — but put them out of the city.] He generously spared their lives; but for their idolatries, and for the sake of greater security, made them evacuate the city. Dr. Hales, Grotius.

Before CHRIST about 143. entered into it with songs and thanksgiving.

48 Yea, he put all uncleanness out of it, and placed such men there as would keep the law, and made it stronger than it was before, and built therein a dwellingplace for himself.

about 142. 49 They also of the tower in Jerusalem were kept so strait, that they could neither come forth, nor go into the country, nor buy, nor sell: wherefore they were in great distress for want of victuals, and a great number of them perished through famine.

50 Then cried they to Simon, beseeching him, ‖ to be at one with them: which thing he granted them; and when he had put them out from thence, he cleansed the tower from pollutions:

‖ Or, to make peace with them.

51 And entered into it the three and twentieth day of the second month, in the hundred seventy and first year, with thanksgiving, and branches of palm trees, and with harps, and cymbals, and with viols, and hymns, and songs: because there was destroyed a great enemy out of Israel.

52 He ordained also that that day should be kept every year with gladness. Moreover the hill of the temple that was by the tower he made stronger than it was, and there he dwelt himself with his company.

53 And when Simon saw that John his son was a valiant man, he made him captain of all the hosts; and he dwelt in Gazara.

CHAP. XIV.

3 Demetrius is taken by the king of Persia. 4 The good deeds of Simon to his country. 18 The Lacedemonians and Romans renew their league with him. 26 A memorial of his acts is set up in Sion.

about 141. NOW in the hundred threescore and twelfth year king Demetrius gathered his forces together, and went into Media, to get him help to fight against Tryphon.

2 But when Arsaces, the king of Persia and Media, heard that Demetrius was entered within his borders, he sent one of his princes to take him alive:

Before CHRIST about 141.

3 Who went and smote the host of Demetrius, and took him, and brought him to Arsaces, by whom he was put in ward.

4 As for the land of Judea, that was quiet all the days of Simon; for he sought the good of his nation in such wise, as that evermore his authority and honour pleased them well.

5 And as he was honourable in all his acts, so in this, that he took Joppe for an haven, and made an entrance to the isles of the sea,

6 And enlarged the bounds of his nation, and recovered the country,

7 And gathered together a great number of captives, and had the dominion of Gazara, and Bethsura, and the tower, out of the which he took all uncleanness, neither was there any that resisted him.

8 Then did they till their ground in peace, and the earth gave her increase, and the trees of the field their fruit.

9 The ancient men sat all in the streets, communing together of ‖ good things, and the young men put on glorious and warlike apparel.

‖ Or, the wealth of the land.

10 He provided victuals for the cities, and set in them all manner of munition, so that his honourable name was renowned unto the end of the world.

11 He made peace in the land, and Israel rejoiced with great joy:

12 For [a] every man sat under his vine and his fig tree, and there was none to fray them:

[a] 1 Kings 4. 25.

13 Neither was there any left in the land to fight against them: yea, the kings themselves were overthrown in those days.

14 Moreover he strengthened all those of his people that were brought low: the law he searched out; and every contemner of the law and wicked person he took away.

---

51. — because there was destroyed a great enemy out of Israel.] The garrison in this fortress had been a dreadful thorn in the sides of the Maccabees and their friends, ever since Antiochus Epiphanes first placed it there. Therefore Simon not only demolished the fortress, that it might no longer be a retreat to sedition and faction; but, to prevent its being rebuilt at any time, he levelled the hill on which it was situated, so that now no eminence was left but the mount of the temple only. This mount he new fortified in the meanwhile; repairing the outer wall, and making it stronger than before; and provided habitations within it both for "himself and his company," and there he afterwards dwelt. And most likely his house stood where the castle Antonia was afterwards built. Dean Prideaux. Stackhouse.

53. — and he dwelt in Gazara.] That being a border which most wanted his presence: probably also for the purpose of superintending the works then carrying on at Joppa, which was in the neighbourhood: see chap. xiv. 5. Dean Prideaux.

Chap. XIV. ver. 2. — Arsaces.] This was the family name of all the kings of Parthia. The king that reigned at this time was Mithridates, who, having gotten Demetrius into his power, after some time allowed him a royal maintenance, and gave him one of his daughters in marriage. Dean Prideaux.

5. — he took Joppe for an haven.] This being the nearest maritime town to Jerusalem, though at the distance of forty miles, Simon made it the seaport to that city and all Judea, it being the fittest place on all that coast for carrying on their trade to all the isles and countries in the Mediterranean: and it served them for this purpose many ages after, as it still doth the inhabitants of that country even to this day. Dean Prideaux.

Before CHRIST about 141.

15 He beautified the sanctuary, and multiplied the vessels of the temple.

16 Now when it was heard at Rome, and as far as Sparta, that Jonathan was dead, they were very sorry.

17 But as soon as they heard that his brother Simon was made high priest in his stead, and ruled the country, and the cities therein:

18 They wrote unto him in tables of brass, to renew the friendship and league which they had made with Judas and Jonathan his brethren:

19 Which writings were read before the congregation at Jerusalem.

20 And this is the copy of the letters that the Lacedemonians sent; The rulers of the Lacedemonians, with the city, unto Simon the high priest, and the elders, and priests, and residue of the people of the Jews, our brethren, send greeting:

21 The ambassadors that were sent unto our people certified us of your glory and honour: wherefore we were glad of their coming,

22 And did register the things that they spake in the council of the people in this manner; Numenius son of Antiochus, and Antipater son of Jason, the Jews' ambassadors, came unto us to renew the friendship they had with us.

23 And it pleased the people to entertain the men honourably, and to put the copy of their ambassage in publick records, to the end the people of the Lacedemonians might have a memorial thereof: furthermore we have written a copy thereof unto Simon the high priest.

24 After this Simon sent Numenius to Rome with a great shield of gold of a thousand pound weight, to confirm the league with them.

25 Whereof when the people heard, they said, What thanks shall we give to Simon and his sons?

Before CHRIST about 141.

26 For he and his brethren and the house of his father have established Israel, and chased away in fight their enemies from them, and confirmed their liberty.

27 So then they wrote it in tables of brass, which they set upon pillars in mount Sion: and this is the copy of the writing; The eighteenth day of the month Elul, in the hundred threescore and twelfth year, being the third year of Simon the high priest,

28 At ‖ Saramel in the great congregation of the priests, and people, and rulers of the nation, and elders of the country, were these things notified unto us.

‖ Or, Jeramel, perhaps otherwise by contraction and transposition of letters; or, some did, the remainder shall after they were counsel of matters extant.

29 Forasmuch as oftentimes there have been wars in the country, wherein for the maintenance of their sanctuary, and the law, Simon the son of Mattathias, of the posterity of Jarib, together with his brethren, put themselves in jeopardy, and resisting the enemies of their nation did their nation great honour:

30 (For after that Jonathan, having gathered his nation together, and been their high priest, was added to his people,

31 Their enemies purposed to invade their country, that they might destroy it, and lay hands on the sanctuary:

32 At which time Simon rose up, and fought for his nation, and spent much of his own substance, and armed ‖ the valiant men of his nation, and gave them wages,

‖ Or, the men of war.

33 And fortified the cities of Judea, together with Bethsura, that lieth upon the borders of Judea, where the ‖ armour of the enemies had been before; but he set a garrison of Jews there:

‖ Or, weapons.

34 Moreover he fortified Joppe, which lieth upon the sea, and ‖ Gazara, that bordereth upon Azotus, where the enemies had dwelt before: but he placed Jews there, and furnished them with all things convenient for the reparation thereof.)

‖ Or, Gaza.

35 The people therefore, seeing the acts

---

24. — of a thousand pound weight,] A thousand mine, which, according to the lowest computation of an Attic mina, amounted to the value of fifty thousand pounds sterling of our money. Dean Prideaux.

25. Whereof when the people heard,] That is, the people of the Jews. Drusius.

27. So then they wrote it in tables of brass, &c.] In a general assembly of the priests and elders and all the people assembled at Jerusalem, it was agreed by the unanimous consent of all present, that the supreme government of the nation, as well as the high priesthood, should be conferred on Simon, and settled both on him and on his posterity after him. This had before been personally settled on Simon by the grant of Demetrius; and the same was now granted by the whole nation of the Jews, and made perpetual to his descendants. A publick act or instrument was made of these things, reciting the good deeds of Simon and his family, and constituting him their prince, as well as their high priest, in return: a copy of which act they ordered to be engraven on tables of brass, and hung up in the sanctuary; and the original they laid up in the sacred archives belonging to the treasury of the temple. From that time Simon took on him the state, style, and authority of prince, as well as high priest, of the Jews; and all publick acts thenceforth went in his name. And after him both these dignities descended together to his posterity; and continued among them thus united together for several de-cents, they being at the same time sovereign pontiffs and sovereign princes of the Jewish nation. Dean Prideaux.

—— the month Elul,] The sixth month from Nisan, answering in part to our August. It is mentioned in Nehem. vi. 15. Drusius.

Before CHRIST about 141. of Simon, and unto what glory he thought to bring his nation, made him their governor and chief priest, because he had done all these things, and for the justice and faith which he kept to his nation, and for that he sought by all means to exalt his people.

36 For in his time things prospered in his hands, so that the heathen were taken out of their country, and they also that were in the city of David in Jerusalem, who had made themselves a tower, out of which they issued, and polluted all about the sanctuary, and did much hurt ‖ in the holy place:

‖ Or, unto religion.

37 But he placed Jews therein, and fortified it for the safety of the country and the city, and raised up the walls of Jerusalem.

38 King Demetrius also confirmed him in the high priesthood according to those things, 39 And made him one of his friends, and honoured him with great honour.

40 For he had heard say, that the Romans had called the Jews their friends and confederates and brethren; and that they had entertained the ambassadors of Simon honourably;

41 Also that the Jews and priests were well pleased that Simon should be their governor and high priest for ever, until there should arise a faithful prophet;

42 Moreover that he should be their captain, and should take charge of the sanctuary, to set them over their works, and over the country, and over the armour, and over the fortresses, that, I say, he should take charge of the sanctuary;

43 Beside this, that he should be obeyed of every man, and that all the writings in the country should be made in his name, and that he should be clothed in purple, and wear gold:

44 Also that it should be lawful for none of the people or priests to break any of these things, or to gainsay his words, or to gather an assembly in the country without him, or to be clothed in purple, or wear a buckle of gold:

Before CHRIST about 141.

45 And whosoever should do otherwise, or break any of these things, he should be punished.

46 Thus it liked all the people to deal with Simon, and to do as hath been said.

47 Then Simon accepted hereof, and was well pleased to be high priest, and captain and governor of the Jews and priests, and to defend them all.

48 So they commanded that this writing should be put in tables of brass, and that they should be set up within the compass of the sanctuary in a conspicuous place;

49 Also that the copies thereof should be laid up in the treasury, to the end that Simon and his sons might have them.

CHAP. XV.

Antiochus desireth leave to pass through Judea, and granteth great honours to Simon and the Jews. 16 The Romans write to divers kings and nations to favour the Jews. 27 Antiochus quarrelleth with Simon, 38 and sendeth some to annoy Judea.

MOREOVER Antiochus son of Demetrius the king sent letters from the isles of the sea unto Simon the priest and prince of the Jews, and to all the people; about 140.

2 The contents whereof were these: King Antiochus to Simon the high priest and prince of his nation, and to the people of the Jews, greeting:

3 Forasmuch as certain pestilent men have usurped the kingdom of our fathers, and my purpose is to challenge it again, that I may restore it to the old estate, and to that end have gathered a multitude of foreign soldiers together, and prepared ships of war;

4 My meaning also being to go through the country, that I may be avenged of them that have destroyed it, and made many cities in the kingdom desolate:

5 Now therefore I confirm unto thee all the oblations which the kings before me granted thee, and whatsoever gifts besides they granted.

41. — that Simon should be their governor and high priest for ever,] That is, he and his posterity: the expression "for ever," is opposed to a mere personal dignity. Drusius, Grotius.

— until there should arise a faithful prophet;] Or the Messiah. This was a very remarkable reservation made on the part of the Jewish people. Dr. Hales. See the note on chap. iv. 46.

Chap. XV. ver. 1. — Antiochus, son of Demetrius the king] This Antiochus was second son to Demetrius Soter, and brother to Demetrius Nicator, who during his captivity in Parthia had married the daughter of the Parthian king. See the note on chap. xiv. 2. This marriage gave such offence to Cleopatra, Demetrius's queen, who had fled with her two sons to Seleucia for protection against the usurper Tryphon, that she offered the crown of Syria to Antiochus, her husband's brother, on condition that he would marry her. He accepted her offer, and assumed the title of "king," and wrote a letter next year, before Christ 140, "from the isles of the sea," most probably from Rhodes or Cyprus, to Simon the high priest, and prince of his nation, and to the people of the Jews, announcing his intention of coming to recover his father's dominions from the usurper Tryphon; and, to secure their assistance, confirming all the grants of his father and brother in their full extent, and adding the promise of more. Dean Prideaux, Dr. Hales.

3. — certain pestilent men] Meaning Alexander Balas and his son; but especially Tryphon. Grotius.

Before CHRIST about 140.

6 I give thee leave also to coin money for thy country with thine own stamp.

7 And as concerning Jerusalem and the sanctuary, let them be free; and all the armour that thou hast made, and fortresses that thou hast built, and keepest in thine hands, let them remain unto thee.

8 And if any thing be, or shall be, owing to the king, let it be forgiven thee from this time forth for evermore.

9 Furthermore, when we have obtained our kingdom, we will honour thee, and thy nation, and thy temple, with great honour, so that your honour shall be known throughout the world.

about 139. 10 In the hundred threescore and fourteenth year went Antiochus into the land of his fathers: at which time all the forces came together unto him, so that few were left with Tryphon.

11 Wherefore being pursued by king Antiochus, he fled unto Dora, which lieth by the sea side:

12 For he saw that troubles came upon him all at once, and that his forces had forsaken him.

13 Then camped Antiochus against Dora, having with him an hundred and twenty thousand men of war, and eight thousand horsemen.

14 And when he had compassed the city round about, and joined ships close to the town on the sea side, he vexed the city by land and by sea, neither suffered he any to go out or in.

15 In the mean season came Numenius and his company from Rome, having letters to the kings and countries; wherein were written these things:

16 Lucius, consul of the Romans unto king Ptolemee, greeting:

17 The Jews' ambassadors, our friends and confederates, came unto us to renew the old friendship and league, being sent from Simon the high priest, and from the people of the Jews:

Before CHRIST about 140.

18 And they brought a shield of gold of a thousand pound.

19 We thought it good therefore to write unto the kings and countries, that they should do them no harm, nor fight against them, their cities, or countries, nor yet aid their enemies against them.

20 It seemed also good to us to receive the shield of them.

21 If therefore there be any pestilent fellows, that have fled from their country unto you, deliver them unto Simon the high priest, that he may punish them according to their own law.

22 The same things wrote he likewise unto Demetrius the king, and Attalus, to ‖ Ariarathes, and Arsaces, ‖ Or. Arsaces.

23 And to all the countries, and to ‖ Sampsames, and the Lacedemonians, and to Delus, and Myndus, and Sicyon, and Caria, and Samos, and Pamphylia, and Lycia, and Halicarnassus, and Rhodus, and ‖ Phaselis, and Cos, and Side, and Aradus, and Gortyna, and Cnidus, and Cyprus, and Cyrene.

‖ Or. Sampsaces.

‖ Or. Basilis.

24 And the copy hereof they wrote to Simon the high priest.

25 So Antiochus the king camped against Dora the second day, † assaulting it continually, and making engines, by which means he shut up Tryphon, that he could neither go out nor in.

† Gr. bringing his forces to it.

26 At that time Simon sent him two thousand chosen men to aid him; silver also, and gold, and much armour.

27 Nevertheless he would not receive them, but brake all the covenants which he had made with him afore, and became strange unto him.

28 Furthermore he sent unto him Athe-

6. — to coin money for thy country with thine own stamp.] A curious confirmation of this fact is furnished by a genuine copper coin of Simon's, struck this very year; which was purchased by Dr. Kennicott in the East, with the following inscription in the ancient sacred character on the front, "the fourth year," and on the reverse, "O the deliverance of Sion." An engraving of the coin or medal, and of the inscription, is given in Dr. Kennicott's Observations on the first book of Samuel, chap. vi. 19. Dr. Hales.

7. — let them be free;] Or as the Latin Vulgate has it, "holy and free," which are the very words of his father's concession, offered to Jonathan several years before, chap. x. 31. What makes these grants very remarkable is the state of the remaining genuine shekels of the Jews with Samaritan characters, which seem to have been, most of them at least, coined in the four first years of this Simon the Asmonean, and have on them these words on one side, "Jerusalem the holy," and on the reverse, "In the year of freedom, 1, or 2, or 3, or 4." These shekels therefore are original monuments of these times, and undeniable marks of the truth of the history contained in these chapters. Whiston.

10. — went Antiochus into the land of his fathers:] He landed in Syria the beginning of the next year, according to the foregoing letter: whereupon most of the usurper's forces, now weary of his tyranny, went over to Antiochus. Dean Prideaux.

11. — Dora,] A city in Phenicia, near mount Carmel. It is said to be "by the sea side," to distinguish it from another Dora, or Adora, in Idumea, mentioned chap. xiii. 20. Dr. Wait.

15. — to the kings and countries;] That is, to all the cities and states of Greece, lesser Asia, and the isles, that were then in alliance with the Romans. The several "kings" specified were kings respectively, Ptolemy of Egypt, Demetrius of Syria, Attalus of Pergamus, Ariarathes of Cappadocia, Arsaces, that is, Mithridates, of Parthia: see the note on chap. xiv. 2. Dean Prideaux.

Before CHRIST about 139. nobius, one of his friends, to commune with him, and say, Ye withhold Joppe and Gazara, with the tower that is in Jerusalem, which are cities of my realm.

29 The borders thereof ye have wasted, and done great hurt in the land, and got the dominion of many places within my kingdom.

30 Now therefore deliver the cities which ye have taken, and the tributes of the places, whereof ye have gotten dominion ‖ without the borders of Judea:

‖ Or, except the borders, &c.

31 Or else give me for them five hundred talents of silver; and for the harm that ye have done, and the tributes of the cities, other five hundred talents: if not, we will come and ‖ fight against you.

‖ Or, subdue you in fight.

32 So Athenobius the king's friend came to Jerusalem: and when he saw the glory of Simon, and the cupboard of gold and silver plate, and his great attendance, he was astonished, and told him the king's message.

33 Then answered Simon, and said unto him, We have neither taken other men's land, nor holden that which appertaineth to others, but the inheritance of our fathers, which our enemies had wrongfully in possession a certain time.

34 Wherefore we, having opportunity, hold the inheritance of our fathers.

35 And whereas thou demandest Joppe and Gazara, albeit they did great harm unto the people in our country, yet will we give an hundred talents for them. Hereunto Athenobius answered him not a word;

36 But returned in a rage to the king, and made report unto him of these speeches, and of the glory of Simon, and of all that he had seen: whereupon the king was exceeding wroth.

37 In the mean time fled Tryphon by ship unto Orthosias.

38 Then the king made Cendebeus captain of the sea coast, and gave him an host of footmen and horsemen,

39 And commanded him to remove his host toward Judea: also he commanded him to build up Cedron, and to fortify the gates, and to war against the people; but as for the king himself, he pursued Tryphon. Before CHRIST about 139.

40 So Cendebeus came to Jamnia, and began to provoke the people, and to invade Judea, and to take the people prisoners, and slay them.

41 And when he had built up Cedron, he set horsemen there, and an host of footmen, to the end that issuing out they might make outroads upon the ways of Judea, as the king had commanded him.

CHAP. XVI.

3 Judas and John prevail against the forces sent by Antiochus. 11 The captain of Jericho inviteth Simon and two of his sons into his castle, and there treacherously murdereth them. 19 John is sought for, 22 and escapeth, and killeth those that sought for him.

THEN came up John from Gazara, and told Simon his father what Cendebeus had done.

2 Wherefore Simon called his two eldest sons, Judas and John, and said unto them, I, and my brethren, and my father's house, have ever from our youth unto this day fought against the enemies of Israel; and things have prospered so well in our hands, that we have delivered Israel oftentimes.

3 But now I am old, and ye, by God's mercy, are of a sufficient age: be ye instead of me and my brother, and go and fight for our nation, and the help from heaven be with you.

4 So he chose out of the country twenty thousand men of war with horsemen, who went out against Cendebeus, and rested that night at Modin.

5 And when as they rose in the morning, and went into the plain, behold, a mighty great host both of footmen and horsemen came against them: howbeit there was a water brook betwixt them.

6 So he and his people pitched over against them: and when he saw that the people were afraid to go over the water brook, he went first over himself, and then the men seeing him passed through after him.

An end being thus put to his usurpation, Antiochus became fully possessed of his father's throne. He is known from others of the same name by the addition of Sidetes, or the hunter; from a Syriack word which signifies hunting, of which he was particularly fond. Dr. Hales, Dean Prideaux.

Before CHRIST about 139.

7 That done, he divided his men, and set the horsemen in the midst of the footmen: for the enemies' horsemen were very many.

8 Then sounded they with the holy trumpets: whereupon Cendebeus and his host were put to flight, so that many of them were slain, and the remnant gat them to the strong hold.

9 At that time was Judas John's brother wounded; but John still followed after them, until he came to Cedron, which Cendebeus had built.

‖ Or, Which when he had set on fire, they fled unto the towers in the fields of Azotus; and there were slain, &c. about 135.

10 ‖ So they fled even unto the towers in the fields of Azotus; wherefore he burned it with fire: so that there were slain of them about two thousand men. Afterward he returned into the land of Judea in peace.

11 Moreover in the plain of Jericho was Ptolemeus the son of Abubus made captain, and he had abundance of silver and gold:

12 For he was the high priest's son in law.

13 Wherefore his heart being lifted up, he thought to get the country to himself, and thereupon consulted deceitfully against Simon and his sons to destroy them.

14 Now Simon was visiting the cities that were in the country, and taking care for the good ordering of them; at which time he came down himself to Jericho with his sons, Mattathias and Judas, in the hundred threescore and seventeenth year, in the eleventh month, called Sabat:

15 Where the son of Abubus receiving them deceitfully into a little hold, called Docus, which he had built, made them a great banquet: howbeit he had hid men there. Before CHRIST about 135.

16 So when Simon and his sons had drunk largely, Ptolemee and his men rose up, and took their weapons, and came upon Simon into the banqueting place, and slew him, and his two sons, and certain of his servants.

17 In which doing he committed a great treachery, and recompensed evil for good.

18 Then Ptolemee wrote these things, and sent to the king, that he should send him an host to aid him, and he would deliver him the country and cities.

19 He sent others also to Gazara to kill John: and unto the † tribunes he sent letters to come unto him, that he might give them silver, and gold, and rewards. † Gr. captains of thousands.

20 And others he sent to take Jerusalem, and the mountain of the temple.

21 Now one had run afore to Gazara, and told John that his father and brethren were slain, and, quoth he, Ptolemee hath sent to slay thee also.

22 Hereof when he heard, he was sore astonished: so he laid hands on them that were come to destroy him, and slew them; for he knew that they sought to make him away.

23 As concerning the rest of the acts of John, and his wars, and worthy deeds which he did, and the building of the walls which he made, and his doings,

24 Behold, these are written in the chronicles of his priesthood, from the time he was made high priest after his father.

Chap. XVI. ver. 17. In which doing he committed a great treachery, &c.] What finally became of this traitor we have no manner of account in history. Being unable to support himself against John the son of Simon, who speedily marched against him, he fled to Zeno, tyrant of Philadelphia, and there waited in expectation of the arrival of Antiochus. No farther mention is made of him by Josephus. Though Antiochus might have liked the treason, he must have hated and abhorred the traitor. And how could he trust an ungrateful viper, who had stung his best friend and benefactor to his death? Dr. Hales. As to the victim of his treachery, the commendation, which the author of this book bestows upon him, chap. xiv. 4—15, is worth our observation: for therein he tells us, that "he sought the good of his nation in such wise, as that evermore his authority pleased them well:" that during his administration, whilst Syria and other neighbouring kingdoms were almost destroyed by wars, the Jews lived quietly, "every man under his vine and his fig tree," enjoying without fear the fruits of their labours, and beholding with pleasure the flouriahing state of their country; their trade increased by the reduction of Joppa and other maritime places; their territories enlarged; their armies well disciplined; their towns and fortresses well garrisoned; their religion and liberties secured; their land freed from heathen enemies and Jewish apostates; and their friendship courted by all the nations round them, even by the Romans and Lacedemonians. He observes further, that this Simon was no less zealous for the service of God, in exterminating apostasy, superstition, idolatry, and every thing else that was contrary to His laws; that he was a great protector of the true Israelites, and a friend to the poor; that he restored the service of the temple to its ancient splendour, and repaired the number of the sacred vessels. So that we need not wonder, if the Jewish Sanhedrim thought no dignity and honour, while he lived, and, when he was so basely and barbarously cut off, no grief and lamentation, too great for a man of his uncommon merit. Universal History, Stackhouse.

23. As concerning the rest of the acts of John,] He succeeded his father in the high priesthood and principality of the nation, which continued in the Maccabean family until the time of Herod the Great. See the notes subjoined to the Book of Esther.

24. — in the chronicles of his priesthood,] Called in some of the Greek copies, the fourth book of Maccabees; which Josephus, in his Antiquities of the Jews, here begins to follow and abridge. A Greek version of this chronicle was extant not very long ago at Lyons, though it seems to have been there burnt and to be utterly lost. Whiston.

THE SECOND BOOK

OF THE

MACCABEES.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS book contains a compilation of historical records extracted from different works; but especially an abridgment of an history of the persecutions of Epiphanes and Eupator against the Jews, which had been written in Greek in five books, by an Hellenistical Jew of Cyrene, named Jason, a descendant probably of those Jews who had been placed there by Ptolemy Soter; and which is no longer extant. The name of the compiler is not known. He was doubtless a different person from the author of the preceding book. He dates from an era six months later than that chosen by him, and he not only writes with less accuracy, and in a more florid style, but likewise relates some particulars in a manner inconsistent with the accounts of the first book; from which nevertheless he has in other instances borrowed both sentiments and facts. By whomsoever it was composed, it should seem to have been originally written in Greek; and the compiler, as well as the author, whose work he abridged, follows the Syrian mode of computation, reckoning by the years of the Seleucidæ.

The two epistles which are contained in the first and second chapters, and which are there said to have been written by the Jews at Jerusalem to their brethren at Alexandria, exhorting them to observe the feast of tabernacles, and that of the purification, are by Prideaux considered as spurious; the second, indeed, is said to have been written by Judas, who was not living at the time of the date; and it contains many extravagant and fabulous particulars. It begins at the tenth verse of the first chapter, and terminates with the eighteenth of the second; from thence to the end of the chapter is a short preface of the compiler of the abridgment of Jason's history; which commences with the third chapter, and concludes with the thirty-seventh verse of the fifteenth chapter, the two last verses forming a kind of conclusion to the work.

The book contains an history of about fifteen years, from the enterprise of Heliodorus in the temple, in the year of the world 3828, to the victory of Judas Maccabeus against Nicanor, 3843. The chapters are not however arranged exactly in chronological order. The book begins at a period somewhat earlier than that of the first book of the Maccabees. As the author appears at first to have intended only an epitome of the history of Judas Maccabeus and his brethren, with some contemporary events; the account of the punishment of Heliodorus, which occurred under Seleucus, the predecessor of Epiphanes, as well as the circumstances related in the two last chapters, which happened under Demetrius Soter, the successor of Eupator, have been sometimes represented as additions by some later writer. But since these events, as connected with the time of Judas, were not irrelative to the author's design, there is no reason, except from a pretended difference of style, to dispute their authenticity as a part of Jason's history; or, at least, as a genuine addition affixed to the epitome by the compiler. The author has no title, any more than the writer of the preceding book, to be considered as an inspired historian: he speaks, indeed, of his own performance in the diffident style of one conscious of the fallibility of his own judgment, and distrustful of his own powers. His work was never considered as strictly canonical till received into the sacred list by the Council of Trent, though examples are produced from it by many ancient writers. It must be allowed to be a valuable and instructive history; and affords an interesting description of a persecuted and afflicted people; furnishing in the relation of the conduct of Eleazar, and of the woman and her children who suffered for their attachment to their religion, an example of constancy, that might have animated the martyrs of the Christian Church. The author industriously displays the confidence in a resurrection and future life which prevailed at the period of his history, and which was the encouragement that enabled those who were so severely tried to sustain their tortures. He likewise, perhaps, more particularly enforced the doctrine of a resurrection with a design to counteract the propagation of the Sadducean principles, which were then rising into notice.

The work, as the production of a fallible and unenlightened man, contains a mixture of errour, and certainly should be read with that discretion, which, while it seeks instruction, guards against the intrusion of false and pernicious opinions. If St. Paul in his eulogium on some illustrious examples of faith should be thought to have established the truth, or approved the examples of this history, he by no means bears testimony to the inspiration of its author, or establishes its general authority in point of doctrine. The Apostles consigned for the direction of the Christian Church the productions of only those "holy men who were moved by the Holy Ghost." The Fathers in general cite the book as an useful history, but not as of authority in point of doctrine.

There are two other books, entitled the third and fourth books of the Maccabees, which were never received by any church. That, which is improperly styled the third, and which in point of time should be considered as the first, describes the persecution of Ptolemy Philopator against the Jews in Egypt, about the year of the world 3789; and the miraculous delivery of those who were exposed in the hippodrome of Alexandria to the fury of elephants. This is a work entitled to much respect; it is in the most ancient manuscripts of the Septuagint, and is cited by the Fathers; but never having been in the Vulgate, which version was universally used in the Western Church, and from which our translations of the Apocrypha were made, it never was admitted into our Bibles.

The book, which is usually called the fourth book of the Maccabees, contains an history of the pontificate of John Hyrcanus. Dr. Gray.

CHAP. I.

1 A letter of the Jews from Jerusalem to them of Egypt, to thank God for the death of Antiochus. 19 Of the fire that was hid in the pit. 24 The prayer of Neemias.

about 144. THE brethren, the Jews that be at Jerusalem and in the land of Judea, wish unto the brethren, the Jews that are throughout Egypt, health and peace:

2 God be gracious unto you, and remember his covenant that he made with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, his faithful servants;

3 And give you all an heart to serve him, and to do his will, with a good courage and a willing mind;

4 And open your hearts in his law and commandments, and send you peace,

5 And hear your prayers, and be at one with you, and never forsake you in time of trouble.

6 And now we be here praying for you.

about 144. 7 What time as Demetrius reigned, in the hundred threescore and ninth year, we the Jews wrote unto you in the extremity of trouble that came upon us in those years, from the time that Jason and his company revolted from the holy land and kingdom,

8 And burned the porch, and shed innocent blood: then we prayed unto the Lord, and were heard; we offered also sacrifices and fine flour, and lighted the lamps, and set forth the loaves.

9 And now see that ye keep the feast of [a] tabernacles in the month Casleu.

[a] Lev. 23. 34.

10 In the hundred fourscore and eighth year, the people that were at Jerusalem and in Judea, and the council, and Judas, sent greeting and health unto Aristobulus, king Ptolemeus' master, who was of the stock of the anointed priests, and to the Jews that were in Egypt:

11 Insomuch as God hath delivered us from great perils, we thank him highly, as having been in battle against a king.

12 For he cast them out that fought within the holy city.

13 For when the leader was come into Persia, and the army with him that seemed invincible, they were slain in the temple of Nanea by the deceit of Nanea's priests.

14 For Antiochus, as though he would marry her, came into the place, and his friends that were with him, to receive money in name of a dowry.

15 Which when the priests of Nanea had set forth, and he was entered with a small company into the compass of the temple, they shut the temple as soon as Antiochus was come in:

16 And opening a privy door of the roof, they threw stones like thunderbolts, and struck down the captain, hewed them in pieces, smote off their heads, and cast them to those that were without.

17 Blessed be our God in all things, who hath delivered up the ungodly.

18 Therefore whereas we are now purposed to keep the purification of the temple upon the five and twentieth day of the month [b] Casleu, we thought it necessary to certify you thereof, that ye also might keep it, as the feast of the tabernacles, and of the fire, which was given us when Neemias offered sacrifice, after that he had builded the temple and the altar.

[b] Lev. 24. Numb. 28.

19 For when our fathers were led into Persia, the priests that were then devout took the fire of the altar privily, and hid it in an hollow place of a pit without water, where they kept it sure, so that the place was unknown to all men.

20 Now after many years, when it pleased God, Neemias, being sent from the king of Persia, did send of the posterity of those priests that had hid it to the fire: but when they told us they found no fire, but thick water;

21 Then commanded he them to draw it up, and to bring it; and when the sacri-

Chap. I. ver. 1. The brethren, the Jews &c.] From hence to the end of the sixth verse is nothing more than a preliminary salutation. The epistle begins at the seventh verse and ends with the ninth. The purport of it is to exhort the Jews of Alexandria and Egypt to observe the feast of the dedication of the new altar erected by Judas when he purified the temple, 1 Macc. iv. 59. Grotius, Dean Prideaux.

9. — the feast of tabernacles] This appellation is improper. What is meant is the feast of the dedication: during which solemnity although they might carry some winter greens in their hands, to express their rejoicing, yet they could not make such booths as in the feast of tabernacles, because the month Casleu fell in the winter. Dean Prideaux.

10. In the hundred fourscore and eighth year, &c.] The second epistle begins here, and ends with the eighteenth verse of the second chapter. It is not only written in the name of Judas Maccabeus, who was slain six and thirty years before the date which it bears, but its contents also are so fabulous and absurd, that it never could have been written by the great council of Jews assembled at Jerusalem for the whole nation, as it pretends to be. Dean Prideaux, Stackhouse.

—— king Ptolemeus' master,] Namely, in the studies of philosophy. Grotius.

11. — against a king.] Antiochus Epiphanes.

13. — the temple of Nanea.] Who this Nanea was, the learned are not agreed: some take her for Venus, others for Cybele, others for Diana. The manner in which Antiochus was disappointed is related very differently here from the account in 1 Macc. vi. 1, &c. Stackhouse.

18. — Neemias] Or, Nehemiah.

fices were laid on, Neemias commanded the priests to sprinkle the wood and the things laid thereupon with the water.

22 When this was done, and the time came that the sun shone, which afore was hid in the cloud, there was a great fire kindled, so that every man marvelled.

23 And the priests made a prayer whilst the sacrifice was consuming, I say, both the priests, and all the rest, Jonathan beginning, and the rest answering thereunto, as Neemias did.

24 And the prayer was after this manner; O Lord, Lord God, Creator of all things, who art fearful and strong, and righteous, and merciful, and the only and gracious King,

25 The only giver of all things, the only just, almighty, and everlasting, thou that deliverest Israel from all trouble, and didst choose the fathers, and sanctify them:

26 Receive the sacrifice for thy whole people Israel, and preserve thine own portion, and sanctify it.

27 Gather those together that are scattered from us, deliver them that serve among the heathen, look upon them that are despised and abhorred, and let the heathen know that thou art our God.

28 Punish them that oppress us, and with pride do us wrong.

29 Plant thy people again in thy holy place, as Moses hath spoken.

30 And the priests sung psalms of thanksgiving.

31 Now when the sacrifice was consumed, Neemias commanded the water that was left to be poured on the great stones.

32 When this was done, there was kindled a flame: but it was consumed by the light that shined from the altar.

33 So when this matter was known, it was told the king of Persia, that in the place, where the priests that were led away had hid the fire, there appeared water, and that ‖ Neemias had purified the sacrifices therewith.

‖ Or, Neemias his company.

34 Then the king, inclosing the place, made it holy, after he had tried the matter.

35 And the king took many gifts, and bestowed thereof on those whom he would gratify.

36 And Neemias called this thing Naphthar, which is as much as to say, a cleansing: but many men call it Nephi.

CHAP. II.

1 What Jeremy the prophet did. 5 How he hid the tabernacle, the ark, and the altar. 13 What Neemias and Judas wrote. 20 What Jason wrote in five books: 25 and how those were abridged by the author of this book.

IT is also found in the records, that Jeremy the prophet commanded them that were carried away to take of the fire, as it hath been signified:

2 And how that the prophet, having given them the law, charged them not to forget the commandments of the Lord, and that they should not err in their minds, when they see images of silver and gold, with their ornaments.

3 And with other such speeches exhorted he them, that the law should not depart from their hearts.

4 It was also contained in the same writing, that the prophet, being warned of God, commanded the tabernacle and the ark to go with him, as he went forth into the mountain, where Moses climbed up, and saw the heritage of God.

5 And when Jeremy came thither, he found an hollow cave, wherein he laid the tabernacle, and the ark, and the altar of incense, and so stopped the door.

6 And some of those that followed him came to mark the way, but they could not find it.

7 Which when Jeremy perceived, he blamed them, saying, As for that place, it shall be unknown until the time that God gather his people again together, and receive them unto mercy.

8 Then shall the Lord shew them these things, and the glory of the Lord shall appear, and the cloud also, as it was shewed under Moses, and as when Solomon desired that the place might be honourably sanctified.

9 It was also declared, that he being wise offered the sacrifice of dedication, and of the finishing of the temple.

10 And as when Moses prayed unto the Lord, the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the sacrifices: even so prayed Solomon also, and the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offerings.

11 And Moses said, Because the sin offering was not to be eaten, it was consumed.

12 So Solomon kept those eight days.

13 The same things also were reported in the writings and commentaries of Neemias; and how he founding a library gathered together the acts of the kings, and the prophets, and of David, and the epistles of the kings concerning the holy gifts.

14 In like manner also Judas gathered together all those things that were lost by reason of the war we had, and they remain with us.

15 Wherefore if ye have need thereof, send some to fetch them unto you.

16 Whereas we then are about to celebrate the purification, we have written unto you, and ye shall do well, if ye keep the same days.

† Gr. Now God it is that saved all his people, and rendered the heritage, and the kingdom, and the priesthood, and the sanctuary, as he promised in the laws: for we hope in God that he will shortly, &c.

17 † We hope also, that the God, that delivered all his people, and gave them all an heritage, and the kingdom, and the priesthood, and the sanctuary,

18 As he promised in the law, will shortly have mercy upon us, and gather us together out of every land under heaven into the holy place: for he hath delivered us out of great troubles, and hath purified the place.

19 Now as concerning Judas Maccabeus, and his brethren, and the purification of the great temple, and the dedication of the altar,

20 And the wars against Antiochus Epiphanes, and Eupator his son,

21 And the manifest signs that came from heaven unto those that behaved themselves manfully to their honour for Judaism: so that, being but a few, they overcame the whole country, and chased barbarous multitudes,

22 And recovered again the temple renowned all the world over, and freed the city, and upheld the laws which were going down, the Lord being gracious unto them with all favour:

23 All these things, I say, being declared by Jason of Cyrene in five books, we will assay to abridge in one volume.

24 For considering the infinite number, and the difficulty which they find that desire to look into the narrations of the story, for the variety of the matter,

25 We have been careful, that they that will read may have delight, and that they that are desirous to commit to memory might have ease, and that all into whose hands it comes might have profit.

26 Therefore to us, that have taken upon us this painful labour of abridging, it was not easy, but a matter of sweat and watching;

27 Even as it is no ease unto him that prepareth a banquet, and seeketh the benefit of others: yet ‖ for the pleasuring of many we will undertake gladly this great pains;

‖ Or, to desire well of many.

28 Leaving to the author the exact handling of every particular, and labouring to follow the rules of an abridgment.

29 For as the master builder of a new house must care for the whole building; but he that undertaketh to set it out, and paint it, must seek out fit things for the adorning thereof: even so I think it is with us.

30 To stand upon every point, and go over things at large, and to be curious in particulars, belongeth to the first author of the story:

31 But to use brevity, and avoid much labouring of the work, is to be granted to him that will make an abridgment.

32 Here then will we begin the story: only adding thus much to that which hath been said, that it is a foolish thing to make a long prologue, and to be short in the story itself.

CHAP. III.

1 Of the honour done to the temple by the kings of the Gentiles. 4 Simon uttereth what treasures are in the temple. 7 Heliodorus is sent to take them away. 24 He is stricken of God, and healed at the prayer of Onias.

NOW when the holy city was inhabited with all peace, and the laws were kept very well, because of the godliness of Onias the high priest, and his hatred of wickedness, about 187

2 It came to pass that even the kings themselves did honour the place, and magnify the temple with their best gifts;

3 Insomuch that Seleucus king of Asia of his own revenues bare all the costs belonging to the service of the sacrifices.

4 But one Simon of the tribe of Benjamin, who was made governor of the temple, fell out with the high priest about disorder in the city.

5 And when he could not overcome Onias, he gat him to Apollonius the son of Thraseas, who then was governor of Celosyria and Phenice,

6 And told him that the treasury in Jerusalem was full of infinite sums of money, so that the multitude of their riches, which

Before CHRIST about 187. did not pertain to the account of the sacrifices, was innumerable, and that it was possible to bring all into the king's hand.

7 Now when Apollonius came to the king, and had shewed him of the money whereof he was told, the king chose out Heliodorus his treasurer, and sent him with a commandment to bring him the foresaid money.

8 So forthwith Heliodorus took his journey, under a colour of visiting the cities of Celosyria and Phenice, but indeed to fulfil the king's purpose.

9 And when he was come to Jerusalem, and had been courteously received of the high priest of the city, he told him what intelligence was given of the money, and declared wherefore he came, and asked if these things were so indeed.

10 Then the high priest told him that there was such money laid up for the relief of widows and fatherless children:

11 And that some of it belonged to Hircanus son of Tobias, a man of great dignity, and not as that wicked Simon had misinformed: the sum whereof in all was four hundred talents of silver, and two hundred of gold:

12 And that it was altogether impossible that such wrongs should be done unto them, that had committed it to the holiness of the place, and to the majesty and inviolable sanctity of the temple, honoured over all the world.

13 But Heliodorus, because of the king's commandment given him, said, That in any wise it must be brought into the king's treasury.

14 So at the day which he appointed he entered in to order this matter: wherefore there was no small agony throughout the whole city.

15 But the priests, prostrating themselves before the altar in their priests' vestments, called unto heaven upon him that made a law concerning things given to be kept, that they should safely be preserved for such as had committed them to be kept.

16 Then whoso had looked the high priest in the face, it would have wounded his heart: for his countenance and the changing of his colour declared the inward agony of his mind. Before CHRIST about 187.

17 For the man was so compassed with fear and horror of the body, that it was manifest to them that looked upon him, what sorrow he had now in his heart.

18 Others ran flocking out of their houses ‖ to the general supplication, because the place was like to come into contempt. ‖ Or, in make general supplication.

19 And the women, girt with sackcloth under their breasts, abounded in the streets, and the virgins that were kept in ran, some to the gates, and some to the walls, and others looked out of the windows.

20 And all, holding their hands toward heaven, made supplication.

21 Then it would have pitied a man to see the falling down of the multitude of all sorts, and the † fear of the high priest, being in such an agony. † Gr. expectation.

22 They then called upon the Almighty Lord to keep the things committed of trust safe and sure for those that had committed them.

23 Nevertheless Heliodorus executed that which was decreed.

24 Now as he was there present himself with his guard about the treasury, the ‖ Lord of spirits, and the Prince of all power, caused a great apparition, so that all that presumed to come in with him were astonished at the power of God, and fainted, and were sore afraid. ‖ Or, Lord of our fathers.

25 For there appeared unto them an horse with a terrible rider upon him, and adorned with a very fair covering, and he ran fiercely, and smote at Heliodorus with his forefeet, and it seemed that he that sat upon the horse had complete harness of gold.

26 Moreover two other young men appeared before him, notable in strength, excellent in beauty, and comely in apparel, who stood by him on either side, and scourged him continually, and gave him many sore stripes.

27 And Heliodorus fell suddenly unto the ground, and was compassed with great darkness: but they that were with him took him up, and put him into a litter.

28 Thus him, that lately came with a

However improbable these accounts may appear, in which God is described to have vindicated the insulted sanctity of His temple, and to have discountenanced the adversaries of His people, by apparitions and angelical visions; it is certain that many philosophical and judicious writers, such as Cicero and others, have maintained the reality of similar appearances; and that the popular belief in such apparitions may without credulity be supposed to have originated in the miraculous interpositions, which were sometimes displayed in behalf of the Jewish people. See Josh. v. 13. Dr. Gray.

29 For he by the hand of God was cast down, and lay speechless without all hope of life.

30 But they praised the Lord, that had miraculously honoured his own place: for the temple, which a little afore was full of fear and trouble, when the Almighty Lord appeared, was filled with joy and gladness.

31 Then straightways certain of Heliodorus' friends prayed Onias, that he would call upon the most High to grant him his life, who lay ready to give up the ghost.

32 So the high priest, suspecting lest the king should misconceive that some treachery had been done to Heliodorus by the Jews, offered a sacrifice for the health of the man.

33 Now as the high priest was making an atonement, the same young men in the same clothing appeared and stood beside Heliodorus, saying, Give Onias the high priest great thanks, insomuch as for his sake the Lord hath granted thee life:

34 And seeing that thou hast been scourged from heaven, declare unto all men the mighty power of God. And when they had spoken these words, they appeared no more.

35 So Heliodorus, after he had offered sacrifice unto the Lord, and made great vows unto him that had saved his life, and saluted Onias, returned with his host to the king.

36 Then testified he to all men the works of the great God, which he had seen with his eyes.

37 And when the king asked Heliodorus, who might be a fit man to be sent yet once again to Jerusalem, he said,

38 If thou hast any enemy or traitor, send him thither, and thou shalt receive him well scourged, if he escape with his life: for in that place, no doubt, there is an especial power of God.

39 For he that dwelleth in heaven hath his eye on that place, and defendeth it; and he beateth and destroyeth them that come to hurt it.

40 And the things concerning Heliodorus, and the keeping of the treasury, fell out on this sort. Before CHRIST about 187.

CHAP. IV.

1 Simon slandereth Onias. 7 Jason, by corrupting the king, obtaineth the office of the high priest. 24 Menelaus getteth the same from Jason by the like corruption. 34 Andronicus traitorously murdereth Onias. 38 The king being informed thereof, causeth Andronicus to be put to death. 39 The wickedness of Lysimachus, by the instigation of Menelaus.

THIS Simon now, of whom we spake afore, having been a bewrayer of the money, and of his country, slandered Onias, as if he had terrified Heliodorus, and been the worker of these evils.

2 Thus was he bold to call him a traitor, that had deserved well of the city, and tendered his own nation, and was so zealous of the laws.

3 But when their hatred went so far, that by one of Simon's faction murders were committed,

4 Onias seeing the danger of this contention, and that Apollonius, as being the governor of Celosyria and Phenice, did rage, and increase Simon's malice,

5 He went to the king, not to be an accuser of his countrymen, but seeking the good of all, both publick and private:

6 For he saw that it was impossible that the state should continue quiet, and Simon leave his folly, unless the king did look thereunto.

7 But after the death of Seleucus, about when Antiochus, called Epiphanes, took the kingdom, Jason the brother of Onias laboured underhand to be high priest,

8 Promising unto the king by intercession three hundred and threescore talents of silver, and of another revenue eighty talents:

9 Beside this, he promised to assign an hundred and fifty more, if he might have licence to set him up a place for exercise, and for the training up of youth in the fashions of the heathen, and to write them of Jerusalem by the name of Antiochians.

10 Which when the king had granted, and he had gotten into his hand the rule, he forthwith brought his own nation to the Greekish fashion.

11 And the royal privileges granted of 12 For he built gladly a place of exercise under the tower itself, and brought the chief young men under his subjection, and made them wear a hat.

13 Now such was the height of Greek fashions, and increase of heathenish manners, through the exceeding profaneness of Jason, that ungodly wretch, and no high priest;

14 That the priests had no courage to serve any more at the altar, but despising the temple, and neglecting the sacrifices, hastened to be partakers of the unlawful allowance in the place of exercise, after the game of ‖ Discus called them forth;

‖ Or, the Discus, which was a stone with an hole in the middst.

15 Not setting by the honours of their fathers, but liking the glory of the Grecians best of all.

16 By reason whereof sore calamity came upon them: for they had them to be their enemies and avengers, whose custom they followed so earnestly, and unto whom they desired to be like in all things.

17 For it is not a light thing to do wickedly against the laws of God: but the time following shall declare these things.

18 Now when the game that was used every fifth year was kept at Tyrus, the king being present,

Before CHRIST about 174.

19 This ungracious Jason sent ‖ special messengers from Jerusalem, who were Antiochians, to carry three hundred drachms of silver to the sacrifice of Hercules, which even the bearers thereof thought fit not to bestow upon the sacrifice, because it was not convenient, but to be reserved for other charges.

20 This money then, in regard of the sender, was appointed to Hercules' sacrifice; but because of the bearers thereof, it was employed to the making of gallies.

13. — through the exceeding profaneness of Jason,] It appears from Josephus, that his original name was Jesus: but when he went over to the ways of the Greeks he took also a Greek name, and called himself Jason; and having thus given himself up to the heathen superstition, he laid hold of all opportunities of distinguishing himself by expressions of his zeal for it. Dean Prideaux.

14. — the game of Discus] Casting the Discus, or quoit, which was a round stone or iron with a hole in the middle, was a game much in use amongst the Greeks. Badwell.

16. By reason whereof sore calamity came upon them:] Hence was propagated among the Jews that iniquity, which drew after it for its punishment one of the greatest calamities, next to the two terrible destructions executed upon their temple and country by Nebuchadnezzar and Titus, that ever befell that nation. Of all which mischief the ambition of this wicked man Jason was the original cause: for sacrificing to it his religion and his country, he betrayed both to procure his own advancement. Dean Prideaux.

17. — the time following] That is, the history of the times which followed these things. Grotius.

18. — the game that was used every fifth year] Among the Greeks the most celebrated games were the Olympick, called quinquennial, because they were held every fifth year. In imitation of these games, others were instituted at different places, as at Alexandria and at Athens; and amongst them, these at Tyre. Grotius, Dean Prideaux.

19. — to the sacrifice of Hercules,] So called according to the style of the Greeks. His name among the Tyrians was Melcarthus, signifying king or lord of the city. The Greeks, from some similitude between the worship of this god at Tyre, and that of Hercules in Greece, called this Tyrian god Hercules. This seems to be the same with the Baal of the Holy Scriptures, whose worship Jezebel brought from Tyre into the land of Israel. Dean Prideaux.

—— because it was not convenient,] Being afraid of involving themselves in the guilt of this idolatry. Dean Prideaux.

21. Now when Apollonius &c.] Antiochus sent Apollonius, one of his principal nobles, into Egypt, with the pretence of congratulating the young king on his being enthroned; but really in order to discover the intentions of the Egyptian court with respect to Cœle-Syria and Palestine. Finding these intentions to be hostile, he came by sea to Joppa, in order to take a view of the frontiers towards Egypt, and to put them in a state of defence. In this progress he came to Jerusalem. Dean Prideaux.

23. — Menelaus, the aforesaid Simon's brother,] That is, Simon the Benjamite, chap. iii. 4. But this could not be, for none but such as were of the family of Aaron were capable of the high priesthood. Josephus therefore is more to be credited, who tells us that he was the brother of Onias and Jason, and the son of Simon the second of that name, high priest of the Jews, and that he was the third of Simon's sons who held the office. His name at first was Onias, as was that of his eldest brother: but in imitation of Jason he also took a Greek name, and called himself Menelaus. His father and his eldest brother were both of them holy and good men: but he chose rather to imitate the example of

Before CHRIST about 172. 24 But he being brought to the presence of the king, when he had magnified him for the glorious appearance of his power, got the priesthood to himself, offering more than Jason by three hundred talents of silver.

25 So he came with the king's mandate, bringing nothing worthy the high priesthood, but having the fury of a cruel tyrant, and the rage of a savage beast.

26 Then Jason, who had undermined his own brother, being undermined by another, was compelled to flee into the country of the Ammonites.

about 171. 27 So Menelaus got the principality: but as for the money that he had promised unto the king, he took no good order for it, albeit Sostratus the ruler of the castle required it:

28 For unto him appertained the gathering of the customs. Wherefore they were both called before the king.

29 Now Menelaus left his brother Lysimachus in his stead in the priesthood; and Sostratus left Crates, who was governor of the Cyprians.

30 While those things were in doing, they of Tarsus and Mallos made insurrection, because they were given to the king's concubine, called Antiochis.

31 Then came the king in all haste to appease matters, leaving Andronicus, a man in authority, for his deputy.

32 Now Menelaus, supposing that he had gotten a convenient time, stole certain vessels of gold out of the temple, and gave some of them to Andronicus, and some he sold into Tyrus and the cities round about.

33 Which when Onias knew of a surety, he reproved him, and withdrew himself into a sanctuary at Daphne, that lieth by Antiochia.

34 Wherefore Menelaus, taking Andronicus apart, prayed him to get Onias into his hands; who being persuaded thereunto, and coming to Onias in deceit, gave him his right hand with oaths; and though he were suspected by him, yet persuaded he him to come forth of the sanctuary: whom forthwith he shut up without regard of justice. Before CHRIST about 171

35 For the which cause not only the Jews, but many also of other nations, took great indignation, and were much grieved for the unjust murder of the man.

36 And when the king was come again from the places about Cilicia, the Jews that were in the city, and certain of the Greeks that abhorred the fact also, complained because Onias was slain without cause.

37 Therefore Antiochus was heartily sorry, and moved to pity, and wept, because of the sober and modest behaviour of him that was dead.

38 And being kindled with anger, forthwith he took away Andronicus his purple, and rent off his clothes, and leading him through the whole city unto that very place, where he had committed impiety against Onias, there slew he the cursed murderer. Thus the Lord rewarded him his punishment, as he had deserved. about 171

39 Now when many sacrileges had been committed in the city by Lysimachus with the consent of Menelaus, and the bruit thereof was spread abroad, the multitude gathered themselves together against Lysimachus, many vessels of gold being already carried away. about 170

wicked Jason than theirs; for he followed him in all his ways of fraud, wickedness, and apostasy, and outdid him in each of them. Jason's being supplanted by him in the same manner as he supplanted Onias, was a just retaliation of Providence: but Menelaus was a more wicked instrument herein even than the other; for he practised this fraud against Jason while he was in his confidence, and had from him the character of his ambassadour, and by virtue of that character procured that access to the king whereby he effected his purpose. Dean Prideaux.

25. — bringing nothing worthy the high priesthood,] Gentleness is most becoming a priest. Heb. v. 2; for he bears the image of the Divine goodness. Grotius.

30. — because they were given to the king's concubine,] Those kings were accustomed to give whole towns, that is, the revenues of them, to persons whom they greatly esteemed. Thus Magnesia, Lampascus, Myus, &c. were given by the Persian king to Themistocles. It seems that the inhabitants of Tarsus and Mallos, two considerable cities in Cilicia, were indignant at becoming the property of the king's concubine. Grotius.

32. — stole certain vessels of gold out of the temple,] By means of Lysimachus, whom he had left his deputy at Jerusalem. By selling these he raised money enough to pay the king, and also to bribe Andronicus and other courtiers to procure favour for him. Dean Prideaux.

34. — whom forthwith he shut up] That is, having seized and shut him up, he murdered him. Bedwell.

Before CHRIST about 170. 42 Thus many of them they wounded, and some they struck to the ground, and all of them they forced to flee: but as for the churchrobber himself, him they killed beside the treasury.

43 Of these matters therefore there was an accusation laid against Menelaus.

44 Now when the king came to Tyrus, three men that were sent from the senate pleaded the cause before him:

45 But Menelaus, being now convicted, promised Ptolemee the son of Dorymenes, to give him much money, if he would pacify the king toward him.

46 Whereupon Ptolemee taking the king aside into a certain gallery, as it were to take the air, brought him to be of another mind:

47 Insomuch that he discharged Menelaus from the accusations, who notwithstanding was cause of all the mischief: and those poor men, who, if they had told their cause, yea, before the Scythians, should have been judged innocent, them he condemned to death.

48 Thus they that followed the matter for the city, and for the people, and for the holy vessels, did soon suffer unjust punishment.

49 Wherefore even they of Tyrus, moved with hatred of that wicked deed, caused them to be honourably buried.

50 And so through the covetousness of them that were of power Menelaus remained still in authority, increasing in malice, and being a great traitor to the citizens.

2 Of the signs and tokens seen in Jerusalem. 6 Of the end and wickedness of Jason. 11 The pursuit of Antiochus against the Jews. 15 The spoiling of the temple. 27 Maccabeus fleeth into the wilderness.

about 170. ABOUT the same time Antiochus prepared his second voyage into Egypt:

2 And then it happened, that through all the city, for the space almost of forty days, there were seen horsemen running in the air, in cloth of gold, and armed with lances, like a band of soldiers,

3 And troops of horsemen in array, encountering and running one against another, with shaking of shields, and multitude of ‖ pikes, and drawing of swords, and casting of darts, and glittering of golden ornaments, and harness of all sorts.

Before CHRIST about 170. ‖ Or, staves.

4 Wherefore every man prayed that that apparition might turn to good.

5 Now when there was gone forth a false rumour, as though Antiochus had been dead, Jason took at the least a thousand men, and suddenly made an assault upon the city; and they that were upon the walls being put back, and the city at length taken, Menelaus fled into the castle:

6 But Jason slew his own citizens without mercy, not considering that to get the day of them of his own nation would be a most unhappy day for him; but thinking they had been his enemies, and not his countrymen, whom he conquered.

7 Howbeit for all this he obtained not the principality, but at the last received shame for the reward of his treason, and fled again into the country of the Ammonites.

8 In the end therefore he had an unhappy return, being accused before Aretas the king of the Arabians, fleeing from city to city, pursued of all men, hated as a forsaker of the laws, and being had in abomination as an open ‖ enemy of his country and countrymen, he was cast out into Egypt.

‖ Or, executioner.

9 Thus he that had driven many out of their country perished in a strange land, retiring to the Lacedemonians, and thinking there to find succour by reason of his kindred:

10 And he that had cast out many unburied had none to mourn for him, nor any solemn funerals at all, nor sepulchre with his fathers.

11 Now when this that was done came to the king's ear, he thought that Judea had revolted: whereupon removing out of Egypt in a furious mind, he took the city by force of arms,

12 And commanded his men of war not to spare such as they met, and to slay such as went up upon the houses.

Chap. V. ver. 2. — there were seen horsemen &c.] Foreboding those calamities of war and desolation, which soon after happened to the city and nation. These phenomena, wonderful as they may appear, carry with them great marks of probability. They are related by an author, who was contemporary, or very near contemporary, with them. They were seen, not transiently, and by a few weak superstitious people; but for forty days together they appeared to the view of a whole city, wherein were above a hundred thousand inhabitants, most of sound intellects, and some of them of so little superstition, as to abandon the laws and customs of their country for fear of persecution. The like were seen before the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans; as Josephus tells us, who lived at that time, and attests it to have been vouched to him by such as had been eye-witnesses of the same. Stackhouse, Dean Prideaux.

Before CHRIST about 170.

13 Thus there was killing of young and old, making away of men, women, and children, slaying of virgins and infants.

14 And there were destroyed within the space of three whole days fourscore thousand, whereof forty thousand were slain in the conflict; and no fewer sold than slain.

15 Yet was he not content with this, but presumed to go into the most holy temple of all the world; Menelaus, that traitor to the laws, and to his own country, being his guide:

16 And taking the holy vessels with polluted hands, and with profane hands pulling down the things that were dedicated by other kings to the augmentation and glory and honour of the place, he gave them away.

17 And so haughty was Antiochus in mind, that he considered not that the Lord was angry for a while for the sins of them that dwelt in the city, and therefore his eye was not upon the place.

18 For had they not been formerly wrapped in many sins, this man, as soon as he had come, had forthwith been scourged, and put back from his presumption, as Heliodorus was, whom Seleucus the king sent to view the treasury.

19 Nevertheless God did not choose the people for the place's sake, but the place for the people's sake.

20 And therefore the place itself, that was partaker with them of the adversity that happened to the nation, did afterward communicate in the benefits sent from the Lord: and as it was forsaken in the wrath of the Almighty, so again, the great Lord being reconciled, it was set up with all glory.

21 So when Antiochus had carried out of the temple a thousand and eight hundred talents, he departed in all haste unto Antiochia, weening in his pride to make the land navigable, and the sea passable by foot: such was the haughtiness of his mind.

22 And he left governors to vex the nation: at Jerusalem, Philip, for his country a Phrygian, and for manners more barbarous than he that set him there;

23 And at Garizim, Andronicus; and besides, Menelaus, who worse than all the rest bare an heavy hand over the citizens, having a malicious mind against his countrymen the Jews. Before CHRIST about 170.

24 He sent also that detestable ringleader Apollonius with an army of two and twenty thousand, commanding him to slay all those that were in their best age, and to sell the women and the younger sort: about 171

25 Who coming to Jerusalem, and pretending peace, did forbear till the holy day of the sabbath, when taking the Jews keeping holy day, he commanded his men to arm themselves.

26 And so he slew all them that were gone to the celebrating of the sabbath, and running through the city with weapons slew great multitudes.

27 But Judas Maccabeus † with nine others, or thereabout, withdrew himself into the wilderness, and lived in the mountains after the manner of beasts, with his company, who fed on herbs continually, lest they should be partakers of the pollution. † Or, who as the 10th.

3 The coming in of this mischief was sore and grievous to the people:

4 For the temple was filled with riot and revelling by the Gentiles, who dallied with harlots, and had to do with women within the circuit of the holy places, and besides that brought in things that were not lawful.

5 The altar also was filled with profane things, which the law forbiddeth.

Before CHRIST about 168. 6 Neither was it lawful for a man to keep sabbath days or ancient feasts, or to profess himself at all to be a Jew.

7 And in the day of the king's birth every month they were brought by bitter constraint to eat of the sacrifices; and when the feast of Bacchus was kept, the Jews were compelled to go in procession to Bacchus, carrying ivy.

8 Moreover there went out a decree to † Gr. Grecians. the neighbour cities of the †heathen, by the suggestion of Ptolemee, against the Jews, that they should observe the same fashions, and be partakers of their sacrifices:

9 And whoso would not conform themselves to the manners of the Gentiles should be put to death. Then might a man have seen the present misery.

10 For there were two women brought, who had circumcised their children; whom when they had openly led round about the city, the babes hanging at their breasts, they cast them down headlong from the wall.

11 And others, that had run together into caves near by, to keep the sabbath day secretly, being discovered to Philip, were all burnt together, because they made a conscience to help themselves for the honour of the most sacred day.

12 Now I beseech those that read this book, that they be not discouraged for these calamities, but that they judge those punishments not to be for destruction, but for a chastening of our nation.

13 For it is a token of his great goodness, when wicked doers are not suffered any long time, but forthwith punished.

14 For not as with other nations, whom the Lord patiently forbeareth to punish, till they be come to the fulness of their sins, so dealeth he with us,

15 Lest that, being come to the height of sin, afterwards he should take vengeance of us.

16 And therefore he never withdraweth his mercy from us: and though he punish with adversity, yet doth he never forsake his people.

about 167. 17 But let this that we have spoken be for a warning unto us. And now will we come to the declaring of the matter in few words.

Before CHRIST about 167.

18 Eleazar, one of the principal scribes, an aged man, and of a well favoured countenance, was constrained to open his mouth, and to eat swine's flesh.

19 But he, choosing rather to die gloriously, than to live stained with such an abomination, spit it forth, and came of his own accord to the torment,

20 As it behoved them to come, that are resolute to stand out against such things, as are not lawful for love of life to be tasted.

21 But they that had the charge of that wicked feast, for the old acquaintance they had with the man, taking him aside, besought him to bring flesh of his own provision, such as was lawful for him to use, and make as if he did eat of the flesh taken from the sacrifice commanded by the king;

22 That in so doing he might be delivered from death, and for the old friendship with them find favour.

23 But he began to consider discreetly, and as became his age, and the excellency of his ancient years, and the honour of his gray head, whereunto he was come, and his most honest education from a child, or rather the holy law made and given by God: therefore he answered accordingly, and willed them straightways to send him to the grave.

24 For it becometh not our age, said he, in any wise to dissemble, whereby many young persons might think that Eleazar, being fourscore years old and ten, were now gone to a strange religion;

25 And so they through mine hypocrisy, and desire to live a little time and a moment longer, should be deceived by me, and I get a stain to mine old age, and make it abominable.

26 For though for the present time I should be delivered from the punishment of men: yet should I not escape the hand of the Almighty, neither alive, nor dead.

27 Wherefore now, manfully changing this life, I will shew myself such an one as mine age requireth,

28 And leave a notable example to such as be young to die willingly and courage-

29 They that led him changing the good will they bare him a little before into hatred, because the foresaid speeches proceeded, as they thought, from ‖ a desperate mind.

‖ Or, madness, or, pride.

30 But when he was ready to die with stripes, he groaned, and said, It is manifest unto the Lord, that hath the holy knowledge, that whereas I might have been delivered from death, I now endure sore pains in body by being beaten: but in soul am well content to suffer these things, because I fear him.

31 And thus this man died, leaving his death for an example of a noble courage, and a memorial of virtue, not only unto young men, but unto all his nation.

CHAP. VII.

The constancy and cruel death of seven brethren and their mother in one day, because they would not eat swine's flesh at the king's commandment.

IT came to pass also, that seven brethren with their mother were taken, and compelled by the king against the law to taste swine's flesh, and were tormented with scourges and whips.

2 But one of them that spake first said thus, What wouldest thou ask or learn of us? we are ready to die, rather than to transgress the laws of our fathers.

3 Then the king, being in a rage, commanded pans and caldrons to be made hot:

4 Which forthwith being heated, he commanded to cut out the tongue of him that spake first, and to cut off the utmost parts of his body, the rest of his brethren and his mother looking on.

5 Now when he was thus maimed in all his members, he commanded him being yet alive to be brought to the fire, and to be fried in the pan: and as the vapour of the pan was for a good space dispersed, they exhorted one another with the mother to die manfully, saying thus,

6 The Lord God looketh upon us, and in truth hath comfort in us, as [a] Moses in his song, which witnessed to their faces, declared, saying, And he shall be comforted in his servants.

[a] Deut. 32. 36.

7 So when the first was dead after this manner, they brought the second to make him a mocking stock: and when they had pulled off the skin of his head with the hair, they asked him, Wilt thou eat, before thou be punished throughout every member of thy body?

Before CHRIST about 167.

8 But he answered in his own language, and said, No. Wherefore he also received the next torment in order, as the former did.

9 And when he was at the last gasp, he said, Thou like a fury takest us out of this present life, but the King of the world shall raise us up, who have died for his laws, unto everlasting life.

10 After him was the third made a mocking stock: and when he was required, he put out his tongue, and that right soon, holding forth his hands manfully,

11 And said courageously, These I had from heaven; and for his laws I despise them; and from him I hope to receive them again.

12 Insomuch that the king, and they that were with him, marvelled at the young man's courage, for that he nothing regarded the pains.

13 Now when this man was dead also, they tormented and mangled the fourth in like manner.

14 So when he was ready to die he said thus, It is good, being put to death by men, to look for hope from God to be raised up again by him: as for thee, thou shalt have no resurrection to life.

15 Afterward they brought the fifth also, and mangled him.

16 Then looked he unto the king, and said, Thou hast power over men, thou art corruptible, thou doest what thou wilt; yet think not that our nation is forsaken of God;

17 But abide a while, and behold his great power, how he will torment thee and thy seed.

18 After him also they brought the sixth, who being ready to die said, Be not deceived without cause: for we suffer these things for ourselves, having sinned against our God: therefore marvellous things are done unto us.

19 But think not thou, that takest in

31. And thus this man died, &c.] Eleazar deserved all the commendations which the Fathers have given him. For whether we consider the purity of his sentiments, or the sublimity of his doctrine, or the integrity of his conscience, we must acknowledge that there are few saints in the Old Testament that have given us a more exact pattern of charity, sincerity, and magnanimity. Stackhouse.

hand to strive against God, that thou shalt escape unpunished.

20 But the mother was marvellous above all, and worthy of honourable memory: for when she saw her seven sons slain within the space of one day, she bare it with a good courage, because of the hope that she had in the Lord.

21 Yea, she exhorted every one of them in her own language, filled with courageous spirits; and stirring up her womanish thoughts with a manly stomach, she said unto them,

22 I cannot tell how ye came into my womb; for I neither gave you breath nor life, neither was it I that formed the members of every one of you;

23 But doubtless the Creator of the world, who formed the generation of man, and found out the beginning of all things, will also of his own mercy give you breath and life again, as ye now regard not your own selves for his laws' sake.

24 Now Antiochus, thinking himself despised, and suspecting it to be a reproachful speech, whilst the youngest was yet alive, did not only exhort him by words, but also assured him with oaths, that he would make him both a rich and a happy man, if he would turn from the laws of his fathers; and that also he would take him for his friend, and trust him with affairs.

25 But when the young man would in no case hearken unto him, the king called his mother, and exhorted her that she would counsel the young man to save his life.

26 And when he had exhorted her with many words, she promised him that she would counsel her son.

27 But she bowing herself toward him, laughing the cruel tyrant to scorn, spake in her country language on this manner; O my son, have pity upon me that bare thee nine months in my womb, and gave thee suck three years, and nourished thee, and brought thee up unto this age, and endured the troubles of education.

28 I beseech thee, my son, look upon the heaven and the earth, and all that is therein, and consider that God made them of things that were not; and so was mankind made likewise.

29 Fear not this tormentor, but, being worthy of thy brethren, take thy death, that I may receive thee again in mercy with thy brethren.

Before CHRIST about 167.

30 Whiles she was yet speaking these words, the young man said, Whom wait ye for? I will not obey the king's commandment: but I will obey the commandment of the law that was given unto our fathers by Moses.

31 And thou, that hast been the author of all mischief against the Hebrews, shalt not escape the hands of God.

32 For we suffer because of our sins.

33 And though the living Lord be angry with us a little while for our chastening and correction, yet shall he be at one again with his servants.

34 But thou, O godless man, and of all other most wicked, be not lifted up without a cause, nor puffed up with uncertain hopes, lifting up thy hand against the servants of God:

35 For thou hast not yet escaped the judgment of Almighty God, who seeth all things.

36 For our brethren, who now have suffered a short pain, are dead under God's covenant of everlasting life: but thou, through the judgment of God, shalt receive just punishment for thy pride.

37 But I, as my brethren, offer up my body and life for the laws of our fathers, beseeching God that he would speedily be merciful unto our nation; and that thou by torments and plagues mayest confess, that he alone is God;

38 And that in me and my brethren the wrath of the Almighty, which is justly brought upon all our nation, may cease.

39 Then the king, being in a rage, handled him worse than all the rest, and took it grievously that he was mocked.

40 So this man died undefiled, and put his whole trust in the Lord.

41 Last of all after the sons the mother died.

42 Let this be enough now to have spoken concerning the idolatrous feasts, and the extreme tortures.

Chap. VII. ver. 41. Last of all after the sons the mother died.] Thus ended this doleful but glorious day, with the death of the victorious Solomons, who triumphed in the sharpest agonies of her sons, and in her own sufferings; and through the most exquisite tortures passed to eternal rest. Stackhouse.

Before CHRIST about 166. Nicanor to flight, 28 and dividеth the spoils. 30 Other enemies are also defeated, 35 and Nicanor fleeth with grief to Antioch.

about 165. THEN Judas Maccabeus, and they that were with him, went privily into the towns, and called their kinsfolks together, and took unto them all such as continued in the Jews' religion, and assembled about six thousand men.

2 And they called upon the Lord, that he would look upon the people that was trodden down of all; and also pity the temple profaned of ungodly men;

3 And that he would have compassion upon the city, sore defaced, and ready to be made even with the ground; and hear the blood that cried unto him,

4 And remember the wicked slaughter of harmless infants, and the blasphemies committed against his name; and that he would shew his hatred against the wicked.

5 Now when Maccabeus had his company about him, he could not be withstood by the heathen: for the wrath of the Lord was turned into mercy.

6 Therefore he came at unawares, and burnt up towns and cities, and got into his hands the most commodious places, and overcame and put to flight no small number of his enemies.

7 But specially took he advantage of the night for such privy attempts, insomuch that the bruit of his manliness was spread every where.

8 So when Philip saw that this man increased by little and little, and that things prospered with him still more and more, he wrote unto Ptolemeus, the governor of Celosyria and Phenice, to yield more aid to the king's affairs.

9 Then forthwith choosing Nicanor the son of Patroclus, one of his special friends, he sent him with no fewer than twenty thousand of all nations under him, to root out the whole generation of the Jews; and with him he joined also Gorgias a captain, who in matters of war had great experience.

10 So Nicanor undertook to make so much money of the captive Jews, as should defray the tribute of two thousand talents, which the king was to pay to the Romans.

11 Wherefore immediately he sent to the cities upon the sea coast, proclaiming a sale of the captive Jews, and promising that they should have fourscore and ten bodies for one talent, not expecting the vengeance that was to follow upon him from the Almighty God. Before CHRIST about 166.

12 Now when word was brought unto Judas of Nicanor's coming, and he had imparted unto those that were with him that the army was at hand, 13 They that were fearful, and distrusted the justice of God, fled, and conveyed themselves away.

14 Others sold all that they had left, and withal besought the Lord to deliver them, being sold by the wicked Nicanor before they met together:

15 And if not for their own sakes, yet for the covenants he had made with their fathers, and for his holy and glorious name's sake, by which they were called.

16 So Maccabeus called his men together unto the number of six thousand, and exhorted them not to be stricken with terror of the enemy, nor to fear the great multitude of the heathen, who came wrongfully against them; but to fight manfully,

17 And to set before their eyes the injury that they had unjustly done to the holy place, and the cruel handling of the city, whereof they made a mockery, and also the taking away of the government of their forefathers:

18 For they, said he, trust in their weapons and boldness; but our confidence is in the Almighty God, who at a beck can cast down both them that come against us, and also all the world.

19 Moreover he recounted unto them what helps their forefathers had found, and how they were delivered, when under Sennacherib an hundred fourscore and five thousand perished.

20 And he told them of the battle that they had in Babylon with the Galatians, how they came but eight thousand in all to the business, with four thousand Macedonians, and that the Macedonians being perplexed, the eight thousand destroyed an hundred and twenty thousand because of

Before CHRIST about 166. the help that they had from heaven, and so received a great booty.

21 Thus when he had made them bold with these words, and ready to die for the laws and the country, he divided his army into four parts;

22 And joined with himself his own brethren, leaders of each band, to wit, Simon, and Joseph, and Jonathan, giving each one fifteen hundred men.

23 Also he appointed Eleazar to read the holy book: and when he had given them this watchword, The help of God; himself leading the first band, he joined battle with Nicanor.

24 And by the help of the Almighty they slew above nine thousand of their enemies, and wounded and maimed the most part of Nicanor's host, and so put all to flight;

25 And took their money that came to buy them, and pursued them far: but lacking time they returned:

26 For it was the day before the sabbath, and therefore they would no longer pursue them.

g That is, the enemies' armour.

27 So when they had gathered ‖ their armour together, and spoiled their enemies, they occupied themselves about the sabbath, yielding exceeding praise and thanks to the Lord, who had preserved them unto that day, which was the beginning of mercy distilling upon them.

28 And after the sabbath, when they had given part of the spoils to the ‖ maimed, and the widows, and orphans, the residue they divided among themselves and their servants.

f Or, mixed with maimed.

29 When this was done, and they had made a common supplication, they besought the merciful Lord to be reconciled with his servants for ever.

30 Moreover of those that were with Timotheus and Bacchides, who fought against them, they slew above twenty thousand, and very easily got high and strong holds, and divided among themselves many spoils more, and made the ‖ maimed, orphans, widows, yea, and the aged also, equal in spoils with themselves.

h Or, mixed.

31 And when they had gathered their armour together, they laid them up all carefully in convenient places, and the remnant of the spoils they brought to Jerusalem.

32 They slew also Philarches, that wicked person, who was with Timotheus, and had annoyed the Jews many ways. Before CHRIST about 166.

33 Furthermore at such time as they kept the feast for the victory in their country they burnt Callisthenes, that had set fire upon the holy gates, who had fled into a little house; and so he received a reward meet for his wickedness.

34 As for that most ungracious Nicanor, who had brought a thousand merchants to buy the Jews,

35 He was through the help of the Lord brought down by them, of whom he made least account; and putting off his glorious apparel, and discharging his company, he came like a fugitive servant through the midland unto Antioch, having very great dishonour, for that his host was destroyed.

36 Thus he, that took upon him to make good to the Romans their tribute by means of the captives in Jerusalem, told abroad, that the Jews had God to fight for them, and therefore they could not be hurt, because they followed the laws that he gave them.

CHAP. IX.

1 Antiochus is chased from Persepolis. 5 He is stricken with a sore disease, 14 and promiseth to become a Jew. 28 He dieth miserably.

ABOUT that time came Antiochus ‖ with dishonour out of the country of Persia. about 164. i Or, disorderly.

2 For he had entered the city called Persepolis, and went about to rob the temple, and to hold the city; whereupon the multitude running to defend themselves with their weapons put them to flight; and so it happened, that Antiochus being put to flight of the inhabitants returned with shame.

3 Now when he came to Ecbatane, news was brought him what had happened unto Nicanor and Timotheus.

4 Then swelling with anger, he thought to avenge upon the Jews the disgrace done unto him by those that made him flee. Therefore commanded he his chariotman to drive without ceasing, and to dispatch the journey, the judgment of God now following him. For he had spoken proudly in this sort, That he would come to Jerusalem, and make it a common buryingplace of the Jews.

Chap. IX. ver. 2. — Persepolis,] This city is called Elymais, 1 Macc. vi. 1: probably it is here called Persepolis, as having been formerly the capital of Persia; for Persepolis, properly so called, and Elymais were very different cities. Calmet.

Before CHRIST about 164. 5 But the Lord Almighty, the God of Israel, smote him with an incurable and invisible plague: for as soon as he had spoken these words, a pain of the bowels that was remediless came upon him, and sore torments of the inner parts;

6 And that most justly: for he had tormented other men's bowels with many and strange torments.

7 Howbeit he nothing at all ceased from his bragging, but still was filled with pride, breathing out fire in his rage against the Jews, and commanding to haste the journey: but it came to pass that he fell down from his chariot, carried violently; so that having a sore fall, all the members of his body were much pained.

8 And thus he that a little afore thought he might command the waves of the sea, (so proud was he beyond the condition of man) and weigh the high mountains in a balance, was now cast on the ground, and carried in an horselitter, shewing forth unto all the manifest power of God.

9 So that the worms rose up out of the body of this wicked man, and whiles he lived in sorrow and pain, his flesh fell away, and the filthiness of his smell was noisome to all his army.

10 And the man, that thought a little afore he could reach to the stars of heaven, no man could endure to carry for his intolerable stink.

11 Here therefore, being plagued, he began to leave off his great pride, and to come to the knowledge of himself by the scourge of God, his pain increasing every moment.

12 And when he himself could not abide his own smell, he said these words, It is meet to be subject unto God, and that a man that is mortal should not proudly think of himself, as if he were God.

13 This wicked person vowed also unto the Lord, who now no more would have mercy upon him, saying thus,

14 That the holy city (to the which he was going in haste, to lay it even with the ground, and to make it a common burying-place,) he would set at liberty:

15 And as touching the Jews, whom he had judged not worthy so much as to be buried, but to be cast out with their children to be devoured of the fowls and wild beasts, he would make them all equals to the citizens of ‖ Athens:

Before CHRIST about 164.

‖ Or, Athens.

16 And the holy temple, which before he had spoiled, he would garnish with goodly gifts, and restore all the holy vessels with many more, and out of his own revenue defray the charges belonging to the sacrifices:

17 Yea, and that also he would become a Jew himself, and go through all the world that was inhabited, and declare the power of God.

18 But for all this his pains would not cease: for the just judgment of God was come upon him: therefore despairing of his health, he wrote unto the Jews the letters underwritten, containing the form of a supplication, after this manner:

19 Antiochus, king and governor, to the good Jews his citizens wisheth much joy, health, and prosperity:

20 If ye and your children fare well, and your affairs be to your contentment, I give very great thanks to God, having my hope in heaven.

21 As for me, I was weak, or else I would have remembered kindly your honour and good will. Returning out of Persia, and being taken with a grievous disease, I thought it necessary to care for the common safety of all:

22 Not distrusting mine health, but having great hope to escape this sickness.

23 But considering that even my father, at what time he led an army into the high countries, appointed a successor,

24 To the end that, if any thing fell out contrary to expectation, or if any tidings were brought that were grievous, they of the land, knowing to whom ‖ the state was left, might not be troubled:

‖ Or, concern.

25 Again, considering how that the princes that are borderers and neighbours unto my kingdom wait for opportunities, and expect what shall be the event, I have appointed my son Antiochus king, whom I often committed and commended unto many of you, when I went up into the high provinces; to whom I have written as followeth:

26 Therefore I pray and request you to remember the benefits that I have done

15. — equals to the citizens of Athens:] An errour for Antioch. The freedom of the city of Antioch was sold to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, or conferred upon them as a mark of distinction, chap. iv. 9. ‖ Or, following.

28 Thus the murderer and blasphemer having suffered most grievously, as he entreated other men, so died he a miserable death in a strange country in the mountains.

29 And Philip, that was brought up with him, carried away his body, who also fearing the son of Antiochus went into Egypt to Ptolemeus Philometor.

CHAP. X.

1 Judas recovereth the city, and purifieth the temple. 14 Gorgias vexeth the Jews. 16 Judas winneth their holds. 29 Timotheus and his men are discomfited. 35 Gazara is taken, and Timotheus slain.

165. NOW Maccabeus and his company, the Lord guiding them, recovered the temple and the city:

2 But the altars which the heathen had built in the open street, and also the chapels, they pulled down.

3 And having cleansed the temple they made another altar, and striking stones they took fire out of them, and offered a sacrifice after two years, and set forth incense, and lights, and shewbread.

4 When that was done, they fell flat down, and besought the Lord that they might come no more into such troubles; but if they sinned any more against him, that he himself would chasten them with mercy, and that they might not be delivered unto the blasphemous and barbarous nations.

5 Now upon the same day that the strangers profaned the temple, on the very same day it was cleansed again, even the five and twentieth day of the same month, which is Casleu.

6 And they kept eight days with gladness, as in the feast of the tabernacles, remembering that not long afore they had held the feast of the tabernacles, when as they wandered in the mountains and dens like beasts. Before CHRIST 165.

7 Therefore they bare branches, and fair boughs, and palms also, and sang psalms unto him that had given them good success in cleansing his place.

8 They ordained also by a common statute and decree, That every year those days should be kept of the whole nation of the Jews.

10 Now will we declare the acts of Antiochus Eupator, who was the son of this wicked man, gathering briefly the calamities of the wars.

11 So when he was come to the crown, he set one Lysias over the affairs of his realm, and appointed him chief governor of Celosyria and Phenice.

12 For Ptolemeus, that was called Macron, choosing rather to do justice unto the Jews for the wrongs that had been done unto them, endeavoured to continue peace with them.

13 Whereupon being accused of the king's friends before Eupator, and called traitor at every word, because he had left Cyprus, that Philometor had committed unto him, and departed to Antiochus Epiphanes, ‖ and seeing that he was in no honourable place, he was so discouraged, that he poisoned himself and died. ‖ Or, and not bearing like authority as it becometh a nobleman.

15 And therewithal the Idumeans, having gotten into their hands the most commodious holds, kept the Jews occupied, and receiving those that were banished from Jerusalem, they went about to nourish war.

16 Then they that were with Maccabeus made supplication, and besought God that he would be their helper; and so they ran with violence upon the strong holds of the Idumeans,

17 And assaulting them strongly, they won the holds, and kept off all that fought

18 And because certain, who were no less than nine thousand, were fled together into two very strong castles, having all manner of things convenient to sustain the siege,

19 Maccabeus left Simon and Joseph, and Zaccheus also, and them that were with him, who were enough to besiege them, and departed himself unto those places which more needed his help.

‖ Or, Simon. 20 Now ‖ they that were with Simon, being led with covetousness, were persuaded for money through certain of those that were in the castle, and took seventy thousand drachms, and let some of them escape.

21 But when it was told Maccabeus what was done, he called the governors of the people together, and accused those men, that they had sold their brethren for money, and set their enemies free to fight against them.

22 So he slew those that were found traitors, and immediately took the two castles.

23 And having good success with his weapons in all things he took in hand, he slew in the two holds more than twenty thousand.

24 Now Timotheus, whom the Jews had overcome before, when he had gathered a great multitude of foreign forces, and horses out of Asia not a few, came as though he would take Jewry by force of arms.

‖ Or, Maccabeus, and they that were with him. 25 But when he drew near, ‖ they that were with Maccabeus turned themselves to pray unto God, and sprinkled earth upon their heads, and girded their loins with sackcloth, 31 And there were slain of footmen twenty thousand and five hundred, and six hundred horsemen.

32 As for Timotheus himself, he fled into a very strong hold, called Gazara, where Chereas was governor.

33 But they that were with Maccabeus laid siege against the fortress courageously four days.

34 And they that were within, trusting to the strength of the place, blasphemed exceedingly, and uttered wicked words.

35 Nevertheless upon the fifth day early twenty young men of Maccabeus' company, inflamed with anger because of the blasphemies, assaulted the wall manly, and with a fierce courage killed all that they met withal.

36 Others likewise ascending after them, whiles they were busied with them that were within, burnt the towers, and kindling fires burnt the blasphemers alive; and others broke open the gates, and, having received in the rest of the army, took the city,

37 And killed Timotheus, that was hid in a certain pit, and Chereas his brother, with Apollophanes.

38 When this was done, they praised the Lord with psalms and thanksgiving, who had done so great things for Israel, and given them the victory.

3 Lysias, thinking to get Jerusalem, 8 is put to flight. 16 The letters of Lysias to the Jews: 22 of the king unto Lysias, 27 and to the Jews: 34 of the Romans to the Jews.

NOT long after this, Lysias the king's † protector and cousin, who also managed the affairs, took sore displeasure for the things that were done.

3 And to make a gain of the temple, as of the other chapels of the heathen, and to set the high priesthood to sale every year:

4 Not at all considering the power of God, but puffed up with his ten thousands

5 So he came to Judea, and drew near to Bethsura, which was a strong town, but distant from Jerusalem about five furlongs, and he laid sore siege unto it.

‖ Maccabeus and his company. 6 Now when ‖ they that were with Maccabeus heard that he besieged the holds, they and all the people with lamentation and tears besought the Lord that he would send a good angel to deliver Israel.

7 Then Maccabeus himself first of all took weapons, exhorting the other that they would jeopard themselves together with him to help their brethren: so they went forth together with a willing mind.

8 And as they were at Jerusalem, there appeared before them on horseback one in white clothing, shaking his armour of gold.

9 Then they praised the merciful God all together, and took heart, insomuch that they were ready not only to fight with men, but with most cruel beasts, and to pierce through walls of iron.

10 Thus they marched forward in their armour, having an helper from heaven: for the Lord was merciful unto them.

11 And giving a charge upon their enemies like lions, they slew eleven thousand footmen, and sixteen hundred horsemen, and put all the other to flight.

12 Many of them also being wounded escaped naked; and Lysias himself fled away shamefully, and so escaped.

13 Who, as he was a man of understanding, casting with himself what loss he had had, and considering that the Hebrews could not be overcome, because the Almighty God helped them, he sent unto them,

14 And persuaded them to agree to all reasonable conditions, and promised that he would persuade the king that he must needs be a friend unto them.

15 Then Maccabeus consented to all that Lysias desired, being careful of the common good; and whatsoever Maccabeus wrote unto Lysias concerning the Jews, the king granted it.

16 For there were letters written unto the Jews from Lysias to this effect: Lysias unto the people of the Jews sendeth greeting: Before CHRIST about 164.

17 John and Absalon, who were sent from you, delivered me the petition subscribed, and made request for the performance of the contents thereof.

18 Therefore what things soever were meet to be reported to the king, I have declared them, and he hath granted as much as might be. about 163.

19 If then ye will keep yourselves loyal to the state, hereafter also will I endeavour to be a means of your good.

20 But of the particulars I have given order both to these, and the other that came from me, to commune with you.

21 Fare ye well. The hundred and eight and fortieth year, the four and twentieth day of the month ‖ Dioscorinthius. ‖ Or, Dioscorus.

22 Now the king's letter contained these words: King Antiochus unto his brother Lysias sendeth greeting:

23 Since our father is translated unto the gods, our will is, that they that are in our realm live quietly, that every one may attend upon his own affairs.

24 We understand also that the Jews would not consent to our father, for to be brought unto the custom of the Gentiles, but had rather keep their own manner of living: for the which cause they require of us, that we should suffer them to live after their own laws.

25 Wherefore our mind is, that this nation shall be in rest, and we have determined to restore them their temple, that they may live according to the customs of their forefathers.

26 Thou shalt do well therefore to send unto them, and ‖ grant them peace, that when they are certified of our mind, they may be of good comfort, and ever go cheerfully about their own affairs. ‖ Or, give them assurance.

27 And the letter of the king unto the nation of the Jews was after this manner: King Antiochus sendeth greeting unto the council, and the rest of the Jews:

28 If ye fare well, we have our desire; we are also in good health.

3 The men of Joppe also did such an ungodly deed: they prayed the Jews that dwelt among them to go with their wives and children into the boats which they had prepared, as though they had meant them no hurt.

5 When Judas heard of this cruelty done unto his countrymen, he commanded those that were with him to make them ready.

6 And calling upon God the righteous Judge, he came against those murderers of his brethren, and burnt the haven by night, and set the boats on fire, and those that fled thither he slew.

7 And when the town was shut up, he went backward, ‖ as if he would return to root out all them of the city of Joppe.

10 Now when they were gone from thence nine furlongs in their journey toward Timotheus, no fewer than five thousand men on foot and five hundred horsemen of the Arabians set upon him.

11 Whereupon there was a very sore battle; but Judas' side by the help of God got the victory; so that the Nomades of Arabia, being overcome, besought Judas for peace, promising both to give him cattle, and to pleasure him otherwise.

12 Then Judas, thinking indeed that they would be profitable in many things, granted them peace: whereupon they shook hands, and so they ‖ departed to their tents.

15 Wherefore Judas with his company, calling upon the great Lord of the world, who without any rams or engines of war did cast down Jericho in the time of Joshua, gave a fierce assault against the walls,

16 And took the city by the will of God, and made unspeakable slaughters, insomuch that a lake two furlongs broad near adjoining thereunto, being filled full, was seen running with blood.

17 Then departed they from thence seven hundred and fifty furlongs, and came to Characa unto the Jews that are called Tubieni.

18 But as for Timotheus, they found him not in the places: for before he had dispatched any thing, he departed from thence, having left a very strong garrison in a certain hold.

19 Howbeit Dositheus and Sosipater, who were of Maccabeus' captains, went forth, and slew those that Timotheus had left in the fortress, above ten thousand men.

20 And Maccabeus ranged his army by ‖ Dositheus and Sosipater. bands, and set ‖ them over the bands, and went against Timotheus, who had about him an hundred and twenty thousand men of foot, and two thousand and five hundred horsemen.

21 Now when Timotheus had knowledge of Judas' coming, he sent the women and children and the other baggage unto a fortress called Carnion: for the town was hard to besiege, and uneasy to come unto, by reason of the straitness of all the places.

22 But when Judas his first band came in sight, the enemies, being smitten with fear and terror through the appearing of him that seeth all things, fled amain, one running this way, another that way, so as that they were often hurt of their own men, and wounded with the points of their own swords.

23 Judas also was very earnest in pursuing them, killing those wicked wretches, of whom he slew about thirty thousand men.

24 Moreover Timotheus himself fell into Before CHRIST about 164. the hands of Dositheus and Sosipater, whom he besought with much craft to let him go with his life, because he had many of the Jews' parents, and the brethren of some of them, who, if they put him to death, should not be regarded.

25 So when he had assured them with many words that he would restore them without hurt, according to the agreement, they let him go for the saving of their brethren.

26 Then Maccabeus marched forth to Carnion, and to the temple of ‖ Atargatis, ‖ That is, Venus. and there he slew five and twenty thousand persons.

27 And after he had put to flight and destroyed them, Judas removed the host toward Ephron, a strong city, wherein Lysias abode, and a great multitude of divers nations, and the strong young men kept the walls, and defended them mightily: wherein also was great provision of engines and darts.

28 But when Judas and his company had called upon Almighty God, who with his power breaketh the strength of his enemies, they won the city, and slew twenty and five thousand of them that were within.

29 From thence they departed to Scythopolis, which lieth six hundred furlongs from Jerusalem.

30 But when the Jews that dwelt there had testified that the Scythopolitans dealt lovingly with them, and entreated them kindly in the time of their adversity;

31 They gave them thanks, desiring them to be friendly still unto them: and so they came to Jerusalem, the feast of the weeks approaching.

32 And after the feast, called Pentecost, they went forth against Gorgias the governor of Idumea, 33 Who came out with three thousand men of foot and four hundred horsemen.

34 And it happened that in their fighting together a few of the Jews were slain.

35 At which time Dositheus, one of Bacenor's company, who was on horseback, and a strong man, was still upon Gorgias, and taking hold of his coat drew him by

‖ Or, put by his arm: or, wounded him in the shoulder: or, struck him in the shoulder.

36 Now when they that were with Gorgias had fought long, and were weary, Judas called upon the Lord, that he would shew himself to be their helper and leader of the battle.

37 And with that he began in his own language, and sung psalms with a loud voice, and rushing unawares upon Gorgias' men, he put them to flight.

38 So Judas gathered his host, and came into the city of Odollam. And when the seventh day came, they purified themselves, as the custom was, and kept the sabbath in the same place.

‖ Or, at each time, &c.

39 And upon the day following, ‖ as the use had been, Judas and his company came to take up the bodies of them that were slain, and to bury them with their kinsmen in their fathers' graves.

43 And when he had made a gathering throughout the company to the sum of two thousand drachms of silver, he sent it to Jerusalem to offer a sin offering, doing therein very well and honestly, in that he was mindful of the resurrection:

CHAP. XIII.

1 Eupator invadeth Judea. 15 Judas by night dayeth many. 18 Eupator's purpose is defeated. 23 He maketh peace with Judas.

IN the hundred forty and ninth year it was told Judas, that Antiochus Eupator was coming with a great power into Judea, about

2 And with him Lysias his protector, and ruler of his affairs, having either of them a Grecian power of footmen, an hundred and ten thousand, and horsemen five thousand and three hundred, and elephants two and twenty, and three hundred chariots armed with hooks.

3 Menelaus also joined himself with them, and with great dissimulation encouraged Antiochus, not for the safeguard of the country, but because he thought to have been made governor.

4 But the King of kings moved Antiochus' mind against this wicked wretch, and Lysias informed the king that this man was the cause of all mischief, so that

40. — they found things consecrated to the idols of the Jamnites,] Whence it appeared that these Jews had been worshippers of those idols. So great was the force and contagion of superstition, whilst they dwelt amongst idolaters. Bedwell.

44. — to pray for the dead.] See the Introduction. The Romanists, who, in deference to the decision of the Council of Trent, admit the canonical authority of this book, have produced the last verses of the fourteenth chapter to countenance their notions concerning purgatory and prayers for the dead. Dr. Gray.

We are to make a difference here between the story that the author relates, and the author's own reflections upon it: for we ought not to make any great account of his reflections, these being only his private thoughts; and as he has the modesty to ask the reader pardon for his defects, so it is very plain that he often needs considerable allowance. What Judas did seems from the relation to be no more than this: that he, finding some things consecrated to the idols of the Jamnites about the bodies of those who were killed, concluded that to have been the cause of their death; and upon this he and all his men betook themselves to prayer, and besought God that the sin might be wholly put out of remembrance; he exhorted his people to keep themselves by that example from the like sin; and he made a collection of a sum of money, and sent it to Jerusalem, to offer a sin offering before the Lord. This agrees very well with the Jewish dispensation. It had appeared in the days of Joshua, how much guilt the sin of Achan, though but one person, had brought upon the whole congregation, Josh. chap. vii: and their law had upon another occasion prescribed a sin offering for the whole congregation, to expiate blood that was shed, when the murderer could not be discovered; that so the judgments of God might not come upon them, by reason of the cry of that blood. And by a parity of reason, Judas might have offered such an offering, to free himself and his men from the guilt which the idolatry of a few might have brought upon greater numbers: such a sacrifice as this might, according to the nature of that law, have been offered; but to offer a sin offering "for the dead" was a new thing without ground, or any intimation of any thing like it in their law. So that there is no reason to doubt, but that according to the narrative Judas offered this sin offering for the living, and not for the dead. And we are not much concerned in the opinion, which the author of the book had concerning it: for, as the book is of no authority for the establishment of any doctrine, so it is highly probable that Judas's design in the oblation was misunderstood by the historian. Bp. Burnet.

Before CHRIST about 163. the king commanded to bring him unto Berea, and to put him to death, as the manner is in that place.

5 Now there was in that place a tower of fifty cubits high, full of ashes, and it had a round instrument, which on every side hanged down into the ashes.

6 And whosoever was condemned of sacrilege, or had committed any other grievous crime, there did all men thrust him unto death.

7 Such a death it happened that wicked man to die, not having so much as burial in the earth; and that most justly:

8 For inasmuch as he had committed many sins about the altar, whose fire and ashes were holy, he received his death in ashes.

9 Now the king came with a barbarous and haughty mind to do far worse to the Jews, than had been done in his father's time.

10 Which things when Judas perceived, he commanded the multitude to call upon the Lord night and day, that if ever at any other time, he would now also help them, being at the point to be put from their law, from their country, and from the holy temple:

11 And that he would not suffer the people, that ‖ had even now been but a little refreshed, to be in subjection to the blasphemous nations.

‖ Or, had had a little respite.

12 So when they had all done this together, and besought the merciful Lord with weeping and fasting, and lying flat upon the ground three days long, Judas, having exhorted them, commanded they should be in a readiness.

13 And Judas, being apart with the elders, determined, before the king's host should enter into Judea, and get the city, to go forth and try the matter in fight by the help of the Lord.

14 So when he had commited all to the ‖ Creator of the world, and exhorted his soldiers to fight manfully, even unto death, for the laws, the temple, the city, the country, and the commonwealth, he camped by Modin:

‖ Or, Lord.

15 And having given the watchword to them that were about him, Victory is of God; with the most valiant and choice young men he went in into the king's tent by night, and slew in the camp about four thousand men, and the chiefest of the elephants, with all that were upon him.

Before CHRIST about 163.

16 And at last they filled the camp with fear and tumult, and departed with good success.

17 This was done in the break of the day, because the protection of the Lord did help him.

18 Now when the king had taken a taste of the manliness of the Jews, he went about to take the holds by policy,

19 And marched toward Bethsura, which was a strong hold of the Jews: but he was put to flight, failed, and lost of his men:

20 For Judas had conveyed unto them that were in it such things as were necessary.

21 But Rhodocus, who was in the Jews' host, disclosed the secrets to the enemies; therefore he was sought out, and when they had gotten him, they put him in prison.

22 The king treated with them in Bethsura the second time, gave his hand, took their's, departed, fought with Judas, was overcome;

23 Heard that Philip, who was left over the affairs in Antioch, ‖ was desperately bent, confounded, intreated the Jews, submitted himself, and sware to all equal conditions, agreed with them, and offered sacrifice, honoured the temple, and dealt kindly with the place,

‖ Or, rebelled.

24 And accepted well of Maccabeus, made him principal governor from Ptolemais unto the Gerrhenians;

25 Came to Ptolemais: the people there were grieved for the covenants; for they stormed, because they would make their covenants void:

26 Lysias went up to the judgment seat, said as much as could be in defence of the cause, persuaded, pacified, made them well affected, returned to Antioch. Thus it about 162. AFTER three years was Judas informed, that Demetrius the son of Seleucus, having entered by the haven of Tripolis with a great power and navy,

Chap. XIII. ver. 5. — a tower of fifty cubits high,] This was one of the Persian modes of punishing great criminals with death. 6 Alcimus accuseth Judas. 18 Nicanor maketh peace with Judas. 39 He seeketh to take Razis, 46 who, to escape his hands, killeth himself.

2 Had taken the country, and killed Antiochus, and Lysias his protector.

3 Now one Alcimus, who had been high priest, and had defiled himself wilfully in the times of their mingling with the Gentiles, seeing that by no means he could save himself, nor have any more access to the holy altar,

4 Came to king Demetrius in the hundred and one and fiftieth year, presenting unto him a crown of gold, and a palm, and also of the boughs which were ‖ used solemnly in the temple: and so that day he held his peace.

‖ Or, thought to be of the temple.

5 Howbeit, having gotten opportunity to further his foolish enterprize, and being called into counsel by Demetrius, and asked how the Jews stood affected, and what they intended, he answered thereunto:

6 Those of the Jews that be called Assideans, whose captain is Judas Maccabeus, nourish war, and are seditious, and will not let the realm be in peace.

7 Therefore I, being deprived of mine ancestors' honour, I mean the high priesthood, am now come hither:

8 First, verily for the unfeigned care I have of things pertaining to the king; and secondly, even for that I intend the good of mine own countrymen: for all our nation is in no small misery through the unadvised dealing of them aforesaid.

9 Wherefore, O king, seeing thou knowest all these things, be careful for the country, and our nation, which is pressed on every side, according to the clemency that thou readily shewest unto all.

10 For as long as Judas liveth, it is not possible that the state should be quiet.

11 This was no sooner spoken of him, Before CHRIST about 162. but others of the king's friends, being maliciously set against Judas, did more incense Demetrius.

12 And forthwith calling Nicanor, who had been master of the elephants, and making him governor over Judea, he sent him forth, 13 Commanding him to slay Judas, and to scatter them that were with him, and to make Alcimus high priest of the great temple.

14 Then the heathen, that had fled out of Judea from Judas, came to Nicanor by flocks, thinking the harm and calamities of the Jews to be their welfare.

15 Now when the Jews heard of Nicanor's coming, and that the heathen ‖ were up against them, they cast earth upon their heads, and made supplication to him that had established his people for ever, and who always helpeth his portion with manifestation of his presence.

‖ Or, army was come to them.

16 So at the commandment of the captain they removed straightways from thence, and came near unto them at the town of Dessau.

17 Now Simon, Judas' brother, had joined battle with Nicanor, but was somewhat discomfited through the sudden silence of his enemies.

18 Nevertheless Nicanor, hearing of the manliness of them that were with Judas, and the courageousness that they had to fight for their country, durst not try the matter by the sword.

19 Wherefore he sent Posidonius, and Theodotus, and Mattathias, to make peace.

20 So when they had taken long advisement thereupon, and the captain had made the multitude acquainted therewith, and it appeared that they were all of one mind, they consented to the covenants,

21 And appointed a day to meet in together by themselves: and when the day came, and stools were set for either of them,

22 Judas placed armed men ready in convenient places, lest some treachery should be suddenly practised by the ene-

23 Now Nicanor abode in Jerusalem, and did no hurt, but sent away the people that came flocking unto him.

24 And he would not willingly have Judas out of his sight: for he loved the man from his heart.

25 He prayed him also to take a wife, and to beget children: so he married, was quiet, and ‖ took part of this life.

Or, lived together with him.

26 But Alcimus, perceiving the love that was betwixt them, and considering the covenants that were made, came to Demetrius, and told him that Nicanor was not well affected toward the state; for that he had ordained Judas, a traitor to his realm, to be the king's successor.

27 Then the king being in a rage, and provoked with the accusations of the most wicked man, wrote to Nicanor, signifying that he was much displeased with the covenants, and commanding him that he should send Maccabeus prisoner in all haste unto Antioch.

28 When this came to Nicanor's hearing, he was much confounded in himself, and took it grievously that he should make void the articles which were agreed upon, the man being in no fault.

29 But because there was no dealing against the king, he watched his time to accomplish this thing by policy.

about 161. 30 Notwithstanding, when Maccabeus saw that Nicanor began to be churlish unto him, and that he entreated him more roughly than he was wont, perceiving that such sour behaviour came not of good, he gathered together not a few of his men, and withdrew himself from Nicanor.

31 But the other, knowing that he was notably prevented by Judas' policy, came into the great and holy temple, and commanded the priests, that were offering their usual sacrifices, to deliver him the man.

32 And when they sware that they could not tell where the man was whom he sought,

33 He stretched out his right hand toward the temple, and made an oath in this manner: If ye will not deliver me Judas as † a prisoner, I will lay this temple of God even with the ground, and I will break down the altar, and erect a notable temple unto Bacchus.

34 After these words he departed. Then the priests lifted up their hands toward heaven, and besought him that was ever a defender of their nation, saying in this manner;

Before CHRIST about 161.

35 Thou, O Lord of all things, who hast need of nothing, wast pleased that the temple of thine habitation should be among us:

36 Therefore now, O holy Lord of all holiness, keep this house ever undefiled, which lately was cleansed, and stop every unrighteous mouth.

37 Now was there accused unto Nicanor one Razis, one of the elders of Jerusalem, a lover of his countrymen, and a man of very good report, who for his kindness was called a father of the Jews.

38 For in the former times, when they mingled not themselves with the Gentiles, he had been accused of Judaism, and did boldly jeopard his body and life with all vehemency for the religion of the Jews.

39 So Nicanor, willing to declare the hate that he bare unto the Jews, sent above five hundred men of war to take him:

40 For he thought by taking him to do the Jews much hurt.

41 Now when the multitude would have taken the tower, and violently broken into the outer door, and bade that fire should be brought to burn it, he being ready to be taken on every side fell upon his sword;

42 Choosing rather to die manfully, than to come into the hands of the wicked, to be abused otherwise than beseemed his noble birth:

43 But missing his stroke through haste, the multitude also rushing within the doors, he ran boldly up to the wall, and cast himself down manfully among the thickest of them.

44 But they quickly giving back, and a space being made, he fell down into the midst of the void place.

45 Nevertheless, while there was yet breath within him, being inflamed with anger, he rose up; and though his blood gushed out like spouts of water, and his wounds were grievous, yet he ran through the midst of the throng; and standing upon a steep rock,

46 When as his blood was now quite gone, he plucked out his bowels, and taking them in both his hands, he cast them upon the throng, and calling upon the Lord of life and spirit to restore him those again, he thus died.

5 Nicanor's blasphemy. 8 Judas encourageth his men by his dream. 28 Nicanor is slain.

BUT Nicanor, hearing that Judas and his company were in the strong places about Samaria, resolved without any danger to set upon them on the sabbath day.

2 Nevertheless the Jews that were compelled to go with him said, O destroy not so cruelly and barbarously, but give honour to that day, which he, that seeth all things, hath honoured with holiness above other days.

3 Then the most ungracious wretch demanded, if there were a Mighty one in heaven, that had commanded the sabbath day to be kept.

4 And when they said, There is in heaven a living Lord, and mighty, who commanded the seventh day to be kept:

5 Then said the other, And I also am mighty upon earth, and I command to take arms, and to do the king's business. Yet he obtained not to have his wicked will done.

6 So Nicanor in exceeding pride and haughtiness determined to set up a publick monument of his victory over Judas and them that were with him.

7 But Maccabeus had ever sure confidence that the Lord would help him:

8 Wherefore he exhorted his people not to fear the coming of the heathen against them, but to remember the help which in former times they had received from heaven, and now to expect the victory and aid, which should come unto them from the Almighty.

9 And so comforting them out of the law and the prophets, and withal putting them in mind of the battles that they won afore, he made them more cheerful. Before CHRIST about 161.

10 And when he had stirred up their minds, he gave them their charge, shewing them therewithal the falsehood of the heathen, and the breach of oaths.

11 Thus he armed every one of them, not so much with defence of shields and spears, as with comfortable and good words: and beside that, he told them a dream worthy to be believed, as if it had been so indeed, which did not a little rejoice them.

12 And this was his vision: That Onias, who had been high priest, a virtuous and a good man, reverend in conversation, gentle in condition, well spoken also, and exercised from a child in all points of virtue, holding up his hands prayed for the whole body of the Jews.

13 This done, in like manner there appeared a man with gray hairs, and exceeding glorious, who was of a wonderful and excellent majesty.

14 Then Onias answered, saying, This is a lover of the brethren, who prayeth much for the people, and for the holy city, to wit, Jeremias the prophet of God.

15 Whereupon Jeremias holding forth his right hand gave to Judas a sword of gold, and in giving it spake thus,

16 Take this holy sword, a gift from God, with the which thou shalt wound the adversaries.

17 Thus being well comforted by the words of Judas, which were very good, and able to stir them up to valour, and to encourage the hearts of the young men, they determined not to pitch camp, but courageously to set upon them, and manfully nanimity, contempt of death, and love of liberty, it comes nearer to what they call true heroism, than all the great actions which history has recorded of the Greeks and Romans. Nay, the Jews themselves are willing to place this man in the number of their most illustrious martyrs; and from his example pretend, that upon certain occasions self-murder is not only allowable, but highly commendable. But had the martyrs of old thought themselves at liberty to dispose of their own lives upon any emergent danger, or apprehension of suffering, we should have read little of their being "mocked, and scourged, and tormented," and less of their being "stoned and sawn asunder," Heb. xi. 36, 37. To judge from the practice of those worthies of old, who "obtained a good report through faith," ver. 39, it was not true courage, but the want of it, or mistaken notions of it, that put Razis upon committing this barbarous cruelty on himself: it was pride, not patience, the proper virtue of a martyr, which made him fly to death, merely for refuge against those outrages, which he had not strength of mind to withstand. Stackhouse.

It was in this manner that Cato put an end to his life by stabbing himself, that he might not fall into the hands of his victorious enemy. But that this sort of magnanimity is not allowed nor approved by God, is well understood by all who are pious fear God, and who know that they ought to endure every and affliction, rather than have recourse to a violent and volunt death inflicted by their own hand. Razis might have fa bravely, relying upon the strength and succour of God; and have either escaped or died. But some things are recorded commended by this writer, which ought not to have an authority with the pious: of which kind is what was beha concerning prayer and expiation made for the dead. These d are to be read with judgment; nor are they all to be applied examples for the regulation of life and conduct, or to be alleg for the proof and confirmation of religion. Bedwell.

Chap. XV. ver. 5. — And I also am mighty upon earth.] Th he blasphemously makes himself and his king equal to showing that his mind was bent upon the accomplishment of h purpose: "yet he obtained not to have his wicked will done. for God overturned his impious presumption, and declared Him self the Almighty Lord. Bedwell.

Before CHRIST about 161. to try the matter by conflict, because the city and the sanctuary and the temple were in danger.

18 For the care that they took for their wives, and their children, their brethren, and kinsfolks, was in least account with them: but the greatest and principal fear was for the holy temple.

19 Also they that were in the city took not the least care, being troubled for the conflict abroad.

20 And now, when as all looked what should be the trial, and the enemies were already come near, and the army was set in array, and the beasts conveniently placed, and the horsemen set in wings,

21 Maccabeus seeing the coming of the multitude, and the divers preparations of armour, and the fiercenss of the beasts, stretched out his hands toward heaven, and called upon the Lord that worketh wonders, knowing that victory cometh not by arms, but even as it seemeth good to him, he giveth it to such as are worthy:

22 Therefore in his prayer he said after this manner; O Lord, thou didst send thine angel in the time of Ezekias king of Judea, and didst slay in the host of Sennacherib an hundred fourscore and five thousand:

23 Wherefore now also, O Lord of heaven, send a good angel before us for a fear and dread unto them;

24 And through the might of thine arm let those be stricken with terror, that come against thy holy people to blaspheme. And he ended thus.

25 Then Nicanor and they that were with him came forward with trumpets and songs.

26 But Judas and his company encountered the enemies with invocation and prayer.

27 So that fighting with their hands, and praying unto God with their hearts, they slew no less than thirty and five thousand men: for through the appearance of God they were greatly cheered.

28 Now when the battle was done, returning again with joy, they knew that Nicanor lay dead in his harness.

29 Then they made a great shout and a noise, praising the Almighty in their own language. Before CHRIST about 161.

30 And Judas, who was ever the chief defender of the citizens both in body and mind, and who continued his love toward his countrymen all his life, commanded to strike off Nicanor's head, and his hand with his shoulder, and bring them to Jerusalem.

31 So when he was there, and had called them of his nation together, and set the priests before the altar, he sent for them that were of the tower,

32 And shewed them vile Nicanor's head, and the hand of that blasphemer, which with proud brags he had stretched out against the holy temple of the Almighty.

33 And when he had cut out the tongue of that ungodly Nicanor, he commanded that they should give it by pieces unto the fowls, and hang up the reward of his madness before the temple.

34 So every man praised toward the heaven the glorious Lord, saying, Blessed be he that hath kept his own place undefiled.

35 He hanged also Nicanor's head upon the tower, an evident and manifest sign unto all of the help of the Lord.

36 And they ordained all with a common decree in no case to let that day pass without solemnity, but to celebrate the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which in the Syrian tongue is called Adar, the day before Mardocheus' day.

37 Thus went it with Nicanor: and from that time forth the Hebrews had the city in their power. And here will I make an end.

38 And if I have done well, and as is fitting the story, it is that which I desired: but if slenderly and meanly, it is that which I could attain unto.

39 For as it is hurtful to drink wine or water alone; and as wine mingled with water is pleasant, and delighteth the taste: even so speech finely framed delighteth the ears of them that read the story. And here shall be an end.

ABSTRACTED FROM DR. HALES'S NEW ANALYSIS OF CHRONOLOGY.

I. From the Death of Nehemiah to the Commencement of the History of the Maccabees.

AFTER Nehemiah there were no more Persian governours sent to Judea. It was annexed to the province of Cœle-Syria, and the administration of Jewish affairs left to the high priests, subject however to the control of the provincial governours.

Jonathan, (or, as Josephus calls him, John,) who came from the bad stock of Eliashib, in the eighth year of his pontificate, atrociously murdered his own brother Jesus, within the sacred precincts of the sanctuary itself, jealous of his superiour interest with the Persian governour Bagoses, who intended to make him high priest. On hearing the horrible deed, Bagoses went to the temple, and when the priests attempted to hinder him from entering the sanctuary, he indignantly replied, "Am not I purer than the murdered person there?" For this he persecuted the Jews, and laid a heavy tribute on the lambs offered for burnt sacrifices, which was not remitted till the accession of Ochus to the crown of Persia, B. C. 358.

Afterwards the Jews incurred the displeasure of this prince, by joining, probably, with the revolted provinces of Phenicia and Egypt: for which he took a severe revenge, for he marched into Judea, besieged and took Jericho, and carried away a great number of captive Jews, whom he transplanted into Egypt southwards, and into Hyrcania northwards.

This severity perhaps deterred the Jews from joining Alexander the Great at first, when he invaded the Persian dominions. For they declined his overtures, and refused to send him provisions while he was engaged in the siege of Tyre. Provoked at this, he threatened to punish them. Accordingly, B. C. 332, after he had reduced Tyre, he marched towards Jerusalem with his army; but he was met at Sapha, an eminence near Jerusalem, which commanded a view of the city and temple, by a solemn procession, consisting of Jaddua the high priest dressed in his pontifical robes, attended by the priests in their proper habits, and the rest of the people in white garments, as Jaddua had been commanded, in a vision of the night. When they approached, Alexander, struck with awful respect, advanced alone to meet the high priest, saluted him first, and adored the sacred name of God, written on the front of his mitre; to the great surprise and disappointment of the Phenicians and Chaldeans, who attended the king, expecting his orders to destroy the priests, and plunder the city. While they stood amazed, suspecting that Alexander had lost his senses, Parmenio, his confidential friend, came up, and asked him the reason of his conduct. The king replied, "I adore not the high priest, but the God with whose priesthood he is honoured. When I was at Dios in Macedonia, and considering in myself how to subdue Asia, I saw in a dream such a person, in his present dress; who encouraged me not to delay, but to pass over with confidence; for that himself would lead my army, and give me the Persian empire. Since, therefore, I have seen no other person in such a dress as I now see him, and recollect the vision and exhortation in my dream, I think, that having undertaken this expedition by a divine mission, I shall conquer Darius, overthrow the Persian empire, and succeed in all my designs." Having spoken thus to Parmenio, he presented his right hand to the priest, and went into the city, attended by the priests; and going to the temple, he sacrificed according to the high priest's directions, and treated the pontiff and the priests with distinguished honours. The book of Daniel was then shewn unto him, in which it was foretold that one of the Greeks should overthrow the Persian empire: pleased at which, and thinking that he was the person meant, he dismissed the multitude. The day after summoning them to his presence, he desired them to ask whatever favours they chose. And, at the high priest's request, he granted them the free enjoyment of their national laws, and an exemption from tribute every seventh year. He also promised to permit the Jews in Babylon and Media to enjoy their own laws; and offered to take with him on the expedition any of the people that chose to share his fortune, promising them the free use of their own customs and laws: which induced many to join him.

This relation of Josephus is confirmed by Origen, and is perfectly credible in itself. The same spiritual high priest who revealed to Daniel the vision of the he goat, and the overthrow of the Persian empire by Alexander the Great, might also have the induced and encouraged the Macedonian himself to undertake the expedition. And surely, as an instrument of Divine chastisement he was as worthy of being favoured with Divine communication as Nebuchadnezzar or Belshazzar.

A fact of such publick notoriety as the change of Alexander's wrath suddenly into mildness, in the presence of such a multitude of spectators, could not have been fabricated without detection: nor could it have been more rationally accounted for than by Alexander's relation. The historian Justin seems also to allude to this transaction, where he remarks, that "Alexander was met by many kings of the East with mitres."

"When Alexander afterwards wanted to rebuild the temple of Belus at Babylon, and employed all his soldiers in turn to remove the rubbish, the Jews alone refused to assist in the work, and suffered many stripes for their refusal, and paid heavy fines; until the king, being struck with their firmness, pardoned and gave them an exemption. They also, on their return home, pulled down the temples and altars that had been erected by the colonists in their land, and paid a fine for some to the satraps or governours, and received a pardon for others." This account Josephus cites from the Greek historian Hecatæus; and it tends to confirm Alexander's visit to Jerusalem, and the recruiting of his army among the Jews. Their zeal on this occasion leads us to conclude, that Jaddua was a wise and good pontiff, and that during his administration he endeavoured to uphold Nehemiah's reform.

The death of Alexander the Great, B. C. 323, was calamitous to the Jewish nation. For amidst the contests that prevailed amongst his successors, "evils were multiplied in the earth," 1 Macc. i. 9; and the Jews, lying between the two powerful kingdoms of Syria and Egypt, were alternately harassed by both.

Judea, with Cœle-Syria and Phœnicia, first fell to the lot of Laomedon, as governour. But Ptolemy Lagus, who was also surnamed Soter, governour of Egypt, soon wrested them from him; and besieged Jerusalem, which adhered to Laomedon, with a great army; and, taking advantage of the sabbath day, stormed it without any resistance from the inhabitants, B. C. 320. He treated them at first with great severity, and carried away a hundred thousand captives to Egypt, and, according to Appian, demolished their walls. But afterwards, wishing to attach a people so faithful to their governours, and so important as a barrier on his northern frontier, he restored all their former privileges under Alexander, entrusted to them the garrisoning of the most important fortresses of Egypt, Judea, and Samaria, and gave great encouragement to the Jews to settle in his new capital of Alexandria, by a wise and liberal policy.

Ptolemy retained the possession of Judea, until the ambitious and turbulent Antigonus wrested it from him in turn, B. C. 312. Upon his death in 302, Ptolemy quietly recovered and retained this important province, and by the wisdom of his government promoted the prosperity of the Jews, and gained their affection.

Judea was happy during his reign in an excellent and patriotick high priest, Simon, surnamed the Just. He repaired and fortified the city and the temple with strong and lofty walls, and made a spacious cistern or reservoir of water, "in compass as the sea," as we learn from his beautiful eulogy, the last in the book of Ecclesiasticus, chap. l. 1—21. But his greatest and most important work was the completion of the canon of the Old Testament, by the addition of the books of Ezra, Nehemiah, Chronicles, Esther, and the prophecies of Malachi. He was the last president of the great council, or Sanhedrim, among the high priests; and was succeeded in that office by Antigonus Sochæus, a man of great learning and consummate piety. His doctrines, however, were too refined and spiritualized for ordinary apprehensions; he held that God was to be served wholly from disinterested motives of pure love and reverence, founded on the contemplation of His infinite perfections, uninfluenced by the sordid expectation of reward, or servile fear of punishment. Hence they were either misunderstood or perverted by his followers; of whom was Sadok, the founder of the atheistical sect of the Sadducees.

Ptolemy Philadelphus, who succeeded his father Ptolemy Lagus, B.C. 285, was a great encourager of learning, and patron of learned men. Under his auspices was executed that excellent translation of the Old Testament into Greek, called the Septuagint, from the seventy, or seventy-two interpreters, said to have been employed therein. (See the note from Dr. Graves, subjoined to the book of Esther.) At this time Eleazar the son of Simon the Just was high priest, who furnished the king with a correct copy of the Hebrew Scriptures.

During the ensuing contentions between the kings of Syria and Egypt, which were foretold by Daniel, chap. xi. 6—9, (see the notes there,) few incidents are recorded, particularly belonging to the Jewish history. But in the reign of Ptolemy Euergetes, king of Egypt, Onias, the high priest of the Jews, the son of Eleazar, who succeeded Manasses the son of Jaddua, by his sordid avarice, and embezzlement of the tribute of twenty talents of silver, usually paid to the Egyptians, so provoked the king, that he threatened to confiscate the land of Judea, and sent a colony of soldiers to occupy it. But fortunately for the whole nation, he was appeased by the policy and address of Joseph, the high priest's nephew; who generously borrowed the money upon his own credit, paid the tribute, and so ingratiated himself at the Egyptian court, that he obtained the lucrative post of farming the king's revenues in the provinces of Cœle-Syria, Phœnicia, Samaria, and Judea.

The wars which followed between the kings of Syria and Egypt, and which form the subject of Daniel's prophecy, chap. xi. 10—29, have been already detailed at sufficient length in the notes on that passage; together with such events in the Jewish history as are connected with them. This detail brings the history of the Jews down to the persecution carried on against them by Antiochus Epiphanes; with which the books of the Maccabees properly commence, 1 Macc. i. 10; 2 Macc. iv. 7.

II. From the Conclusion of the History of the Maccabees to the Commencement of the Gospel History.

THE history of the Maccabees is terminated with the succession of John Hyrcanus to the high priesthood and principality of the nation, in consequence of the venerable Simon and two of his sons being treacherously assassinated at an entertainment by Simon's own son in law Ptolemy.

As soon as Hyrcanus had performed the necessary sacrifices upon his appointment to the pontificate, he marched on an expedition against Ptolemy, and besieged him in a fortress near Jericho, to which he had fled: but the siege being protracted till the next year, B. C. 135, which was a sabbatical year, it was broken up, probably for want of provisions.

Shortly after, Antiochus marched with a great army into Judea, and having ravaged the country, besieged Hyrcanus in Jerusalem, and reduced him to the last extremity, for want of provisions that year. On the approach of the feast of tabernacles, in the seventh month, about autumn, Hyrcanus applied to the king for a week's truce, during the celebration of the feast; which he not only granted, but supplied him with victims for sacrifice, and at length concluded a peace with the Jewish nation, when he had it in his power to have extirpated them, and was importuned so to do, but generously refused. However he again reduced them under the Syrian dominion, dismantled Jerusalem, and made them pay tribute for Joppa and the other towns, which they held under the grants of his predecessors.

Four years after, B. C. 131, Antiochus Sidetes marched with a great army against Phraates king of Parthia, under pretence of liberating his brother Demetrius Nicator from captivity, and was accompanied in the expedition by Hyrcanus, prince of the Jews; who returned home at the end of the year, leaving Antiochus victorious over the Parthians in three battles, which put him in possession of Babylonia, Media, and all the revolted provinces, and confined Phraates within the original limits of the Parthian kingdom. But while the Syrian army was dispersed in winter quarters, the Parthians, assisted by the natives, who had been grievously oppressed by the enemy, conspired against them, and massacred almost all of them in one day, and slew Antiochus himself, so that scarcely a man escaped to carry back the news of the catastrophe to Syria.

Upon this signal success, Phraates sent to apprehend Demetrius, whom he had released and sent back to Syria, in order to create a diversion, after having been thrice vanquished in the former campaign; but Demetrius had made such haste, that he escaped the pursuit, and again recovered his crown, B. C. 130.

After the death of Antiochus, Hyrcanus took advantage of the divisions and disturbances that ensued through the Syrian empire, not only to enlarge his territories, by seizing Madeba, Samega, and several other places in Syria, Phœnicia, and Arabia, and annexing them to his dominions; but also to render himself totally independent. For after this, neither he nor his descendants paid any tribute, service, or homage, to the kings of Syria.

Hyrcanus next invaded Samaria, and took Shechem, the chief seat of the sect of the Samaritans, and destroyed their temple on mount Gerizim, which had been built by Sanballat. However they still continued to have an altar there, on which they offer sacrifices according to the Levitical law, even to this day.

After this, B. C. 129, Hyrcanus subdued the Idumeans, and gave them the choice, either to embrace the Jewish religion, or else to quit the country, and seek a settlement elsewhere. Choosing, therefore, to relinquish their idolatry rather than their country, they became proselytes to the Jewish religion, and were thenceforth incorporated with the Jews, so as to be reputed one and the same people; and at length the name itself was lost, or absorbed in that of the Jews.

About B. C. 128, Hyrcanus sent an embassy to Rome, to renew the league made with the Romans by his father Simon; to which the senate readily consented, and decreed that the peace which they had been compelled to make with Antiochus Sidetes should be null and void; that Hyrcanus should hold Gazara, Joppa, and the other places, free of tribute or homage to the Syrians; and that the Syrian kings in future should not presume to march their armies through the Jewish territories; also that ambassadours should be sent to see all this executed. The Jewish ambassadours were also furnished with money to bear their expenses home, and letters were written to all the Roman allies and confederates in their way, to give them a safe and honourable passage through their respective countries. In return for this, the Jews sent another embassy to Rome next year, with a present of a cup and shield of gold, valued at fifty thousand gold pieces of their money, when another decree was passed by the senate confirming the former.

Demetrius, after his restoration, having by his tyranny rendered himself odious to the Syrians, many of them revolted from him, and joined an impostor, supported by Physcon, king of Egypt, as the son of Alexander Balas, who called himself Alexander Zebina, but was in reality the son of a broker at Alexandria. A battle was fought, in which Demetrius was defeated, and soon after slain, B. C. 126. To secure his conquest, Zebina made a strict alliance with John Hyrcanus, who took all the advantages of these divisions that might justly be expected from a wise prince, attentive to the interests of his people, and his own security.

During the divisions and distractions that thenceforth harassed and weakened the Syrian empire, John Hyrcanus increased in wealth and power; and about the year B. C. 110, undertook the entire reduction of Samaria, and sent his two sons, Aristobulus and Antigonus, to besiege the city, who took it next year, and totally demolished it. After this victory, Hyrcanus became master of all Judea, Galilee, and Samaria, and of several other places in the adjacent countries; thus he raised the glory of the Asmonean princes to its height, and spent the remainder of his reign respected by his neighbours, and free from foreign wars.

In the latter end of his reign, he discovered the symptoms of disaffection in the Pharisees, a proud and turbulent sect among the Jews, who boasted of superiour sanctity, and derived their name from the Hebrew verb parash, to "separate or set apart" for sacred uses; and envied the prosperity of Hyrcanus. Upon which he quitted their sect, and attached himself to that of the Sadducees: who probably, at that time, went no further than to deny the authority of the oral or unwritten traditions, of which the Pharisees were too fond, and for which they were afterwards reproached by our Lord Himself, as rendering the law of no effect by their vain traditions, Matt. xv. 6. For it is not to be imagined, that so pious and good a prince could have denied the resurrection and a future judgment. To the Pharisees, who courted popularity, may justly be ascribed the declension, and at length, the downfall of the state, by their continual opposition to their own princes, and afterwards to the Romans.

After he had reigned thirty years, Hyrcanus died, and Aristobulus, his eldest son, succeeded him. He first assumed the ominous title of king, which by their law was appropriated to the Messiah; for whose rights a reservation was made by the people, as we have seen, when they elected Simon their ethnarch or prince, 1 Macc. xiv. 41. He next imprisoned his mother, whom Hyrcanus had left in possession of the government, and starved her to death; and then killed his next brother Antigonus, who reigned jointly with him, upon a false suspicion of seeking his death. Finding his errour, he fell sick and died, after a reign of only one year.

Alexander Jannæus was the third son of Hyrcanus, and succeeded his brother, B. C. 105. His first act was an attempt to recover the important seaport of Ptolemais, which he besieged. But the inhabitants having applied for succour to Ptolemy Lathyrus, then reigning in Cyprus, who came to their assistance with a great army, he was forced to raise the siege; and Alexander having endeavoured to circumvent Ptolemy in a treaty of peace, while he was underhand treating with Cleopatra, queen of Egypt, his mother and his rival, Ptolemy, provoked at this duplicity of conduct, invaded the territories of Alexander, defeated him in a pitched battle, in which he lost thirty thousand men, overran the whole country, ravaging and destroying it in a grievous manner; and Alexander must have been undone, had not Cleopatra brought an army to his relief next year; which compelled Ptolemy to retreat from his territories, and at length Ptolemy, being successfully opposed by his mother, returned to Cyprus B. C. 101, foiled in all his attempts to recover the crown of Egypt out of her wicked and ambitious hands.

Alexander availed himself of this riddance, to recover several of the fortresses on his frontiers, which had been taken from him, or had revolted. But at the siege of Amathus, near Jordan, the strongest fortress in all those parts, he was surprised and defeated, with the loss of ten thousand men, by the prince of Philadelphia, whose treasures were deposited there, and sent back with loss and disgrace to Jerusalem. This was highly gratifying to the faction of the Pharisees, who alienated the affections of the people, and stirred up a bloody intestine war against him during the greater part of his turbulent reign.

This first broke out B. C. 95, in the eleventh year of his reign. Having entered the temple at Jerusalem, to officiate as high priest in the feast of tabernacles, he was insulted by the populace, and pelted with citrons while he was offering sacrifices upon the great altar; to which they added opprobrious language, intimating him to be unworthy of that sacred office. This so enraged him, that he fell upon them with his guards, and slew six thousand of them. And to prevent the like insult, he enclosed the priest's court, which contained the altar and sanctuary, with a wooden partition, excluding the approach of the people; and for the safety of his person, he employed a guard of six thousand foreign mercenaries, and endeavoured by severity, and the terrour of his executions, to allay the storm that had been raised against him by the adverse faction; but he could not quell it by such methods. And three years after, in consequence of a great defeat he received from Obodas, an Arabian king, in Gaulonitis, on the eastern side of the lake of Gennesareth, the Jews broke out into open rebellion for six years, in which, though he repeatedly defeated them, he could not subdue their refractory spirit. Wearied at length with punishing and destroying his people, he sought an accommodation, and offered to grant them any reasonable conditions they chose. With one voice they desired him to cut his throat, for they could be at peace with him on no other terms; and told him that, considering the great mischiefs he had done them, it were well that they could be reconciled to him even in his grave. They then sent for succours to Demetrius Eucherus, king of Damascus, who brought a powerful army to their assistance, and overthrew Alexander, with the loss of all his Greek mercenaries to a man, B. C. 89; and he would have been utterly ruined, had not six thousand of the Jews themselves, compassionating his distress, revolted from the Syrians, and joined him. Being a man of most undaunted spirit, and possessing great resources in himself, he continued the war with his own people after the departure of the Syrians, and at length he defeated them with great slaughter, and shut up the remainder in Bethome, which he besieged and took the year after, B. C. 86. On this occasion he was guilty of a most barbarous act of cruelty, which got him the appellation of Thracidas, or the "Thracian." He brought eight hundred of the prisoners to Jerusalem, and there crucified them all in one order, and put their wives and children to death before their faces, so they hung dying on the crosses; while he, his wives and concubines, were feasting in view of the horrid scene, to glut their eyes with the spectacle! After this, Alexander had no more disturbance; the rebels who survived flying the country: after he had destroyed above fifty thousand of them in the course of the war.

After this, he spent three years in recovering fortresses, which had revolted during the civil war, and extended his conquests beyond Jordan. He returned to Jerusalem victorious B. C. 82, and gave himself up to luxury and drunkenness: this brought on a quartan ague, under which he languished for three years, and at length died at the siege of Ragaba, beyond Jordan, in the country of the Gerasenes.

In his last moments he advised Alexandra his queen to conceal his death until the capture of the fortress, and then, on their triumphant return to Jerusalem, he recommended her to convene the heads of the Pharisees, and offer to be guided by their counsels in the administration of the kingdom; and to lay his dead body before them, and resign it wholly to their discretion, whether to treat it with ignominy, in revenge for all the evils they had suffered from him, or otherwise; adding, that if she followed this advice, she would not only procure him an honourable funeral, but security for herself and her children. And the event justified the prediction for his funeral obsequies were more splendid than those of any of his predecessors; and Alexandra, according to his will, was quietly established in the government, B. C. 78.

And now the Pharisees, having gotten the upper hand in the state, released the prisoners, and recalled the exiles of their party, and being strengthened by this accession, they demanded justice against the advisers of the crucifixion of the eight hundred; which in fact involved all the adherents of the late king. They began with Diogenes, a chief confident of Alexander, and having cut him off, proceeded to the most obnoxious of the royalists; the queen, much against her will, acquiescing in their vindictive measures, for fear of involving the country again in a civil war; and submitting to a less evil, in order to avoid a greater.

Alexandra had two sons: the elder, Hyrcanus, who was of a quiet, indolent temper, she appointed high priest; but the younger, Aristobulus, inherited his father's spirit, and highly disapproved of his mother's proceedings. In the seventh year of her reign, B. C. 72, he came to her at the head of the royalists, seeing no end of the prosecution, and proposed, either that they should go into voluntary exile; or else, that they might be dispersed through the several garrisons of the kingdom, in order to avoid the fury of their enemies. The queen agreed to the latter proposal, and put them in possession of the fortresses, except Hyrcania, Alexandrium, and Machæra, where she kept her treasures.

Next year she sent Aristobulus with an army to attack Ptolemy Mennæus at Damascus; but he returned without doing any thing memorable in the expedition; only making use of this opportunity to secure the army to his interest.

The following year, B. C. 70, she was threatened with a formidable invasion by Tigranes, king of Armenia; to whom the Syrians, harassed by the perpetual competitions of the different royal families for the crown, had voluntarily surrendered it, B. C. 84, and put themselves under his protection. From this danger she was relieved by the Roman invasion of Armenia, which took place shortly before her death next year, B. C. 69.

After her death Hyrcanus the Second took possession of the throne, B. C. 69: but he reigned ony three months; being forced to surrender the crown and pontificate to his brother Aristobulus, under whose protection he willingly agreed to lead a private life.

But Antipater, the father of Herod the Great, an Idumean, who had been appointed by Alexander Janneus and his wife Alexandra governour of that entire province, instigated Hyrcanus to fly for refuge to Aretas, king of the Arabs, under the pretence that his brother meant to put him to death. By this prince Hyrcanus was brought back to Jerusalem with an army of fifty thousand men; where, being joined by the Jews of his own party, he compelled Aristobulus to take refuge in the temple mount, and besieged him there.

During their competition for power, the two brothers attempted to gain to their side the Roman generals, who commanded in Syria; first, Scaurus, who had been sent thither by Pompey, and afterwards Pompey himself: who, having decided in favour of Hyrcanus, and having gotten possession of the person of Aristobulus, marched with his whole army to Jerusalem; and being admitted into the city and palace by the faction of Hyrcanus, besieged the adherents of his brother in the temple mount; and, after three months' siege, took it by assault, B. C. 63.

On this occasion Pompey was guilty of violating the sanctity of the temple. For, not content with viewing the outer court, he, with his principal officers, by a sacrilegious curiosity, entered into the inner sanctuary, or Holy of Holies. And here, it has been remarked, his prosperity ended. He was ever after unsuccessful in all his undertakings, as if to punish him for this act of sacrilege against the Lord. And this the Jews resented more than their sufferings. However, he spared the sacred treasury, in which there were above two thousand talents, besides the sacred utensils, and other articles of great value, and left them for the sacred uses to which they had been devoted. The next day he restored Hyrcanus to the pontificate, and made him prince of the country, and tributary to the Romans, but forbad him to wear a crown; and dismantled the walls of Jerusalem. And he took with him Aristobulus, and his two sons, Alexander and Antigonus, and two of his daughters, to grace his triumph at Rome.

The reign of Hyrcanus, however, was disastrous throughout.

While Pompey was returning to Rome, Alexander, the elder son of Aristobulus, escaped on the way; and, returning to Judea, created fresh disturbances: but was suppressed B. C. 57, by Mark Antony, who had been sent to the relief of Hyrcanus, by Gabinius, president of Syria.

To please the Jews, Gabinius at this time made a change in the government of Judea, from regal to aristocratical. Hitherto the administration of publick affairs had been managed under the prince, by the two Sanhedrims, or councils, or courts of justice; the lesser, consisting of twenty-three persons, was instituted in every city; each of these lesser was subject to the jurisdiction and control of the great Sanhedrim of seventy-two members, sitting at Jerusalem. Gabinius suppressed both, and in their room appointed five independent tribunals at Jerusalem, Jericho, Gadara, Amathus, and Sephoris; and invested each with power to administer summary justice to all the inhabitants within their respective districts. This threw the whole power into the hands of the nobles of the land, who presided in these courts, leaving to Hyrcanus only the name of prince.

But ten years after, Julius Cesar, on his passing through Syria, after the Alexandrian war, in gratitude for the effectual assistance he had received from Antipater, the general of Hyrcanus, reinstated Hyrcanus in the principality, restored the antient form of government, and appointed Antipater procurator of Syria and Judea.

Gabinius was succeeded in the government of Syria by Crassus, B. C. 54; who, to make preparations for the Parthian war, plundered the temple at Jerusalem of all the treasures which Pompey had respected, and carried off to the amount of about two millions sterling. But this sacrilegious plunder proved the prelude to his ruin. For the following year he was defeated by the Parthians with great slaughter; and himself and his son killed.

Aristobulus, having escaped from Rome with his younger son Antigonus, excited fresh disturbances in Judea, but was defeated; and at length poisoned by Pompey's party, B. C. 49. And Alexander his son, having raised forces to assist him, was taken and put to death by orders of Pompey.

Two years after Antigonus, the surviving son, applied to Julius Cesar to be restored to his father's principality; but Cesar from regard to Antipater, rejected his petition, B. C. 47.

Antipater had now great credit with the Romans, and influence at home, and in fact governed Hyrcanus; he appointed Phasaelus, his eldest son, to be governour of Jerusalem; and Herod, his second, governour of Galilee; and took a progress with Hyrcanus through Judea, to settle the affairs of the kingdom.

Herod having exerted himself with great spirit and activity in clearing his province of robbers, or banditti, and put Hezekiah their leader, and several of his associates, to death, by his own authority, without any formal trial, excited the envy and jealousy of several of the leading Jews; who forced Hyrcanus to summon him to appear before the Sanhedrim to answer for his conduct. Herod attended the summons, and came clothed in purple, and with a numerous retinue, and brought a letter from Sextus Cesar, then president of Syria, to Hyrcanus, with express orders to acquit him, under pain of incurring his highest displeasure, which Hyrcanus was sufficiently inclined to do without this mandate. All this, however, so intimidated his accusers and the Sanhedrim, that they all sat silent; until Sameas, a man of great wisdom and integrity, had at length the courage to arraign him, not only for the crime imputed to him, but also for his arrogance and presumption in daring to appear before them, not as a criminal, but as their superiour. And he predicted, that this Herod, whom they now iniquitously spared, would execute the just judgment of God upon them all, which afterwards came to pass; for Herod afterwards put Hyrcanus and the whole Sanhedrim to death, except Pollio and Sameas, whom he spared for recommending the surrender of the city to Herod and Sosius; because "the crimes of the people were such that they could not escape him."

On this occasion, however, Hyrcanus, seeing the Sanhedrim provoked against Herod, adjourned the court till next day, and advised him to fly from the city that night, which he did, to Damascus; and was with difficulty dissuaded by his father and brother from marching with an army to Jerusalem, to avenge the insult he had received, in being summoned to clear himself before the Sanhedrim.

After Julius Cesar's return from the African war, Hyrcanus sent an embassy to him, for permission to repair the walls and fortifications of Jerusalem. Cesar not only granted this request, which Antipater immediately executed; but by a decree, confirmed Hyrcanus in his prerogatives of high priest and ethnarch; and remitted the annual tribute to be paid to the Romans every seventh or sabbatical year; and granted such further privileges and immunities to the Jews, throughout the empire, that they could hardly be said to feel the weight of the Roman yoke.

But this happy state was of short continuance. After the death of Cesar, Cassius seized the province of Syria, on which he levied heavy contributions. He assessed Judea in seven hundred talents, of which Antipater commissioned his two sons, Phasaelus and Herod, to raise one half; and Malichus, a Jew, one of the principal supporters of Hyrcanus, the remainder: who would have been put to death by Cassius for his dilatoriness, had not Hyrcanus redeemed him with a hundred talents out of his own coffers.

Malichus, and the heads of the Jewish nation, jealous that an Idumean should govern the state, soon after caused Antipater to be poisoned: but he was in turn assassinated by a party of the Roman garrison at Tyre, at Herod's instigation.

B. C. 42, fresh troubles broke out in Judea, between the faction of Malichus, who had gained Hyrcanus and the Roman commander Felix to their side, and the two sons of Antipater. To reconcile these differences, a marriage was set on foot between Herod, and Miriam or Mariamne, the beautiful and accomplished grandaughter of the high priest.

But the adverse faction soon found another head in Antigonus, the younger son of Aristobulus; and under pretence of restoring him to his father's throne, raised new disturbances in the state. The next year, B. C. 41, when Antony was at Daphne, near Antioch, a deputation of a hundred of the principal Jews came to complain against the sons of Antipater. Antony gave them a hearing, and asked Hyrcanus, then present, whom he thought the fittest to conduct the administration of affairs under them? To which he replied, the two brothers; induced probably by the contract of marriage between Herod and his grandaughter. Whereupon Antony, who was well disposed towards them before, made them both tetrarchs, committed the affairs of Judea to their administration, imprisoned fifteen of the deputies, and would have put them to death, had not Herod saved them by his intercession. Still not baffled, they renewed their complaints to him against the two brothers at Tyre, in a body of a thousand deputies. But Antony, considering this as an insult, and a tumult, ordered his soldiers to disperse them, who slew several, and wounded more.

But Herod soon had to encounter a more dangerous storm. B. C. 40, the Parthian general Pacorus was induced to undertake the restoration of Antigonus to his father's kingdom. Being unable to prevail by force, he had recourse to fraud; and, too cherously seized Phasaelus and Hyrcanus: but Herod, having timely intelligence, fled to Massada, the strongest fortress in the country. Hereupon the Parthians, having plundered the country, made Antigonus king, and delivered up to him Hyrcanus and Phasaelus. The latter, knowing that his death was determined on, dashed out his brains against the walls of his prison. Antigonus spared his aged uncle's life, but barbarously cut off his ears, to incapacitate him from being any longer high priest, and then sent him into exile to Seleucia in Babylonia.

In this emergency Herod sailed to Italy, to implore the assistance of Antony and the Romans, to place Aristobulus, the brother of his espoused Mariamne, on the throne of Judea. This youth was the son of Alexandra, the daughter of Hyrcanus, by Alexander, the eldest son of Aristobulus, so that he united the titles of both brothers to the crown: supposing nothing further for himself, than to govern the country under Aristobulus, in the same manner as under Hyrcanus. But Antony chose to make Herod himself king, in reward of his past services, and for the promise of a great sum of money; and by his interest with Octavian, procured from the senate, contrary to their usual policy, a decree to that effect, in the course of that same year, B. C. 40. Herod made such despatch, that he returned to Judea before the end of the year, and raising forces of every kind, foreigners as well as Jews, relieved his friends at Massada, who had been closely besieged all the while by Antigonus.

Next year, B. C. 39, Herod carried on the war against Antigonus with various success; but towards the end of it obtained a signal victory over him. The following year, B. C. 38, he besieged Jerusalem: and during the siege consummated his marriage with Mariamne, hoping that this affinity with the Asmonean family would conciliate the people to his government. Returning to the siege, he took the city by storm in the year B. C. 37, with the assistance of a Roman army, which plundered the city, and massacred the inhabitants without mercy. Antigonus, having surrendered himself, was sent in chains to Antony at Antioch; who, not long after, was prevailed upon, by the solicitations of Herod, and a large sum of money, to execute him, like a common malefactor, by the rods and axe of the lictor; intending, by this ignominious death, to which the Romans never before had subjected any crowned head, to lessen the attachment of the Jews to the Asmonean family; who, during his lifetime, could not, in general, be prevailed on to acknowledge Herod as king, by any tortures.

Such was the end of the Asmonean dynasty, after it had subsisted one hundred and twenty-six years. "A noble and illustrious house," says Josephus, "distinguished by their descent, the dignity of the pontificate, and by the great exploits of their ancestors for the nation."

To secure himself on the throne, Herod the Great began his reign by cutting off the heads of the Asmonean party; and among them, all the members of the Sanhedrim, except two; who alone had recommended the surrender of the city to Herod. In the room of Antigonus, he appointed Ananelus, an obscure priest of the pontifical family, residing among the Jews of Babylonia, to be high priest, B. C. 36. But next year, on the solicitation of Mariamne and her mother Alexandra, who complained to Cleopatra queen of Egypt, and began to engage Antony to interfere, he deposed Ananelus, and appointed Aristobulus, the brother of Mariamne, the rightful successor to the pontificate, then a youth of only seventeen years.

Alexander soon this endeavoured to procure the crown also for her son; but being detected by Herod, was confined to the palace. Shortly formed a plot for escaping to Egypt with her son; but Herod seized them both on the road, and out of an affected modesty, pardoned both, because he dared not punish either; determined, however, to rid himself of such a dangerous competitor, whenever a convenient opportunity should offer. And the attachment of the multitude was soon publickly shown to the young prince; for at the ensuing feast of tabernacles he discharged the functions of the high priest with so much grace and dignity, and the beauty of his person was so set off by the splendour of the pontifical robes, that he charmed the whole assembly, and every tongue was loud in his praises. This raised the tyrant's jealousy to such a pitch, that he could not brook any further delay, but immediately after the festival was over took him down to his entertainment at Jericho; and after dinner, several of Herod's confederates bathing in a pond, he was persuaded to bathe also, and was drowned, and held by them so long under water, that he was destroyed. Herod expressed the greatest grief at this unfortunate accident, as he affected to consider it, and lamented his untimely fate with great pomp. But every one saw through his hypocrisy, as he was much more closely than Alexandra, who was inconsolable for the loss of her son, but for the desire of vengeance. Accordingly she acquainted Cleopatra with the treacherous murder of her son, and engaged her so effectually in her interest, that she never ceased importuning Antony to pull Herod to his account. Antony therefore cited Herod to appear before him in Syria, next year, B. C. 34. But Herod, by his wonted large presents, so mollified Antony, that nothing was done at this meeting.

This, however, gave rise to another tragedy in Herod's family. For when Herod was summoned to appear before Antony, apprehensive of the event, he left directions with his uncle Joseph, who had married his sister Salome, to put Mariamne, his beloved wife, to death, if he should be condemned; fearing lest Antony, who admired her even upon the fame of her beauty, might take her to himself, after his death. But Joseph imprudently revealed the secret to Mariamne, which exceedingly offended her and her mother Alexandra; and the latter plotted to fly for protection to a Roman legion, stationed near the city. Upon Herod's return, his sister Salome, the firebrand of her family, disclosed to him all that had happened, and malignantly accused her own husband Joseph, of too great familiarity with Mariamne, ready to sacrifice him to her hatred of the latter; who being a woman of high birth, and still higher spirit, looked down on Salome as her inferiour, and treated her with contempt: an offence not to be forgiven by a haughty and revengeful woman. Herod, though struck with jealousy, restrained himself through love to Mariamne, and questioned her in private about the charge. But she vindicated herself so fully, with all the persuasives of conscious innocence, that the king was satisfied, and asked her pardon for listening to such injurious reports; and ordering her to his levee, passed her to return it; but she presented it returned, that her conduct did not correspond with his professions, for that "if he loved her, how could he order her to be put to death, though innocent in case Antony should determine against him?" This imprudent declaration rekindled his jealousy, and convinced him that the charge was true; he flung from his arms, ordered Joseph to be put to death, without admitting him into his presence, and though his love at this time restrained his rage against Mariamne, he put her mother Alexandra into custody, as the cause of all these mischiefs.

In the year B. C. 32, Herod was commissioned by Antony, before Cleopatra, to invade Malchus, king of Arabia, who withheld from her the tribute which he had paid for some territory adjoining Egypt. But being treacherously defeated by Herod as general, he was overthrown with great slaughter, and hardly escaped himself with the remnant of his army. But the following year, having defeated the Arabians in several engagements, he compelled them to sue for peace; which he granted on his own terms, and returned in triumph to Jerusalem, having reduced the Arabians under his dominions.

After the battle of Actium, B. C. 31, Herod in vain attempted to support the cause of Antony; he thought it time therefore to look to himself, and to make his peace with Augustus on the best terms he could. Apprehensive however that he might be deposed, and Hyrcanus restored to his throne, he pretended that the poor old prince had held a treasonable correspondence with Malchus, king of Arabia, and caused him to be beheaded, after he had passed his eightieth year.

Of all the atrocious cruelties of Herod, this was marked with the highest perfidy, ingratitude, and breach of hospitality. Hyrcanus had lived in exile, for some time, at Sidonia, where he was treated with the highest respect by the king of Parthia, and honoured as their king by the Jews of Babylonia, and of the Parthian empire, who composed a body altogether more numerous and wealthy than those of Judea, and supplied him with a maintenance suitable to his rank and dignity. But on hearing of the death of Antigonus, and advancement of Herod to the throne of Judea, his love of his country prompted him to return home, and put himself under the protection of Herod, who owed to him the rise of all his fortunes, his affinity with the royal family, and even his life, when arraigned before the Sanhedrim. Herod also was anxious for his coming, in order to have him in his power, that he might, by his death, prevent his restoration to the throne, in case of a reverse of fortune. He therefore not only importuned Hyrcanus to come, but sent an embassy to Phrastes, king of Parthia, to solicit his permission. Contrary, therefore, to the advice of all his friends, Hyrcanus returned to Jerusalem, in the second year of Herod's reign; who treated him with all seeming respect; until his wicked policy tempted him to cut off his king and his benefactor, six years after.

Herod's next care, before he went to make his peace with Augustus, was to secure his own family and treasures, in case he should be unsuccessful. His mother, sister, wives, and children he placed in the strong fortress of Massada, under the care of his brother Pherorus. But Mariamne and her mother Alexandra he left in Alexandrium, under the care of Soheinus, a trusty Idumean, with orders to put them to death, if Augustus should treat him harshly, and then endeavour to secure the crown for his children.

Augustus however gave him a most favourable reception: and not only restored him his diadem, which on entering he had laid aside, but afterwards enlarged his dominions, and always treated him with more distinction and regard than any of the tributary kings of the Roman empire.

Herod however was most unhappy at home. The affections of Mariamne were still further alienated from him by the discovery of his last directions to Soheinus. She received him on his return home with sadness and coldness; and thus raised his displeasure, which she failed not to aggravate by her reserve and haughtiness. Whilst he was fluctuating between love and resentment for a year, she brought matters to a crisis, by refusing one day his proffered love, and upbraiding him with the murder of her father, (or grandfather, Hyrcanus,) and of her brother Aristobulus; and spurred on by the false accusations of Salome, he put her confidential chamberlain to the torture, who declared that her hatred towards him proceeded from what Soheinus had told her. This instantly excited his jealousy of Soheinus, who he concluded must have been too intimate with her, for that otherwise he would not have betrayed the secret. He ordered him to be immediately seized, and put to death: he also caused Mariamne to be tried, and condemned, by intimidated judges; and at the instigation of his sister Salome, fearing he might relent, executed immediately, under the alarming suggestion, that if her life was spared, it might excite a publick commotion.

While she was leading to execution, her unworthy mother Alexandra, fearing to be involved in her doom, met her on the way; reproached her with ingratitude to her husband, and that she was justly punished; and even dared to pull her by the hair. But Mariamne, without uttering a word, bore it with mixed composure, ashamed of her mother's baseness; and out changing colour, submitted to death, retaining her noblenes of mind even to the last.

Alexandra did not long escape; for when Herod fell sick next year, B. C. 28, oppressed with the most poignant grief and remorse for the injured Mariamne's death; she laid a plot for seizing the government, but it was disclosed to Herod by the officers whose fidelity she endeavoured to corrupt, and he instantly ordered her to be put to death.

Herod was still harassed with domestick troubles. His turbulent sister Salome, having fallen out with her second husband, Costobarus the Idumean, B. C. 25, accused him to Herod of plotting with several of the Asmonean party. Herod put them all to death; but he was nevertheless disturbed with tumults and conspiracies during the remainder of his reign.

To secure himself the better, he built several strong cities and fortresses in the land. He also built a strong and magnificent palace for himself on mount Sion. But his greatest and noblest work was the rebuilding of the temple, which had gone greatly out of repair by length of time, and had also been materially injured by the civil wars.

The year after the foundation was laid, Herod went to Rome to visit Augustus, and to see his two sons by Mariamne, Alexander and Aristobulus, who had been educated there for three years past, under the immediate inspection of the emperour himself, who had them lodged in the royal palace. He was received with great honour and kindness by Augustus, and took back his sons, whose education was now complete, to Judea; and soon after married the elder to Glaphyra, the daughter of Archelaus, king of Cappadocia, and the younger to Berenice, the daughter of Salome, his sister. But the wicked Salome, notwithstanding her closer affinity, envied the young princes their merited popularity, fearing also that she might suffer for having advised their mother Mariamne's death; and she never ceased to calumniate them both to Herod, until at length his jealousy got the better of his paternal affection. For she was so base, as to alienate her own daughter's affections from her husband, to betray his confidential communications, to [illegible] cruelty and ill treatment, which [illegible] to Herod.
